Full Pay April 1 Passed in Senate; Put Up to House

White House Sanction of Compromise Bill Seen Likely.

Speed Is Promised In Lower Branch

Byrnes Leads in Change; Measure Approved Without Dissent.

Administration acceptance of thee compromise Government pay restoration amendment adopted yesterday by the Senate was forecast as the House prepared to vote on the question of whether the last 5 per cent economy act slash will be eliminated April 1 or July 1.

Sponsorship of the April 1 compromise by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, gave immediate rise to the report that President Roosevelt is willing to accept the amendment to his July 1 restoration suggestion, and that consequently the House will concur.

Senator Byrnes, who is the Administration spokesman on the Senate Appropriations Committee, in answer to a question of whether his amendment had the President's support, said, "I hope so."

The Senate vote came suddenly at the day's conclusion of further debate on the World Court. Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, offered the original amendment to an urgent supplemental appropriations bill, fixing the restoration date as January 1.

Swift Action Promised.

He subsequently accepted the compromise date of April 1 after Senator Byrnes cited some of the difficulties of a retroactive pay bill.

Just how soon the House will vote on the amendment was indefinite last night, as the amended measure had not returned from the Senate. Chairman Buchanan, who piloted the bill through the House without amendment, said no time will be lost, however.

Buchanan insisted that the appropriations sub-committee could not accept the Senate pay amendment because it constituted a legislative rider on an appropriations bill. He said the House would have to vote directly on the issue, probably after conferees agree on all other amendments.

The entire measure will be sent to conference as soon as it arrives from the Senate, Buchanan predicted, after which it will be returned to the House with or without recommendation as to the pay amendment.

$5,000,000 Is Pension Estimate.

Restoration of all governmental salaries to a pre-depression basis on April 1 will cost approximately $16,000,000. An additional $5,000,000 will have to be appropriated to restore pensions to the same scale.

While the Senate amendment left the amount at "as much as will be necessary," Capitol Hill statisticians recalled that President Roosevelt in his budget message estimated that elimination of the last 5 per cent pay cut would cost $65,000,000 for the fiscal year 1936, while the pension restoration would cost $20,000,000.

On this basis it was estimated that repeal of the pay cut three months

PRIME MINISTER MacDONALD.

Gallery Riots During Attack On M'Donald

Prime Minister Called a Cur,' 'Double-Crosser' in Clash on Dole.

London, Jan. 28 (AP).—Disorders broke out tonight in Britain's staid House of Commons following a violent verbal attack on Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald over the new nationalized dole system.

A score of men and women spectators in the public gallery, aroused by shouts of "Down with the unemployment act!" had to be ejected with violence, producing such a clamor that members on the floor could not hear each other for 20 minutes.

With the greatest difficulty the gallery was cleared of men and women who joined in the melee. No one was reported injured.

Laborite George Buchanan, a Scotsman from Glasgow, called Prime Minister MacDonald a "swine" and a "mountebank" during acrid debate on the new dole board setup, shouting that the premier "is a low, dirty cur who ought to be flung out of public life and horsewhipped out of it."

Violent Reopening.

It was a violent reopening of Parliament, which reconvened only today after the holiday recess. It placed unexpected emphasis on the government's relief efforts, recently organized to take over administration of the dole system from local administrations—just the opposite of the announced Roosevelt program in the United States.

Buchanan verbally lashed MacDonald for not appearing in person for the debate on the dole.

"He is a coward!" he shouted. "He may get out of his position and sneak into power and privilege, he may die honored in the end possibly, but when he passes out he will be cursed deservedly by thousands, nay millions, of decent kindly souls who on a winter's night in my native land are suffering as nobody can tell."

Charges Are Denied.

Government supporters denied Buchanan's charges that the new dole set-up would reduce the amounts that unemployed persons would receive. When they said any hardships would be adjusted if they were found, Buchanan jumped up and declared:

"What—with a prime minister like that, a prime minister who would double-cross his own aunt?"

The reconvening of Parliament today with international and domestic political angles in the foreground promised stormy sessions to come.

Although not a parliamentary matter, the forthcoming conversations at the foreign office with France's premier, Pierre-Etienne Flandin, and iPerre Laval, foreign minister, are regarded with prime interest.

World Court Fight Close; Ballot Today

Both Sides in Senate Claim Victory as Vote Nears.

Borah Sees Defeat of Protocol; Robinson Pleads for Entry.

By Robert C. Albright.

By an extremely close vote, cutting across party lines, United States adherence to World Court protocols probably will be voted on rejected today in the Senate.

Informal polls by opposing factions indicated the margin either way will be a narrow one. Both sides last night confidently predicted victory, as the Administration headed for its first major Senate showdown of the session.

After brief debate on the issue yesterday, and decisive defeat of two reservations rejected by the Administration, Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson took the radio last night to hammer home last-minute arguments for adherence.

Both Sides Claim Gains.

Refraining from bombastic prophesies, Robinson earlier asserted the Administration had "picked up some votes" over the week-end, and a similar claim was made by anticourt forces. Interest in the ballot was at the highest pitch of the session, as radio and newspaper comment sent nearly 40,000 telegrams pouring into the Capitol from all over the country.

Relative strength of the court and its opponents appeared as follows:

Minority leaders were willing to concede that 10, and possibly 12, Senate Republicans will vote for the protocol. Majority leaders insisted there will be only about 15 defections on the Democratic side of the aisle. That on its face might indicate that the court would win, with no votes to spare.

Long Bloc Sees Victory.

But a few Democratic and Republican Senators joining with Senator Huey (Kingfish) Long, of Louisiana, conducted a poll of their own purporting to show that 21 Democrats will vote against the court. Should their count prove accurate, minority spokesmen said, the court definitely would be rejected.

A two-thirds vote in favor is necessary for adherence. If the Administration garners the 61 ballots it expects, it will have only one more than is needed.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, who, with Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), California, has been leading the fight against the bill, was among those forecasting defeat of the protocol by a two or three vote edge.

G. O. P. Vote Uncertain.

Uncertainty as to whether the Republican vote against adherence would be 10 or 12 was said to hinge on the votes of Senators Townsend, of Delaware, and Dickinson, of Iowa. It appeared last night that Townsend would vote for the court, but Dickinson's ballot was by no means so certain.

Louisiana's Kingfish, leaving his State in the throes of controversy over his "dictatorship" policies, persistently injected himself into yesterday's debate, but the reservation he sponsored, providing court membership should in no way affect this country's policies under the Monroe Doctrine, was defeated 46 to 35.

Thirteen Democrats voted with Long, who frequently tangled with Robinson and other court proponents, in debate leading up to the vote. It was Robinson's contention that the point already has been covered in the Vandenberg reservation, proclaiming that court adherence should not be construed as a departure from the traditional American policy of noninterference with Europe's affairs.

Long carried his war with the Standard Oil Co. in Louisiana to the floor of the Senate, insisting that concern was responsible for the Chaco hostilities between Paraguay and Bolivia. Failure of the two countries to accept World Court jurisdiction, he said, was evidence of its inadequacy.

Robinson jokingly suggested Long should support the court and refer to it his difficulties with Standard Oil.

A second amendment, sponsored by Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, was defeated 54 to 27.

Brown Seeks Police Names In Gang Link

Major to Ask Schulte Bare Evidence at Crime Inquiry.

Hazen Claims Force Is Inadequate; Gaming Racket Assailed.

Names of a police captain and other officers who "fraternize with underworld characters" will be asked of Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, when he resumes the witness stand before the House District Crime sub-committee at 10:30 today.

Charges that officers fraternize with underworld characters were made by Representative Schulte during a few minutes of sharp questioning of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, the first witness called by the committee when it began hearings in the House District Committee room yesterday.

"If we should show this to you what would you do? Would you demote them?" pursued Mr. Schulte.

Hazen Promises Action.

"I would send the men before the Police Trial Board," Commissioner Hazen replied.

"You will cooperate with this committee in every way then?"

"Yes, sir."

No efforts to ascertain the names of the accused officers was made by the Commissioner nor by Maj. Brown when he took the stand. It was after the hearings had been completed for the day that the police superintendent said he would ask Representative Schulte for names so that immediate action could be taken.

Approval of a proposal to legalize gambling in the National Capital, admission that murders have grown out of territorial fights among those in the gambling racket here, criticism and defense of the present system of appointment and promotion of police, complaint of laxity in the police activities against crime, and demands for more laws and more men featured the hour-and-a-half session.

Takes Up Legalized Gambling.

Legalized gambling was proposed by Representative Shulte.

"Do you know," he shot at Commissioner Hazen, "that of the 8,000 persons employed in the Navy Yard here about 3,500 gamble every day on the horses, the numbers, the Treasury balances? That there are runners for the gamblers in that yard every day? Don't you know that the same thing applies to practically every Government department?"

Commissioner Hazen agreed there was much gambling, but said it was difficult to get convictions because it was necessary for the police actually to place a bet with the runners. Runners are the persons who collect the thousands of large and small bets for the gambling chiefs.

"You are going to have gambling as long as we have human nature, no matter what law you have," Mr. Schulte said. "As long as we are going to have it, it certainly is unfair to let a crowd from New Jersey, Philadelphia, Chicago or other outside crowds come in here and run things.

Assails Present Conditions.

"As long as the local crowd ran the gambling here you had no trouble, no shootings. Now, I am informed, the Southeast section has been allotted to an individual, the Northwest section to another, and so on.

"They've threatened tavern proprietors in their efforts to muscle in and warned that if they didn't buy a certain brand of beer they would have their licenses revoked."

Commissioner Hazen said he

Bruno and Wilentz Near Blows As Grilling Wrings Admission Of Deceptions From Prisoner

Crowd Surges to See Hauptmann Grilled

Associated Press Wirephoto

Crowds are increasing daily about the Flemington courthouse, taxing efforts of police to control them. Everyone is anxious to see Bruno Hauptmann as he is questioned by fiery Prosecutor Wilentz.

Hauptmann and Lawyer Shout 'Liar' at Each Other.

False Testimony In N. Y. Revealed

Suspect Falls Into State's Trap on Handwriting Link With Crime.

Additional details and pictures of the Lindbergh trial—Pages 4 and 5.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Two men, crimson with rage, stood 3 feet apart today in a courtroom here and flung the word "Liar!" into each other's teeth.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann was making the supreme fight for his life.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz was trying to strap him into the electric chair.

Why they did not come to blows no one will ever know.

Maybe it was because Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, in the wisdom of his 70 years, leaned down from the bench and saw that prisoner and prosecutor had come to the point where nerves can be stretched no farther; where men leap at each other's throats. Hastily he called for a five-minute recess.

Long after the village of Flemington has relapsed into obscurity; when moss creeps across the stones and tablets that will mark this historic spot in American criminal annals, gray beards will sit in the sun and mumble the story of this day's events.

Bruno in Fighting Mood.

Here was Hauptmann, cut loose from the friendly advice of counsel and the encouragement of wife and friends, sent to the witness chair for cross-examination. Any and every word that fell from his lips could be picked up and thrown back at him.

Down in front of him was a sleek-haired little man rasping away at him with a weapon that is as old as the law itself. Attorney General Wilentz had decided to fall back on the ancient and time-tested trick of taking testimony a witness gave months ago and leading him into a morass of contradiction.

By midafternoon Wilentz had rasped and goaded Hauptmann to the point where the prison pallor had retreated from his cheeks and he was half out of the witness chair, snarling and screaming as only a man can when he knows that he is going to live or die by what he says and does.

Wilentz walked over to the wall and picked up a piece of wood. This board had scribbled on it some pencil marks—the telephone number and address of Dr. John F. Condon.

Condon himself had come down into this courtroom from his home in the Bronx and, in that rambling, garrulous way of his, called Bruno Richard Hauptmann, kidnaper, murderer, and the recipient of $50,000 blood money. But those grave charges failed to sting Hauptmann to the fury he was driven to this afternoon by an address and a telephone number.

"Now," said Wilentz, "didn't you testify in the Bronx when you were having your extradition hearing, that you wrote Dr. Condon's address and telephone number on this board?"

"I can't remember," Hauptmann said.

The words came out sullenly, so he must have seen what was coming.

"But, Mr. Defendant," said Wilentz, wheedling him, "you testified in the Bronx that you wrote these numbers?"

"I can't remember—they asked me so many questions."

"You've got a habit of writing down telephone numbers, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"And you said in the Bronx that the only reason you wrote down Dr. Condon's telephone number and address was because you were interested in the case, didn't you?"

"I can't remember."

"The real reason you wrote it

G. O P. Drafts Bill Limiting Works Funds

Appropriations Minority Girds for Showdown in Committee.

Limiting amendments, designed to batten a lid on the $4,880,000,000 works and relief fund asked by the President, and allocate money for specific projects, last night were being drafted by Republican Senators in anticipation of a showdown fight before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Proposed limitations began to take form after the committee ordered full hearings on the measure, blocking a minority effort to make them public.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the committee, presided at a lively session, and afterward announced that Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, Treasury procurement chief, and Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell would be called to testify today.

Glass Opposed to Bill.

Glass was revealed as one of several Democrats who raised their voices against the bill as now drafted at yesterday's executive committee session. Witnesses to be heard today not only had much to do with drafting the works measure, it was said, but at least one of the two—Peoples—will have much to do with its administration.

Senator James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, outstanding critic of the bill's authorship, but not a member of the Appropriations Committee, last night disclosed he will ask permission to question them. Minority members are pre-

President to Ask Enlarged I.C.C. To Rule All U.S. Transportation

Aviation Message Thursday Will Begin Drive for Federal Control of Carriers on Land, Water and in the Air.

Beginning Thursday with a special message on aviation, President Roosevelt will transmit to Congress a series of legislative proposals which would sweep all forms of transportation under the jurisdiction of a reorganized Interstate Commerce Commission.

This became known yesterday after the President conferred with Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, and Clark Howell, sr., Atlanta publisher, who heads the Federal Aviation Commission.

Out of these conferences came word that Mr. Roosevelt plans four separate messages, dealing individually with aviation, waterways, highway transportation, and the railroads. In another quarter, however, it was said he may decide to combine all four subjects into one general message.

At all events, the recommendations now on the President's desk include the Federal regulation of civilian aviation, waterways, buses and trucks. This is the promised "new deal" for the railroads, which have long and bitterly complained against the lack of control their competitors have enjoyed.

Eastman Report Due.

Legislation expanding the duties of the I. C. C. was proposed, but abandoned last year. It has now been whipped into shape again and will come to light at noon tomorrow when Mr. Eastman makes public a voluminous report on transportation legislation.

The Eastman report deals with all types of transportation except aviation, which was left to the aviation commission. The report of this agency will be sent to the Capitol on Thursday with a covering message from the President.

Chairman Howell said after his conference that civilian aviation is now passing through such a critical period that Mr. Roosevelt will ask for "temporary provisions" to tide is over until such time as jurisdiction is transferred to the ICC.

These provisions include the setup of a temporary commission and recommendations regarding the air-

Oil Firm Plots His Death, Long Informs Senate

Louisiana Foes Recruit; Session to Oust State 'Enemies' Likely.

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 28 (AP).—With Senator Huey P. Long charging the Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana was plotting his death, leaders of an uprising against his Louisiana dictatorship were reported canvassing the country parishes for recruits tonight as National Guardsmen watched the tense situation in the State capital.

Ernest Bourgeois, head of the Square Deal Association seeking to break the Senator's grip on the State, still was missing, but his wife said she knew where he was. He vanished when his "army" surrendered to Long militiamen as a battle threatened Saturday.

He was reported to be seeking additions to his anti-Long force.

Senator Long was reported planning an early session of the State Legislature to carry out his plans to oust public officials hostile to his dictatorship.

Strength was lent to the report by a telephone call Senator Long made from Washington to Gov. O. K. Allen. It was considered possible a call for the special session might be issued by Gov. Allen within a few days.

Just before Long opened his "court inquiry" last Saturday into

Postoffice Inquiry Into Affairs Of Dr. Townsend Is Disclosed

Old-Age Pension Advocates Says He Has Given Probers All Records of His Organization and Told Them "to Go the Limit."

(Associated Press.)

The Postoffice Deparmtent was revealed yesterday to be investigating the affairs of Dr. F. E. Townsend and the organization he has formed to back his old-age pension plan.

Dr. Townsend, elderly California idealist who wants everyone over 60 to receive $200 a month from hte Government, made this known and added that postal inspectors had been given all the recrods and told "to go the limit."

At the Postoffice Department, Kildroy P. Aldrich, chief inspector, confirmed Townsend's statement that an inquiry was in progress, but said it was still incomplete and that no statement could yet be made on what it had revealed.

"I can't talk about it," he said. "I wouldn't say anything for or against Dr. Townsend, we're not in a position to say one way or the other."

The Townsend plan, which has received widespread support as attested by hundreds of letters urging its adoption upon members of Congress, has been described as "cock-eyed" and "fantastic" by such prominent Administration officials as Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, and Secretary Perkins.

Townsend said it was his impression that all such organizations as his were subjected to an inquiry aimed at seeing what use they were making of the mails. A full statement "of what we have been doing" was provided, he added, together with the latest audit and all records both here and in Los Angeles.

"They are taking our statements and checking up," he said. "If there were anything adverse, I think it undoubtedly would have come out by now."

The Townsend organization consists of a series of clubs scattered throughout the country, which support his plans by meetings, letters

$1,456,000 in Bonds Vanish, 65-Year-Old Messenger Held

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Dashing into headquarters of the Bank of Manhattan today, a 65-year-old messenger reported the disappearance of a wallet containing $1,456,000 in Government bonds.

He placed the wallet, police quoted him as saying, on a counter ledge in a little room o nthe twenty-fifth floor of the swyscraper at 48 Wall street and when he looked around the wallet had vanished.

The messenger, Morris Blossfield, of Jersey City, employed for 15 years by the Bank of Manhattan, and two guards with him were held for questioning.

All the bonds were fully covered by insurance. Acting Deputy Chief Inspector Francis J. Kear, in charge of Manhattan detectives, who with Department of Justice agents began an investigation, said the messenger told this story:

He left the Bank of Manhattan at 40 Wall street with bonds and securities valued at almost $2,300,000. With him went J. McCarthy, an armed guard.

The first stop, a few doors down the street, was at Devine & Co., where Blossfield was to leave $800,000 of the securities.

On the twenty-fifth floor, Blossfield turned over the $800,000 at a cashier's window. Then he told McCarthy to go back to the bank and tell Frank Stoney, chief runner, that the Devin consignment was $250,000 short.

Stoney sent the guard back, accompanied by another guard, with $250,000 additional securities to be given to Blossfield.

The bank said these additional securities were not lost.

Dollar Swings Upward Abroad

Takes Sudden Rise While Gold Clause Ruling Is Awaited.

London, Jan. 28 (AP).—While financial quarters awaited with deep interest the expected decision of the United States Supreme Court on the gold clause in bonds, the United States dollar took a sudden upward swing in European and foreign exchange markets today.

In London, the dollar gained 1 cent to the pound from Saturday, closing at 4.85⅝ to the pound. In Paris, the dollar gained 10½ centimes from Saturday, closing at 15.415 francs (6.487 cents to the franc), and in Berlin its value climed over the week-end from 2.515 marks (39.76 cents to the mark) to 2.54 marks (39.37 cents).

In the London market, the trade in the dollar went through some surprising fluctuations, at one time touching $4.82½ to the pound, its highest quotation since November, 1933.

Financial experts said they thought new legal actions in the Netherlands, Canada and possibly England might follow the Supreme Court decision in Washington.

The Amsterdam Stockbrokers Association is reported to be especially interested in the United States court's ruling, for its expects to appeal against a Netherlands court decision allowing the Royal Dutch Oil Co. to meet its service on dollar loans with depreciated dollars. The association, however, was said to be holding up its action pending the Supreme Court ruling.

'Politics' a Part Of Code Fights, Johnson Writes

Mellon Assisted in One of 'Great Battles' for NRA, He Says.

Philadelphia, Jan. 29 (AP).—In a "behind the scenes" account of the formative days of NRA codes, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson relates how he called on industrial and financial leaders and "went back to sources of financial control to bring pressure on heads of companies who were hanging back."

Continuing his story of the National Recovery Administration in a copyright series of articles in the Saturday Evening Post, the former NRA chief says "politics" played a part in early code negotiations with industrialists as well as labor leaders.

In his "great battles" to bring industry under the NRA flag, the bituminous coal code was a major NRA victory and "the perfect industrial set-up," Johnson writes, relating that in the "coal imbroglio" he once asked Andrew W. Mellon for help "with the heads of some of his reluctant companies," and that the former Treasury Secretary's aid was given "instantly and effectively."

Behind the Scenes.

"A good deal went on behind the scenes in these early encounters * * *" Johnson went on. "Many times in the steel, coal and petroleum arguments, either through such friends as Gerard Swope and Walter Teagle or directly, if I happened to know the right person, we went back to sources of financial control to bring pressure on heads of companies who were hanging back, and we almost always got it. To persuade the reluctant of the shipbuilding industry at one time I had to suggest that we would put the whole naval construction program into the navy yards, I didn't have any authority to say that, but it was necessary to say, and when I promptly reported it to the President, he laughed and backed it up instantly."

Of the lumber code, Johnson writes that "for the very reason that there was not sufficient controversy to develop the subject," it has never been "so satisfactory as others of the big six." The petroleum code, he says, presented the "greatest problem of all."

"As far as NRA was concerned," he added, "I felt that it was on trial for its life. Everything depended on success in these early major engagements. * * *

Necessity of Politics.

"Those who have relations with labor leaders and have some measure of understanding of their problems know that there is necessarily some politics there to play.

"Lack of experience with the true situation on my part, was, in part, why I selected Donald R. Richberg as counsel and left all labor appointments to the nomination of Mme. Secretary of Labor Perkins.

"I would do it a little differently if I had it to do over. Politics there may be, but with these outstanding leaders, I have found that all they ask is a square deal and that they dislike politics as much as anybody. In spite of some buffets I have given, I doubt if anybody in this Administration has any better friends in labor than I have among some of these men. * * *"

In those early days of NRA, Johnson writes, the Administration "had to succeed at the very jump-off."

Danger of Failure.

"If, by lack of agreement, we were thrown into a maze of injunctions, mandamuses and the law's delays" the article states, "the whole bright hope of abolishing all the ancient iniquities against labor—sweat shops, child labor, employer domination, unstable wages and unlimited hours—the whole possible benefit to industry would go glimmering. The whole administration of NIRA and, to an extent, of the President's program would be discredited.

"On the other hand, if we moved out to compel codes, all of industry would feel that every worth-while thing that has characterized our institutions had gone by the board in a dictatorship far worse than that in any European country, including Russia."

In Congress

YESTERDAY.

Senate.

Met at noon and adjourned at 3:30 p. m.

Voted to restore the remaining 5 per cent of the Government pay cut as of April 1.

Debated World Court adherence, and rejected two proposed reservations by decisive votes.

Appropriations committee voted to call Administration witnesses today on the President's $4,880,000,000 bill.

President William Green of American Federation of Labor testified before the Finance Committee on social security program.

House.

Met at noon and adjourned at 4:35 p. m.

Two resolutions for investigation of Postmaster General Farley's unperforated stamp gifts to friends were shelved.

William Green, American Federation of Labor president, demanded liberalization of the Administration's social security program at a Ways and Means Committee hearing.

Secretary Dern told the House Military Affairs Committee a Government monopoly of munition manufacture would be "suicidal."

An appropriations sub-committee considered additional departmental supply bills.

TODAY.

Senate.

Meets at noon.

Will debate World Court adherence, and probably vote on the protocol before adjournment.

Banking Committee will meet on Farm Credit Administration bill at 10:30 a. m.

Finance Committee will consider Treasury bill to broaden bond-issuing authority, at 10 a. m.

Appropriations Committee will hear Admiral Peoples, Treasury procurement chief, and Acting Budget Director Bell on President's $4,880,000,000 bill, at 10:30 a. m.

Interstate Commerce Committee will meet on nominations to Communications Commission at 10 a. m.

Agriculture Committee will meet at 10 a. m. on routine business.

House.

Meets at noon.

Probably will consider RFC extension, already approved by the Banking and Currency Committee.

Ways and Means, Military Affairs and Appropriations Committees will continue hearings.

Democrats will caucus tonight to consider charges that Republicans have received a major portion of New Deal patronage.

Between You and Me

The World Court Issue; Those Garrulous New Dealers; Japanese Autos.

By Raymond Clapper

By nightfall it may be decided whether the United States goes into the World Court or not. Administration leaders, highly confident two weeks ago, were so alarmed at the hostile drift that yesterday, instead of pressing for a vote at once, suddenly laid the court issue aside to allow time for additional cloakroom work on doubtful members. Best authorities estimate that the outcome lies within a margin of about six votes uncertain at the moment.

Radio speeches by Father Coughlin and others have resulted in flooding Capitol Hill with telegrams protesting adherence to the court protocol. Mrs. Roosevelt went on the air to counteract these attacks but it did little good. The issue lends itself so readily to appeals to jingoistic and provincial prejudices that advocates of the court have a hard time getting their arguments across. They know that the United States as a major power is competent to take its place in international organizations such as the World Court or that if it is not, it is time that it was learning how to conduct itself as an adult among other powers. However, even some of those who will vote for the court are jittery about being able to convince their constituents.

* * * *

When Huey Long offered a reservation to the World Court protocol which would have protected the Monroe Doctrine from interference, his support came from the Republicans. Most of the Democrats voted against him. One of his Democratic supporters, however, was Mrs. Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, in whose election Senator Long was instrumental.

* * * *

New Deal executives are setting new records in speech-making. Few of them go more than ten days without dashing away to deliver an address. They are booked so frequently that most of them are compelled to have assistants prepare their speeches. If they wrote their own they would have little time left for work at their desks.

Even the least articulate of them soon warm up and will speak on less provocation than a United States Senator. James M. Moffett, Federal housing director, is one of these. When he came to Washington after a career as a business executive, he couldn't be persuaded to make a speech. Now he is out of town probably half the time. At the moment he is on a speaking tour in California.

The New Dealers find it a pleasant tonic to leave Washington and become the center of admiring eyes and glowing tributes, and feel the tingle of applause in their ears. In Washington, the brickbats fly thick. Grief piles up on the desks. There are so many New Deal generals on the scene that one more or less makes little difference. If he is doing a good job, nobody pays any attention to him. He only gets the public eye when he runs into trouble or when a rumor starts that he is about to resign. Not much wonder that they like to go out and make speeches.

New competition is coming up over the horizon for the automobile industry. Japan is now in the game and is going after export trade in low-priced cars. The first Japanese-produced motor car is the Datsun, resembling somewhat the baby Austin. Mitsubishi, second only to Mitsui among Japanese industrial groups, is manufacturing 500 cars a month for sale in Australia, China and some South American markets. Invasion of the domestic American market is not regarded as imminent, however, as a Datsun delivered in this country would have to sell for at least $600.

A report is circulating that the Japanese also have produced a car driven by powerful springs instead of fuel. After being wound up at a central winding station the car would run 250 miles. Department of Commerce officials have received no information verifying this report and private Japanese representatives in the United States dispute its accuracy. Some time ago in Japan an attempt was made to adapt Ford automobiles to charcoal burning machinery.

Some 150 Brooklyn college students who have been studying the Constitution are in Washington observing how it operates in action. One Senator who met them yesterday observed that they had arrived just in time.

Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, who has been sharpening his knife to oppose the nomination of Frank R. McNinch as chairman of the Federal Power Commission, was called to the White House yesterday. No, Mr. Roosevelt didn't call him in to talk him out of fighting McNinch. He just wanted to thank the Senator for his recent speech indorsing the World Court. A few hours later the McNinch nomination came up in the Senate. Senator Bailey asked that it go over until tomorrow. He still expects to oppose confirmation, but apparently will limit his opposition to a statement just to keep the record straight.

They are old foes in North Carolina politics. McNinch was a Hoovercrat in 1928.

By way of reassuring those in Congress who object to Secretary Ickes having charge of allocating the proposed $4,880,000,000 works appropriation, Administration word has been passed around that President Roosevelt personally will take responsibility for distributing the money.

That will be reassuring to some and not to others who remember about Grand Coluee dam. That $63,000,000 power project in the middle of the desert has come to be widely regarded as one of the mistakes of the PWA program. When it was first suggested it was viewed askance by cold-eyed Secreary Ickes and other PWA officials who were skeptical of its economic justification. But C. C. Dill, then Senator from Washington, worked on President Roosevelt, who finally pushed it through in compromise form. He decided to build it high enough for a power dam. But there is no market for the power. Now a drive is on in Washington State for additional Federal money to increase the height of the dam so that it can be used to reclaim more than 1,000,000 acres of desert land and bring it into production.

Senator Frederick Hale, of Maine, was chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee before the Democrats came in, and he considers himself an authority on the Navy. Accordingly, he was quite positive in saying that he understood an Admiral Persons would take charge of the works relief projects.

"It's Admiral Peoples," Senator McNary, Republican leader, said.

"No, it is Admiral Persons," Hale retorted quite positively. McNary had to call witnesses to convince the ranking Republican naval expert that he didn't have the name, only a synonym.

Dern Opposes 'Nationalized' Trade in War

U. S. Seizure of Industry 'Suicidal,' Secretary Tells Inquiry.

(Associated Press.)

A warning that nationalization of industry—even the munitions industry—in time of war might prove "suicidal" was given the House Military Committee yesterday by Secretary Dern.

The Secretary of War said, moreover, that Government manufacture of all munitions in peace time "would probably remove any objectionable features that may have developed in connection with the munitions industry, but the result might at the same time be detrimental to national defense."

Munitions makers and their activities have been—and are—under investigation by a Senate committee. The munitions group was in recess yesterday. It planned to resume hearings today.

Naval Building Urged.

The House Naval Committee meanwhile heard Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, urge construction of four more seaplane tenders and replacement of the airships Akron and Los Angeles.

The Navy's policy-making general board has approved the tender construction.

Secretary Dern told the Military Committee, which is considering a bill to remove profits from war, that it was unfair to the soldiers at the front and the citizens at home to permit anyone "to make an excessive profit out of the exigencies of war."

"From the experience of this Nation, as well as others," he added, "the War Department is forced to the conclusion that in the event of war the major portion of our war supplies must be produced by private industry.

"It might prove suicidal to try to depend upon Government-owned plants alone.

Backs Private Industry.

"In time of war, if history means anything," he added, "private industry," under civilian management, but under suitable Government control, would still have to be our main reliance."

Secretary Dern indorsed proposals to license the manufacture and sale of essential war supplies.

Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, said removal of war profits was "a beautiful theory," but its translation into facts was "far more difficult than writing it down on paper."

While advocating price control and an excess profits tax to help cut down war profits, Dern suggested that restrictions on industry should not be so severe as to hamper, cripple or destroy the production of necessary war materials.

Hearings on the take-the-profits-from-war bill are to end today with testimony from American Federation of Labor and Veterans of Foreign Wars spokesmen.

Group to Present 'Traviata' Tonight

Verdi Opera Will Be Sung in Constitution Hall.

Verdi's popular opera, "La Traviata," will be presented tonight in Constitution Hall by the Cosmopolitan Opera Association, of New York, of which Max Rabinov is director. This will be the first performance of a grand opera in the auditorium which has hitherto served for concerts, lectures and public meetings. Ingenious stage settings and lighting effects have been devised by Dr. Ernst Lert.

Edis de Philippe, a young American soprano of great promise, who has already scored many successes with the Cosmopolitan organization in the New York Hippodrome last fall, will sing the role of Violetta. The leading tenor part will be taken by Armand Tokatyan, formerly of the Metropolitan. Jean Fardulli, a young Greek barytone, will sing the role of the elder Germont.

Minor roles will be taken by Georgia Standing, Maria Dulos, Luigi dalle Molle, Luigi Oliviero, Panfilo Testamale and Eugenio Prosperoni. There will be a corps de ballet for the special dances in the second act, and the choral and orchestral forces will be fully adequate. Richard Lert will conduct the performance.

Admiral Peoples Holds Silence On His Part in Works Project

But Report Is He'll Be Key Man to Carry Out Roosevelt Plan.

By Felix Bruner.

The Navy's No. 1 business man, Rear Admiral Christian Joy Peoples, continued yesterday in his position as the outstanding individual, besides President Roosevelt himself, connected with the new works relief program. Sitting in a modest office in a Government warehouse, erected in war days, down near the water front, Admiral Peoples steadfastly refuses to discuss the works program, himself or any other subject.

Nevertheless, he must appear today before the Senate Appropriations Committee to tell what he knows about the program. He gave similar information to a House committee last week. Admiral Peoples was called by the committee because he knows more about the details of the plans for work relief than anyone else.

Speculation concerning the set-up which will follow enactment by Congress of the $4,880,000,000 appropriation invariably involves Peoples. It will be surprising to many if he is not included in the organization when it is formed. The President has let it be known that he intends to administer the fund himself, but necessarily the details must be handled by someone, and that man may be Admiral Peoples.

Works on Relief Program.

Admiral Peoples has been working on the works relief problem for at least three months. Various departments and offices have made surveys of possible projects available for work relief. These facts and figures have gone to the office in the warehouse and Peoples and his assistants have digested and coordinated them so that the admiral comes nearer than anyone else to knowing where work is available, how many men can be employed in a given project and the percentage of the cost of labor involved in a given project.

Directed Construction.

A year ago Admiral Peoples was lent by the Navy to the Treasury Department as head of the procurement division. This was done at the request of Secretary Morgenthau and with the approval of the President. President Roosevelt knew the admiral and worked with him during the war. When Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Peoples was assistant chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. He developed the present purchase system of the Navy.

Underwood & Underwood.
REAR ADMIRAL PEOPLES.

Since taking over his present job Peoples has spent $80,000,000 of PWA funds, $65,000,000 of other funds, all in construction of Government buildings, and has had general supervision of Government construction, besides acting as Uncle Sam's purchasing agent. Although he is not himself an engineer, the admiral has on his staff a group of engineers who have had experience in all manner of construction work and who are qualified to do the kind of work involved in the relief program and to pass on the merits of projects.

Peoples came up through the ranks of the Navy on the strength of his business ability. Seamanship and such have played little part in his career. He never attended the United States Military Academy, but he did take a special course in the University of California. At the age of 24 (he is now 58) Peoples entered the Navy as an ensign, working as an assistant paymaster. Seventeen years later he became a rear admiral. He was paymaster general of the Navy from 1930 until 1933, when he went to the Treasury Department.

Poderjay to Reach U. S. Today; Faces Immediate Questioning

Dashing Captain to Be Asked by New York Police About Marriage With Agnes Tufverson; Debonair Figure Will Arrive Here in Brig.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The enigmatic, debonair Capt. Ivan Poderjay will arrive unwillingly from Europe tomorrow to face the relatives of a woman whose marriage to him more than a year ago was followed quickly by her disappearance.

The former Yugoslav army officer, who was found to have had an amorous and adventurous history when he became the central figure of an international police mystery, returns to the United States in the brig of the President Polk.

Immediately he will be taken to police headquarters and questioned about the disappearance of Agnes Tufverson, 43-year-old corporation lawyer of New York and Detroit.

Nominally, the charge on which Poderjay is being extradited is that he committed bigamy when he married Miss Tufverson at "the Little Church Around the Corner" here on December 4, 1933.

But the police and Miss Tufverson's two Detroit sisters have a deeper interest in the dashing captain who sailed back, alone, to the blonde French woman he had married the preceding March.

They want to ask him for further details on his explanation, given from a Vienna cell, that his marriage to Miss Tufverson was merely one of convenience, performed at her suggestion, and that she departed ostensibly on a world cruise shortly afterward.

They also would like to ask him how he came by the clothing and other articles belonging to Miss Tufverson which were found in his Vienna apartment. The clothing was being worn by his French wife, Mme. Marguerite Susanne Ferrand.

Georgia Bank Looted.

Gibson, Ga., Jan. 28 (AP).—While Cashier E. E. Griffith slept in his home at one side of the Bank of Gibson and the sheriff at the other, robbers early today stretched a tube from an acetylene tank across the street, burned open the vault and left with approximately $10,000 in cash and securities.

Patriotic Parley To Start Today

Women's Group Planning Rally Tomorrow Night.

Activities of the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense will start today at the Mayflower Hotel with preliminary meetings under direction of Mrs. A. C. Carlson, of Willmar, Minn., chairman.

The regular conference sessions, which will begin tomorrow and last through Friday, are expected to bring 1,000 delegates from 39 women's organizations. Every State will be represented.

The formal opening will be a patriotic mass meeting tomorrow night at the Mayflower, at which Secretary of War Dern, Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, acting chief of naval operations, and Frank N. Belgrano, jr., American Legion commander, will speak.

Two Hurt as Stove Explodes.

A colored woman and her 2-year-old child were injured yesterday when a kitchen stove exploded in their home, 1642 Fourth street northwest. Mrs. Queen Gantt, 32, was preparing breakfast when the stove exploded. With the child, she was treated for painful scalds at Freedmans Hospital. A frozen water pipe was blamed for the explosion.

2 Hit-Run Drivers Sought by Police

Two Men Are Injured in Accidents Here.

Two hit-and-run motorists were sought by police here last night.

Edward Rosenthal, 58, of the 400 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest, is in a critical condition in Emergency Hospital. He was found lying in the street by a taxi driver. Victim of a hit-run driver, Rosenthal suffered head injuries, cuts and bruises.

A 22-year-old Naval Air Station employe will appear in Police Court today to explain his connection with an alleged hit-and-run accident at Twelth and Water streets southwest yesterday in which Chancellor Jackson, 47, colored, of the 1600 block of Eleventh street northwest, suffered head injuries. Robert P. Williamson is the naval worker.

Mohawk's Gear Broken, Signal Mix-up Hinted

Almost Impossible to Keep Her on Course, Says Quartermaster.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Five minutes before the liner Mohawk veered sharply into the course of the Norwegian freighter Talisman, surviving members of her crew testified today, her automatic steering apparatus broke down completely, necessitating an emergency switch to the hand-steering gear.

"At 9 p. m. (the collision occurred shortly before 9:30 p. m.), it was almost impossible to keep her on her course," Marty Polander, quartermaster of the Mohawk, testified. He came to the inquiry from a hospital, his hands masses of bandages. They were frost-bitten.

"I reported this immediately to the third mate and he brought the deck engineer, who took the wheel and he had as hard a time as I did. We used the wheel up to about five minutes before the collision when I was told to put the wheel amidship.

Signal Mixup Hinted.

"It was then they started steering from the steering engine compartment at the stern of the ship."

Polander also testified that a mix-up in signals might have been responsible for the collision.

He said that when the hand apparatus is used signals from the bridge to the steering room are necessary and that he was "morally certain" that a confusion in signals caused the Mohawk to be directed toward disaster.

The telegraph for the hand system, he testified, was marked by old style commands, which meant that if it was set to port, the ship would go to starboard.

He was positive, he said, that he saw the telegraph placed to starboard, which would have brought the Mohawk toward the Talisman if the signal was not understood properly.

Another Probe Under Way.

Another Federal inquiry into the disaster, in which 45 lives were lost, was under way at the offices of United States Attorney Martin Conboy.

Conboy's assistants secretly questioned Capt. Edmund Wang, of the freighter Talisman, and other members of his crew.

It was said the radio logs of both vessels and of coastwise stations would be examined by Conboy before the end of the week.

Wagner Urges Senate Probe Sea Disasters

(Associated Press.)

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, yesterday introduced a resolution for an investigation of all recent sea disasters, including the Mohawk, by a special Senate committee.

Legislation requiring steamship companies to insure the lives of their passengers for $10,000 each was said authoritatively yesterday to be about ready for submission to Congress by high Administration officials.

Secretary Roper is preparing recommendations, based on information obtained in the Morro Castle inquiry conducted by the Commerce Department's steamboat inspection service.

Own Phone Wire Tapped by Ickes To Record Talks

Secretary Ickes has tapped his own telephone wire, the Associated Press reports.

The Cabinet officer, some of whose investigators have been accused by other officials of having listened in on official telephone conversations, has had installed an instrument which will record for future reference any conversation of his own that he might wish to retain.

A wire connected to Ickes' personal telephone leads to a recording instrument in another room. On this instrument the words spoken by the Secretary and the person to whom he may be talking are recorded in wax, just as an ordinary phonograph record is made.

Formal Murder Charge Filed Against Woman

Laurel, Miss., Jan. 28 (AP).—A formal charge of murder was filed today by County Attorney Jack Deavours against a woman booked as Miss Quida Keeton, of Laurel, in connection with the slaying of a woman whose severed legs were found on a remote road a week ago.

The charge accused Miss Keeton of slaying her mother, Mrs. Daisy Keeton, reputedly wealthy widow of a Laurel railroad man, who lived with her daughter, Miss Keeton, here and has been missing for a week.

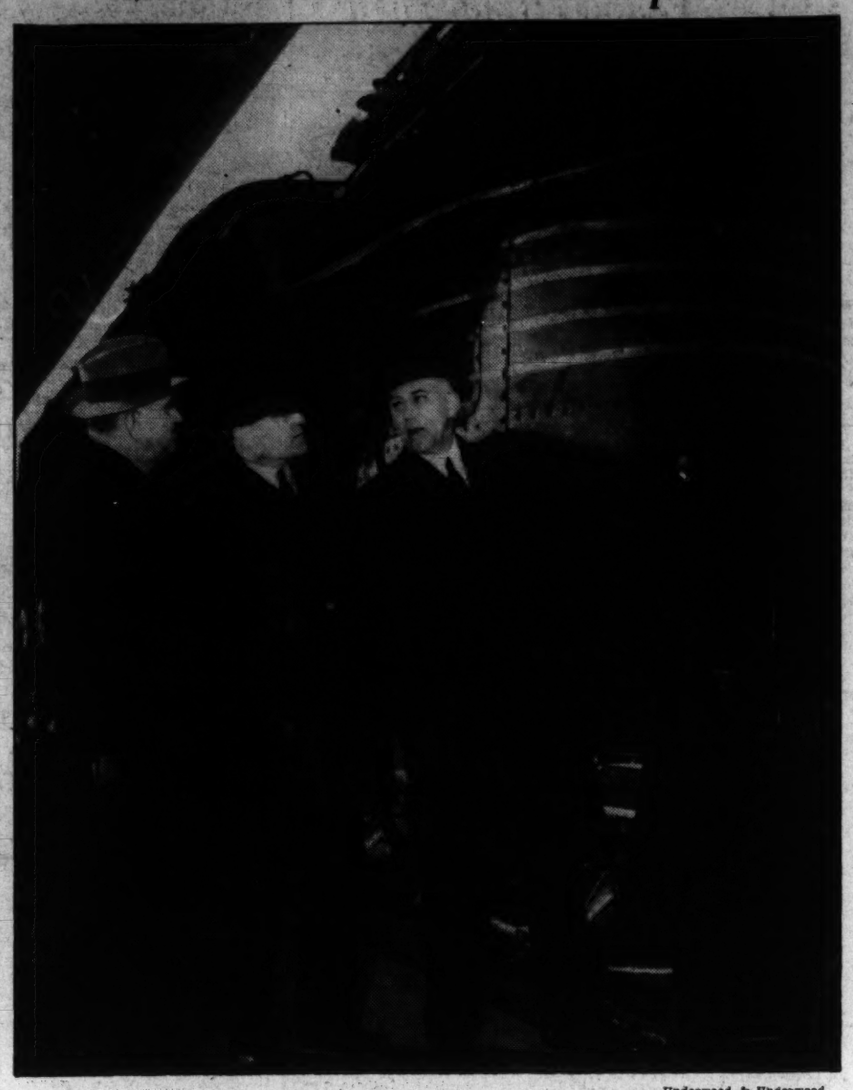
As First Electric Train Left Capital



Underwood & Underwood.

Secretary Ickes, C. G. Wilcox, road foreman of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and M. W. Clement, vice president, look over locomotive that set a new running time between Philadelphia and Washington yesterday.

Electric Train Makes D.C. Bow In Record Run

New Streamlined Engine Does Over 75 Miles an Hour on Trip.

A streamlined electric locomotive pulled nine Pennsylvania Railroad coaches from Washington to Philadelphia and return yesterday in the fastest time ever recorded by a standard-length train over this route.

The running time for the entire trip was 212 minutes for the 269 miles, or an average speed of better than 75 miles an hour.

On the home stretch the train roared into Washington faster than any train of any size has run the route before, clipping one minute from the record of 1 hour and 51 minutes hung up by the steam locomotive and coach that rushed movie films of Lindbergh's New York reception to the Capital in 1927.

The run was made to signalize the virtual completion of the Pennsylvania's electrification of its New York-to-Washington line. The train carried as passengers 128 Government, railroad and District officials and newspapermen, including Secretary of Interior Ickes, whose PWA loan made installation of the electric equipment possible.

At exactly 10 a. m., Engineman Charles B. Morris pulled the throttle on the 4,620-horsepower locomotive. About 30 minutes later at Fulton Junction, just outside of Baltimore, he had gained 2 minutes on his scheduled time. At Philadelphia's Thirtieth Street Station he had boosted his gain to seven minutes, setting a new record time for standard-sized trains between Washington and Philadelphia of 2 hours and 8 minutes.

As the train was being faced around for the return trip, officials and newspapermen were going into the diner for lunch. Some of them were still eating when the train pulled into Washington 1 hour and 50 minutes later.

One Stop Made on Return.

There was a 5½-minute wait in Philadelphia and 22 minutes were required to turn the train around. Only one stop was made on the return, a 30-second wait in Baltimore.

Secretary Ickes left the train at Baltimore en route to Philadelphia, but Representative Mary Norton, chairman of the House District Committee; Capt. Howard Clark, Assistant District Engineer Commissioner, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of highways, representing the city, and most of the road officials stayed on for the round trip.

The train's highest speed—102 miles an hour—was reached over a short run between Seabrook and Landover, Md., a few miles outside the District line. Coming home, the train raced the 40.1 miles between Baltimore and Washington, which includes the Seabrook-Landover stretch, in 32 minutes, and negotiated the 82 miles between Chester and Baltimore in 67 minutes.

Better Than Steam.

In the engine cab with Morris were Robert Hughes, of Wilmington, helper, and C. G. Wilcox and W. J. Colcord, road foreman. Said Morris, in Washington:

"Sure I like her better than steam. She's cleaner and she has more power."

M. W. Clement, vice president of the road, hailed the test as "marking an evolution in railroad transportation."

He said electric operation on regular passenger schedules would start February 15; on freight, March 15.

G. O. P. Drafts Bill Limiting Works Funds

Appropriations Minority Girds for Showdown in Committee.

pared to demand that Public Works Administrator Ickes and Relief Administrator Hopkins also be called before the hearings are over.

Taking his cue from the President's budget message, Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, minority member of the committee, last night was drawing an amendment to definitely limit expenditures to "useful projects," and another prescribing compensation "that would not compete with private business."

Wants Roads Bill Changed.

In collaboration with colleagues, he further will propose changes in the bill setting up a $400,000,000 road construction fund to be paid out by the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Public Roads. Attempting to put in written law what he says Administration spokesmen orally promise, Dickinson will have other amendments making specified allocatinos to designated departments of Government, covering rivers and harbors imprvoements, soil erosion work, reclamation activities, etc.

One prominent Administration Democrat, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, yesterday took vehement exception to presidential proposals to pay a lower wage rate on Government projects. Instead of encouraging a return of labor to private employment, he predicted, the results would be to scale down salaries to the Government maximum.

Republican critics of the bill made clear that they are not satisfied with Administration proposals to place distribution of the fund personally in the hands of the President. What they are fighting, they pointed out, are the unprecedented executive powers proposed in the measure. With the cooperation of some Democrats, they hope to curb them, if not in committee, then on the floor of the Senate.

Seek Names of All Officials.

From Admiral Peoples and Budget Director Bell they will attempt today to elicit the names of every official expected to play any considerable role in expenditure of the huge fund. It is their purpose then to summon each before the committee and ask what he proposes to do with the money.

Democratic critics seek a verbal commitment on proposed expenditure of funds, rather than any written provision in the bill. The latter procedure, they claim, would throw open the bill for "pork barrel" and Treasury raids.

Republicans did not vigorously press their demand for open hearings, as all the testimony will be published later anyway, it was said. A motion that hearings be public was defeated by a strictly party vote.

An appeal for use of the "contract method" in public works operations, not only to produce more employment, but to insure the greatest economy, was made yesterday to Senator Glass in a letter from President Henry I. Harriman of the Chamber of Commerce.

Particularly as applied to finding jobs for unemployed workers of all classifications, "legislation should include express provision for use of the contract method to the fullest practical extent," Harriman wrote.

"This will assure opportunity for employment on the staffs of architectural, engineering and contracting firms where, we need not assure you, unemployment has been very severe."

'Throatless' Babe Dies at Baltimore As Tubing Fails

Baltimore, Jan. 28 (AP).—A 16-day fight for life by a baby girl born without a throat opening was ended today by death.

When physicians at the Maryland General Hospital found the throat of the infant closed at birth by a congenital stricture, they inserted a rubber tube "throat" through an incision in the stomach in an attempt to save the child's life.

For some time the child appeared to be doing well, taking food through the tube, but it was unable to overcome its handicap and lost its "fifty-fifty" fight for life.

Had the child lived, the physicians would have attempted to give it normal throat functions by dilating the closed esophagus, or throat.

Philippine Mission Set to Confer Here

Manila, P. I., Jan. 28 (AP).—Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, announced here today he would head a mission from the islands to Congress, leaving February 20 for Washington.

The mission will confer with members of Congress on reciprocity between the United States and the Philippine Commonwealth, now in process of formation, and also seek liberalization of terms of the McDuffie-Tydings act under which the commonwealth will be set up, Quezon said.

HOLC to Seek Fund Extension From Congress

Fahey Is Authorized by Roosevelt to Ask for Appropriation.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday authorized John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, to lay before the Banking and Currency Committees of Congress his program for an extension in the borrowing power of the corporation.

Mr. Fahey declined to reveal the specific amount he will ask Congress to authorize, but it is reported the figure will be between $1,000,000,000 and $1,250,000,000, depending on the extent that the Federal Housing Administration takes up the mortgage load.

The HOLC chairman was directed to proceed with his program at a meeting between President Roosevelt and members of the interdepartmental loan committee. This meeting was devoted to examination of the demands being made on HOLC and the ability of private agencies and the FHA to handle part of the situation.

Request Exceed Funds.

In November, when the HOLC directors suspended the acceptance of applications for the refinancing of mortgages, the agency listed requests for approximately $1,500,000,000 more than the funds it had on hand. It was estimated that applications calling for a third of this amount would be found ineligible for Government help.

Thus there are in the HOLC legal division applications for approximately $1,000,000,000 financing, which would be granted if the agency had the money. Consequently, about $1,000,000,000 additional would be necessary to clear up pending applications without accepting any more.

In some quarters it has been contended that the pending applications for which there are no funds should be turned back to private financial institutions and that the agency, set up to meet an emergency, should cease lending when the $3,000,000,000 already made available has been exhausted, probably about the first of March.

Officials of the HOLC, however, contend that the applicants can not obtain the refinancing they need from private institutions, chiefly because of the still heavy burdened condition of the mortgage market.

It is argued that if these applications are thrown back, many of the mortgages will be foreclosed, thus further depressing real estate values. The result, it is contended, not only would weaken the private financial institutions, but also injure the HOLC because the value of property pledged as collateral for mortgages would be lessened.

It has not yet been revealed whether the HOLC will seek funds in excess of the amount now needed to cover all pending applications. Greater opposition would be expressed toward such a step that will meet the plan to extend the agency's borrowing power sufficiently to permit it to take care of applications on hand.

Morgenthau at Hearing.

Those attending the White House meeting included Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau; Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board; Mr. Fahey, Stewart McDonald, representing the FHA; Horatio B. Hackett, PWA director of housing, and Cyril Upham, secretary of the interdepartmental loan committee.

Secretary Morgenthau, chairman of the committee, said only the HOLC program was discussed. He explained that the committee, set up as a clearing house for the legislation of Federal lending agencies, was making progress. It has now cleared the HOLC and FCA plans. The FDIC legislative program, he added, needs "a little more sandpaper."

The big task of the group will be to pass on the scope of the Administration's program for changes in the Federal Reserve Act—the most controversial of all subjects under study by the committee. Beyound saying the reserve board would have a program to present to Congress, Mr. Morgenthau declined to comment.

Showdown Set On World Court In Vote Today

It would have required that this country give its prior assent in every case affecting our interest, where an advisory opinion is handed down by the court. The Administration resolution already provides that no such opinion may be delivered over this country's objection.

As the final vote neared, Secretary of State Cordell Hull went to the Capitol for conferences with Senators, while all the weight of the leadership was thrown behind passage. From the diplomatic gallery of the Senate, Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, closely followed the floor debate, and heard Senator Johnson, arch opponent of the court, administer another tongue lashing to adherence proposals.

In his radio appeal, Senator Robinson last night heatedly denied charges that any "gag" has been placed on the Senate to force a vote, pointing out that Senators voluntarily agreed to a time limitation on debate.

"How can any one who seriously believes in the outlawry of war stand in the way of judicial tribunals, whether the jurisdiction be narrowly limited or comprehensive?" he asked. "We may be powerless, but we should not be effortless."

to Congressmen and solicitation of funds.

Townsend said yesterday an appeal recently was sent to the clubs for funds, suggesting a quota of 15 cents per member. This produced, he added, about $6,000. Many of the clubs, he said, were "in poor districts, just hanging together, despite the fact that the members have no money."

The doctor expects to appear before the House Ways and Means Committee late this week or early next for an explanation of his plan, which he contends would revive business within a very short time.

He estimates that some 10,000,000 people would be eligible for the $200-a-month payments at a total annual cost of $24,000,000,000. The funds would be raised by a tax on all transactions involving a transfer of money.

mail. An emergency now confronts the whole aviation industry, Mr. Howell declared, since the airmail contracts expire on March 1.

In addition, the Howell report urges the construction of two dirigibles—one to be leased to private interests for transatlantic passenger service—and the increase in the number of Army and Navy planes to 4,000. The President's attitude toward these proposals is not known.

The Howell commission, its duties done, will be dissolved on February 1. Mr. Howell's visit to the White House, hence, was in the nature of a farewell. The Georgian will leave today for Atlanta.

House Body Approves Longer Life for RFC

The House Banking Committee yesterday approved a bill to extend the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, retaining a Senate change that would permit the agency to expand its lending to industries.

With the RFC due to expire Thursday unless the Administration's extension bill is shoved through to enactment, Chairman Steagall obtained permission from the House to take up the measure today, the Associated Press says.

Hauptmann Admits Hiding Money From Wife

Didn't Tell Her About 'Finding' Fisch's $14,000

Friendship With Another Woman Is Revealed in Testimony.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 28 (AP). With mixed confidence and defiance Bruno Richard Hauptmann confronted Attorney General Wilentz today and waited for the State to take up anew its pounding cross-examination.

Court was convened at 10 a. m. by Justice Thomas W. Trenchard.

Wilentz started cross-examination.

Q. Mr. Defendant, have you ever been up in an airplane?—A. Yes, in Los Angeles.

Q. That was a pleasure trip—A. Yes.

Q. On that trip West your wife and Kloeppenburg (Hans Kloeppenburg, a friend) were with you? A. Yes.

Q. Were you on a boat anywhere on that trip?—A. I can't remember. (He shook his head.)

Q. Do you remember paying 75 cents apiece for a ride on a boat, for yourself, Mrs. Hauptmann and Kloeppenburg, altogether $2.25?—A. I can't remember.

Q. But you won't say you didn't? —A. I can't remember.

Q. You kept an account of your expenses on this trip to California? —A. Yes.

Q. Groceries and everything?—A. Yes.

Q. You kept accounts every day since you arrived in this country?—A. Not the first day. In a year or two.

Kept Account of Earnings.

Q. Once you started keeping accounts, you kept every item?—A. Not every item.

Q. You kept the money your wife earned, the money you earned, the money people owed you?—A. Yes.

Q. And at the end of the year you figured up what you and your wife were worth?—A. Yes.

Q. You've always been very careful about figures?—A. Well, I'd say so.

Q. You've always been very careful about money?—A. Yes.

Q. You were trying to accumulate money for your family right up to 1931?—A. Yes.

Q. When you put the figures in the book, they were correct—truthful figures?—A. Them figures are true, but I left some of them out of it.

Q. Whatever the figures are in the book, that is honest and true?—A. Yes.

Q. You don't want to change that, Mr. Hauptmann?—A. I saved money besides, and my wife should not know.

Q. Oh, you were hiding it on your wife? You were hiding a lot of things from your wife?—A. No.

Q. When did you first meet Mrs. Henckel?—A. In 1932.

Q. Was Mr. Henckel there the first time?—A. Her sister was—— Introduced Her Husband.

Q. I'm asking you about Mr. Henckel!—A. I can't remember.

Q. Don't you know that two weeks after you met her she introduced you to her husband?—A. I guess that's correct.

Q. That was when your wife was in Europe, eh?—A. Yes.

Wilentz said, "Now let's get back to the accounts."

Q. Let me ask you were you happy when you found the $14,000 in gold. Did you laugh?—A. No.

Q. Did you call your wife, did you tell your wife?—A. No.

Q. Were you honest with your wife when you found the money?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't she work and slave for you?—A. The $14,000 had nothing to do with my wife.

Q. Didn't she buy the furniture for your house?—A. Yes.

Q. For the furniture, didn't she pay every dollar for it?—A. Out of our bank account.

Q. But she gave you every dollar she had?—A. So did I. We were partners.

Q. And you were partners, weren't you, when you kept from your wife the finding of that $14,000?—A. Why should I make her excited?

Planned "Surprise" for Wife.

Q. When you were keeping the other account books, you were cheating her, then, weren't you, when you didn't tell her of the money you were hiding then?—A. I was keeping a surprise for her. I was going to build a house some time.

Q. Did you know Mr. Brent in your stock trading?—A. I don't know; what's his first name?

Q. Do you remember his wife introducing you at the Steiner-Rouse stock house?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Brent not to tell if your wife asked where you were a certain night?—A. No.

Wilentz produced a German-American dictionary which Hauptmann allegedly studied while awaiting trial in the county jail. Wilentz asserted Hauptmann had learned to spell certain English words after his arrest. He then displayed handwriting charts for comparison of ransom note and Hauptmann script.

Wilentz asked if it wasn't Hauptmann's "habit to put 'n's' before 'g's.'" Hauptmann denied it.

"Now, Mr. Defendant, look at this word 'singnature.'" Wilentz indicated the ransom note word. "Notice the 'n' before the 'g?'"—A. Yes.

Shows Hauptmann Check.

Q. Now that is a habit of yours, isn't it, putting "n" where it doesn't belong?—A. No, not a habit.

Q. Never did it at all?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Would you be surprised to find out you had done it?—A. I don't know.

Wilentz showed him one of his own checks. The witness paled slightly.

Q. Is that your check?—A. Yes.

Q. How much is it?—A. $74.

Q. Spell "seventy."—A. Senv——.

Q. You have an "n" in there—A. Yes.

Q. Now take a look at this exhibit, at the word "New York." The attorney general indicated the New York of the ransom notes and of Hauptmann's conceded writing. He pointed to a little curl at the end of both "n's." Did the police tell you to put that on?—A. No. I do it myself. But those words, there's a whole lot of difference. They are not the same.

Q. Did you see New York—that York in the ransom paper. Take a look at this book. Did you write that first New York?—A. Yes.

Q. Take a pencil and put a line under the first New York; the next and the next.

Book Examined By Jury.

Hauptmann slowly drew lines as directed in a small black note book with a yellow pencil, resting the book on his knee.

Wilentz asked for a short delay to permit the jury to examine the underlined "New York" in Hauptmann's note book.

He directed the jurors' attention to the "New York" on the chart enlargement of the address on the sleeping garment package.

Wilentz placed a large ledger in the prisoner's hands.

Q. Take a look at page 5, is that your handwriting?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember the experts testifying to the "g's" and "n's" being transposed?—A. There were so many talking, I can't remember.

Q. I call your attention to the word "l-i-g-t-h" and "r-i-g-t-h."

Hauptmann loked at the chart.

Q. Now you had a habit of doing that?—A. A habit?

Q. Yes, every time there was a "gh" in the word?—A. No, not a habit.

Q. Never did it at all?—A. Maybe I make a mistake some time, I don't write often.

Q. Oh, but you write a great deal, don't you, keep a bookkeeping ledger, write long letters?—A. Only rarely.

Wilentz thrust the ledger back into Hauptman's hands and bade him read the name of a stock listed there.

"Curtiss Wright," said the witness.

Trapped on Spelling.

Q. Spell it, the last word.—A. W-r-i-h-g-t.

Wilentz then pointed out the ransom word "r-i-h-g-t" and asked Hauptmann if both were not spelled the same.

There was no answer.

Wilentz produced the loose pages of a German-American dictionary, asking Hauptmann if they were his.

The defendant replied, "I never saw dat! My dictionary was that thick (indicating about 2 inches with thumb and finger)."

The questioning reverted to Hauptmann's expense accounts during the California trip. Wilentz pointed to the various items on a particular page of his notebook.

The page bore the word "b-o-a-d" for "boat."

Q. I show you the first page of the trip—that must have been after July, 1931?—A. Yes, after July, 1931.

Q. Then the book is not 6 or 8 year old?—A. Well, you asked me before about the one word "b-o-a-d."

Q. While counsel is looking at the book, spell signature.—A. S-i-g-n—

O. Ah, g-n?—A. That's correct, I think.

Q. When was the first time you heard of Col. Lindbergh?—A. Right after his flight to France.

Wilentz then had the accused pronounce "Lindbergh."

"Lindburgh," said Hauptmann.

"Say Mr. Colonel Lindbergh."

"Mr. Colonel Lindburgh."

"Again, louder."

"Mr. Colonel Lindenburgh."

"Got an extra 'n' in there," snapped Wilentz.

"Lindburgh," said the witness, hurriedly.

Wilentz then had Hauptmann read his letter of May 21, 1931, in which he wrote to his broker asking for delay in adjusting a debit balance of $74.

Admits Writing Letter.

Q. You wrote that letter to your broker?—A. Yes.

Q. That was in May, 1931, that right?—A. Yes.

Q. You remember writing "Dear sir" and "debit" in that letter?—A. Yes.

"Take a look at those 'd's' in the ransom notes," said Wilentz.

Wilentz shifted the defendant's attention to the letter again, getting again from him that he wrote the "D's" in "Dear Sir and "Debit."

"We'll let the jury decide," he said.

The jurors, one by one, examined the letter.

Q. Now you kept accounts of all of your transactions until July, 1930?—A. I did.

Q. And then you stopped?—A. Yes.

Q. Why did you stop?—A. I can't remember.

Q. When did you start again after May, 1930?—A. I started, I guess, on the trip to California.

Q. Stopped in 1928 and started again in 1930?—A. 1928—1930, I can't remember.

Q. Didn't you keep fur accounts in the little book?—A. A little.

Q. Then you began again in 1932? —A. Only on brokerage accounts.

Q. Fur accounts?—A. No.

Q. You didn't keep fur accounts in your bank?—A. Very little.

Q. Then you lied when you said you didn't keep any fur accounts? —A. Only a little bit of the furs.

Hauptmann explained that Fisch kept most of the fur accounts.

Wilentz showed the prisoner a ransom note and asked him to read a certain line in it.

"The baby would be back long ago," he began haltingly. "You would not get any results from police, because this kidnaping was planned a year already."

Identifies Handwriting.

Q. Didn't you stop keeping these accounts when the idea of kidnaping the baby came?—A. I didn't have any idea.

Q. I want to show you a little book. Is that handwriting yours? The page with 1930?—A. Yes.

Q. Those drawings aren't yours? Wilentz referred to some sketches. —A. I don't know.

Q. How about that window?—A. —Is that a window?

Q. Is it?—A. I don't know.

Q. You can make out that ladder there, can't you, with the dowell pin.

The drawing occurred in the section of the book showing accounts for early in 1932.

Q. There's some more pictures, a child's drawing?—A. Yes, a child's drawing.

Q. What are those figures, a pinocle score?—A. A kind of a card game.

Q. But not your handwriting?—A. No.

Wilentz directed the witness' attention to the drawings of the ladder and window.

Q. Would you say those were the drawings of a little child?—A. It's not my drawing.

Q. Would you say a little child did it —A. Yes.

Q. But it's not yours?—A. No, not mine.

A recess for five minutes was taken at 11:21 a. m.

Court resumed at 11:34 and Hauptmann went back to the stand as soon as the jury was polled.

Condon's Testimony Cited.

Q. Now on April 2, 1932, you remember Dr. Condon's testimony that that was the date he paid you $50,000?—A. $50,000 (in a surprised tone)?

Q. Now with reference to that particular day, April 2, all you had in your stock accounts was 50 shares of Warner Bros.?—A. That's right.

Q. And your bank balance then was $202—$202.26?—A. Yes.

Q. And you had a mortgage for $3,750, which you and your wife had bought?—A. Yes.

Q. In 1929, you had, you said, about $3,500 in cashd at home?—A. $3,500.

Q. In 1931, about $4,000?—A. Yes.

Q. That was the cash you were hiding on your wife?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you put $4,300 in circulation?—A. Oh, '30.

Q. On April 2, 1932, you had $4,300 in cash?—A. Yes, about that.

Q. Where did you keep the money at home?—A. In a big trunk.

Q. You had clothes in the trunk. And what else?—A. Feather bed.

Q. It was a dry place, wasn't it?—A. Of course, it was dry.

Q. Where did you keep it?—A. In the front room.

Q. In what room?—A. In the big closet in the front room.

Q. Was the trunk locked?—A. Yes.

Q. Did your wife have a key?—A. No, sir.

Q. Feather beds in there, clothes in there, but your wife didn't have a key?—A. No, sir.

Q. In the front room you had your victrola—your radio, where you entertained your friends—so safe you could keep it hidden?—A. Yes.

Q. That was the safest place in your house?—A. I guess it was the safest.

"Safe Hiding Place."

Q. So safe you thought it was the place to keep it away from your wife?—A. Yes, I knew my wife goes there only a few times a year.

Q. But it was the safest place?—A. Yes.

Q. And a dry place?—A. Yes.

Wilentz pointed to Hauptmann's note book, when he computed his worth in 1929 as $2,066 and his wife's as $1,031.

Q. That mortgage was the only one you had—you put that in the book?—A. Yes.

Q. You owned $2,800 worth of stock and put that in the book? This was your yearly inventory? A. Yes.

Q. Now read this line, what does it say?—A. Cash at home $16.

Q. Not $3,500?—A. No.

Q. Not $3,000?—A. No.

Q. But $16?—A. Yes, but that's the reason. That was all my wife knew of.

At Wilentz's request Hauptmann estimated his worth at the end of 1929 as between $9,000 and $10,000.

Q. That was your assets in 1929 except the money you were hiding from your wife?—A. Yes.

Hauptmann recorded the salaries he and his wife made, he testified, but did not include the money he made in overtime work.

"That's the money," he explained, "I kept from my wife."

Q. How much did you have in Europe?—A. Billions.

Q. Billions?—A. That was during inflation.

Q. That was a sort of hallucination with you, wasn't it?—A. Well——

Q. What did you have when you came to the United States?—A. About $100.

Accounts Not "Accurate."

Q. So you and your wife came here and worked hard, and kept strict accounts, and at the end of 1928, you were worth $6,666?—A. Yes.

Wilentz permitted Hauptmann to explain at length the entries in his salary book. He said they were not always quite accurate.

Q. So generally that when you got $49.50, you put $49.50, dollars and cents?—A. Yes, but not the overtime.

Wilentz led him through other items where the cents were included until the account book was closed out in July, 1930.

Q. How many weeks was that after the Lindbergh child was born? —A. I don't know.

Q. Who did you build houses for in extra hours?—A. Mr. Brill, Mr. Huberland and Mr. Steikoff.

Q. But you did put in these extra hours in the book?—A. I gotta put them in.

Q. You were quite a bookkeeper in those days. At the end of 1930 was transferred the pencil notations to a book in ink? —A. I don't remember.

Wilentz showed him a little black book and Hauptmann agreed he had written the entries.

Q. These are exactly the same notations—one is a copy?—A. Yes.

Q. By the way, take a look at that "D" in "Deutschland." look at the "D" in the disputed writing (ransom note).

Hauptmann looked but Wilentz did not ask a comparison.

Q. At the end of the year 1926, you had $3,758?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you have the year 1927 and you were up to $5,780?—A. Yes.

Q. And you wrote down the money in the house, didn't you? $112?—A. Yes.

Q. And in 1929, you had $6,666?—A. Yes.

Q. Look at this "X" in the book, does it look like this "X" (in the word "Bronx" in Hauptmann's driver's license)—A. Not exactly.

Q. Now, in May, 1931, you had $3,500 at home?—A. Yes.

Q. $3,500?—A. I guess I got a little bit more.

Q. Maybe $4,000?—A. Yes.

Q. Somewhere between $3,500 and $4,000?—A. Somewhere between $3,900 and $4,000.

Q. Now you got a letter from the broker for $74.89?—A. Yes.

Q. You weren't doing as well as a broker as a carpenter?—A. No; I had to work and I couldn't go to the brokers.

Q. In other words, you found out you could not do the carpenter work and the brokerage business well at the same time?—A. That's right.

Q. In May, 1931, the market was bad and your broker asked for $74?—A. Yes.

Asked Delay on Payment.

Q. So you wrtoe him to wait a few days and you would pay?—A. I don't remember. I guess maybe.

Q. Where did you get it from; you had $3,500 in that trunk at home? There was no answer.

Q. But you had $3,500 in your home in 1931?—A. Yes.

Q. You went and got the money from the trunk?—A. Never touched the trunk.

Q. The reason you didn't because you didn't have any money in the trunk.—A. I didn't touch the trunk.

Hauptmann explained he paid the $74 in a few days from a pay check.

Q. Why did you write him to wait four days? Here you were worth thousands, $10,000. Why didn't you pay him?—A. Because I had $74 not quite handy, and I was not going to touch the money in the trunk.

Q. You had the mortgage?—A. Why should I sell a mortgage for $74?

"The first time you go in the stock market you are not good," Hauptmann said, explaining his losses.

Q. The first time you built a ladder you weren't so good?—A. I never built a ladder.

Q. Did you make designs and drawings when you were a machinist in Germany?—A. No, never.

Q. Never?—A. No.

Q. But you knew the symbol of the three interlocking circles of the Krupp company?—A. I saw that.

Wilentz swung back to the brokerage accounts, and brought out that on December 3, 1931, Hauptmann received a telegram margin call for $24 for his brokers.

"It must be that way," he said.

"Read the telegram," Wilentz ordered.

Threat to Liquidate.

Hauptmann read the telegram, which said unless the $24 was paid the account would be liquidated.

Q. You had other notices and didn't respond?—A. The amount was too little.

Q. Oh, but $74 was too big?—A. I sent him a letter explaining I would pay Saturday.

Q. You took a lot of money?—A. Yes.

Q. You took Anna Hauptmann's money and ran it down by the end of 1931 to $100.—A. Yes.

Q. What was your balance December 1, 1931?—A. $100.96.

Q. That was the only money you had then in the banks?—A. Yes.

Q. So you drew out $25 in December?—A. The book shows it.

Q. That left $75.96?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you say to Mr. Brent you couldn't live with your wife anymore after she came back from Germany?—A. What are you talking about, my wife?

Q. Did you say that to Mr. Brent? —A. No.

Q. Now when Fisch gave you this shoebox, he told you to keep it in a dry, safe place?—A. Yes.

Q. How much was in that box?—A. I find it later. It was close to $15,000.

Q. How much was in there?—A. Close to $15,000.

Q. Gold, gold. How much you counted it?—A. Close to $15,000.

Q. How close?—A. $14,800.

Q. That's a guess, isn't it?—A. Yes, but it's pretty close.

Q. And the reason you didn't count, is because you know, isn't it? A. No.

Q. When you took that money from that shoebox down to that garage you didn't count it?—A. No.

Waited for Money to Dry.

Q. For two weeks you left it without counting?—A. I waited it dried out.

Q. You take a few out and count the dry ones?—A. Yes.

Q. It took two weeks for you to count the gold in the basket?—A. Yes.

Q. The trunk was a safe place and a dry place, wasn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. Everything you thought was dear to you, your assets—money—you kept in that trunk?—A. Not what I hold dear now.

Q. Better than a bank?—A. No.

Q. Better than the vault?—A. No.

Q. Now Fisch was your best friend?—A. He was my best friend in business.

Q. Didn't you tell people Fisch was your dearest and closest friend? —A. I have many friends as close and dear to me as Mr. Fisch.

Q. Didn't you write letters saying Fisch was your best and dearest friend?—A. Probably I write letter.

Q. One of your best friends?—A. Yes.

Q. You knew he was sick?—A. I knew he was a little sick.

Q. He asked you to keep that box in a dry place —A. Yes.

Q. And you knew from the day you had moved into that house that the closet was a wet place. You complained about it frequently?—A. Not from the day I moved in.

Q. Even though you knew it was a wet closet—even though Fisch told you to put it in a dry place—you put it into the closet?—A. There was somebody in the front room—in the baby's room.

Q. Aren't you the head of your own house?—A. I didn't want to disturb the baby.

Q. You hid it in the closet and then a broom hit it?—A. Yes.

Q. When was that?—A. Middle of 1932.

Q. When was that, what date, what month?—A. It was in the middle of August, 1933, on a Sunday.

Q. Was your wife home?—A. Yes.

Q. You were going to the closet to get a broom?—A. Yes.

Q. What for?—A. To clean up something, I guess.

Q. When you were walking out of the closet with that broom you hit the box?—A. No. It was on the top shelf.

Hauptmann identified a photograph of his kitchen where the closet was located. It was introduced in evidence and the noon recess was called.

Court resumed at 2:08.

Hauptman returned to the stand and Wilentz proceeded.

Q. Now Mr. Defendant, you changed the brokerage accounts because of the automobile accident in October 17, 1932, you thought there might be a claim?—A. Yes.

Q. And you settled it actually for $300?—A. Yes, $300 or $350.

Q. Well $300, or $350?—A. Yes.

Q. And you settled it in December, 1932?—A. I don't know.

Q. Well, I show you your book, your bank account. In December, 1932, you settled that accident for $300. Isn't that right?—A. Yes.

Claim Settled for $300.

Q. So that you had actually settled that claim for $300?—A. Yes.

Q. You had no fear in March, 1933, of that claim?—A. Something was coming up.

Q. So in March, 1933, you changed your brokerage accounts to your wife's name?—A. I don't remember.

Wilentz introduced an address book of Hauptmann's.

Hauptmann examined the book for several minutes.

Q. Is there anything in there that you think is in your handwriting? Put an "x" with a circle around it to indicate any page not in your handwriting. (Hauptmann marked two.)

Q. With exception of those two pages, the book is in your handwriting?—A. Yes.

Q. You met Mr. Fisch at the Henckel's home?—A. I met Mr. Fisch before.

Q. The Henckels did not introduce you to Fisch?—A. We met at Hunter's Island. We knowed each other before.

Q. Now, Hauptmann, didn't you say you met Fisch before June, 1932, to account for moneys you deposited before June?—A. Absolutely, not.

Q. Didn't you tell the Bronx police that you were sitting with a family named Henckel at the time you met Fisch?—A. I didn't say twice.

Q. Didn't you say to them (police) that you met him in 1932? A. I can't remember.

Q. And they asked you where you met him?—A. Yes.

Q. And did you say 127th street?—A. Yes.

Q. And was 127th street the Henckell's home?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you meet Fisch first? —A. The first part of March or the first part of April.

Q. But after the first of March, 1932?—A. Yes.

Q. Take a look at these ransom

Suspect Falls Into Handwriting Trap Prepared by Wilentz

Bruno Reveals His Deception Of N. Y. Police

'Stop That, You Lie,' He Shouts in Clash With Prosecutor.

notes. You've listened to the testimony for days—to the experts—it looks as if someone imitated your handwriting?—A. That's the way it looks.

"There are some figures in that handwriting that look like my handwriting," Hauptmann explained.

Q. You know Fisch didn't copy your handwriting?—A. I don't know.

Q. But you didn't know Fisch on March 1, 1932. Do you think he wrote the ransom notes?—A. Don't know about them notes.

Q. But some of it looks like your handwriting?—A. Some of it.

Q. So before March 1, 1932, Isador Fisch didn't know you?—A. I did not know Fisch, but I did not know if Isador Fisch knew me.

Q. So Isador Fisch never wrote the ransom notes?—A. I never said he did.

Friendship for Woman.

Wilentz quizzed Hauptmann about his friendship for Mrs. Henckel, and of his frequent morning visits to her home on his way to the stock market.

Q. You visited Mrs. Henckel in the morning on your way to the stock market?—A. Mr. and Mrs. Henckel.

Q. But Henckel had gone to work?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a cup of coffee there?—A. Yes, sometimes, I came in and they say "Have a cup of coffee."

Q. And when Henckel was there, you were surprised?—A. No.

Q. Who did you go there to see, Mr. Henckel or Mrs. Henckel?—A. Mr. Henckel.

Q. And sometimes when you came there it was tough luck and Mrs. Henckel was the only one there?—A. Yes.

Q. In 1930 you continued to call at the Henckel home?—A. Sometimes in 1929-1930 I go to Henckel's.

Q. Mrs. Hauptmann, when she came home, she didn't like it?—A. She didn't like it very much.

Q. Did you stop going?—A. She didn't say stop.

Q. Didn't Mrs. Hauptmann say not to bring Mrs. Henckel to your home?—A. I can't remember that.

Q. Didn't she have a fight with you and say "I don't want that woman in our home?"—A.—No, sir.

Q. Didn't she say, "Richard, you've been acting very queerly since I came back from Europe?"—A. No, sir.

Q. And when you went on that Maine hunting trip with Henckel, didn't you pay all expenses?—A. Just for the guide.

Wilentz brought from Hauptmann the fact that he ate sometimes at a restaurant of Frederick Hans.

Q. Did you have Mrs. Hans up at your house to show her your wife's clothes when she was leaving for Europe?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Was there any other restaurant keeper up at the house?—A. My brother-in-law.

Wilentz drew from the witness he was a patron of the Hans restaurant in the Bronx and had Mrs. H[illegible] a visitor at his home.

[illegible]nd were you in that res[illegible]t that night the Lindbergh b[illegible] body was found and didn't yo[illegible]ush from that restaurant when you heard the news of the Lindbergh baby's body being found?—A. I?

Q. Yes, you.—A. No, not I.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Hans, about the middle of March, he called across the restaurant: "Richard, how's your leg?"—A. I don't remember what date.

Q. About the middle of March?—A. I can't remember, but I hardly think I was in there.

Denies Writing Address.

Wilentz confronted the witness with the piece of wood the police said they took from the Hauptmann closet bearing Dr. John F. Condon's address and telephone number.

Q. Is that your handwriting?—A. No.

Q. Do you mean to say you didn't write those letters. Didn't you write them?—A. No, sir.

Q. First tell me, are the numbers in your handwriting?—A. The number look familiar, but I can't remember putting it on.

Q. Did you remember better before District Attorney Foley?—A. I was excited.

Q. Were you excited before Justice Hammer in the extradition proceedings in the Bronx?—A. I don't remember.

Wilentz read Hauptmann's testimony about that closet panel when he was questioned about it in the Bronx.

Q. Isn't this the question asked by District Attorney Foley and didn't you say this was a piece of wood from your house?—A. I can't remember.

Q. Didn't District Attorney Foley ask you if that was your handwriting and you said, "yes?"—A. I don't remember.

Wilentz brought from the defendant that he didn't know just what the extradition hearing was about.

"There were so many questions," Hauptmann said.

Q. Weren't you there? Didn't you spend a half hour on the stand? A. I suppose so.

Q. Didn't you swear, swear unto God before Justice Hammer in the Bronx, that that was your handwriting?—A. Yes.

Q. Between those numbers there are four words—"Decatur Avenue?"—A. I can't make it out.

Q. You know what that number and address mean on there?—A. Not exactly.

Q. You know that it was Dr. Condon's?—A. I know it now.

Q. Didn't you know that if you had Dr. Condon's address and telephone on that board it was a serious thing?—A. I didn't think about it.

Wilentz thrust the board virtually into the defendant's face.

Hauptmann, white faced, stared at the Condon address with furrowed brows.

Q. You don't wear glasses, do you?—A. No.

Q. Don't you see this?—A. Yes.

Q. Can't you see it well? (There was no answer.)

Wilentz shoved the panel closer to Hauptmann's face. Hauptmann shook his head and made no answer.

Q. Do you remember the question, "What did you write on the board and you said you could make out the numbers '2974.'"—A. Yes.

The 2974 was the street address of Dr. Condon on Decatur avenue.

Wilentz also elicited testimony that Hauptmann in the Bronx could read the numbers of Condon's telephone from his closet panel, but professed inability to read the exchange "Sedgewick" which preceded the number.

Q. Do you remember the next question, "Who rubbed it out?"—A. They gave me a glass and I made it out.

Wilentz led Hauptmann through the answers he gave to Foley in the Bronx. Most of his replies were "I can't remember."

Hauptmann said he testified he could not make out all of the letters on the board.

Q. Did Foley ask you if this was Dr. Condon's address and telephone number?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember his asking you why you wrote that on the board?—A. I can't say yes or no.

Hauptmann said he could not say "yes or no" whether he told Foley he was interested in the Lindbergh case and put down the numbers.

"No Chance to Write."

"I am positively sure that I never wrote any such numbers on a board in the inside of the closet," Hauptmann said.

Q. It is impossible?—A. There is no chance to write or read.

Q. That is why you wrote it inside the closet, didn't you? Because there is no chance to read it?—A. No.

Hauptmann launched a long explanation of his marking down numbers and dates because of his interest in history.

Q. What was the greatest German aviator of the World War?—A. Richthofen.

Q. What was the first name?—A. Mannfried Richthofen.

Q. So that when Mr. Foley asked you how you came to write those numbers down you told him you had the habit of writing down dates and numbers about things you've read?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell him that?—A. I told him something. Yes, about that.

Q. You were incarcerated; you were being charged with murder by the State of New Jersey?—A. I didn't know that.

Q. Today you don't remember what you said to Mr. Foley?—A. I said I can't remember; there were too many questions.

Q. Did you tell Foley the truth about this board—you might as well answer for I am going to stay here until you do.—A. Yes; I told the truth.

Q. When you were asked specifically about the board, did you tell the truth, answer yes or no?—A. I say no.

Wilentz flourished the panel of wood closet trim board.

Had Interest in Case.

Q. You mean you just paid no attention because you had no interest in the case?—A. Oh, yes, I had interest in the case.

"I simply said 'yes' without thinking about it when I was in the courtroom," Hauptmann said, when given a chance to explain what had occurred in the Bronx.

Q. What you meant in the courthouse was you said "yes" when you meant "no," but you didn't mean it?—A. I didn't mean it.

Wilentz turned to the extradition hearing. He pointed out that a delay occurred between the arrest and the hearing and Hauptmann should have had opportunity to become aware of the seriousness of the case in which he was involved.

Hauptmann explained, "I didn't know what to say. I could have said yes or no. I didn't know."

Q. Well you know exactly how important it was?—A. Well, I don't exactly know how important it was.

Q. Didn't your wife come into you and beg you, "Richard please tell the truth?"—A. Yes.

Q. So when you lied, you lied deliberately?—A. No, it was the no and yes.

Q. You never took that chisel up there?—A. No.

Q. You never took that ladder up there?—A. I never built a ladder.

Q. Didn't you jump out of your chair in the proceedings, when you were asked if you kidnaped the Lindbergh baby? Your physical condition, which you say was bad, didn't reveal that.—A. It was so observed.

Q. So you wrote Dr. Condon's numbers on the board, did you not?—A. Positively not.

Wilentz immediately brought up the transcript of the prisoner's Bronx questioning, and read into the record Hauptmann's acknowledgement that he had written Condon's address and phone number.

The attorney general then directed his attention to the two currency serial numbers which were noted on the door panel of one of his closets.

He asked if he had not told Foley the numbers were those of $1,000 bills. Hauptmann nodded.

Q. Where did you get those $1,000 bills?—A. Fisch put them in my house.

Q. You told Foley you made your answers of your own free will?—A. I guess I said "yes" to everybody at that time.

Hauptmann next expressed doubt that the bills were of $1,000 or $500 denomination.

Q. You're smiling at me, you are having a good time?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you lie in the Bronx, did you lie here?—A. Stop that.

You Lie, Suspect Says.

Q. Lies, lies, lies about the Lindbergh money.—A. You lied to me, too, in this court.

Q. We'll let the jury decide that.

Q. You're not smiling now?—A. I guess it's no place to smile.

Q. "I'm a carpenter!" You thought that was funny? (That was Hauptmann's answer when asked about the building of the ladder).—A. No, I didn't.

Q. You think you're bigger than everything?—A. No.

Q. You think will power is everything, don't you?—A. No.

Q. Will power is everything with you, isn't it, now?—A. No; but I am innocent. I know.

Q. So innocent you lied in the Bronx County Court? (There was no answer.)

A five-minute recess was taken at 3:30 p. m.

Court reconvened at 3:40 p. m. Hauptmann, returning to the stand, waited while Wilentz conferred briefly with his associates.

Q. You said, Mr. Defendant, that in the Bronx County courthouse, you were a little excited?—A. Yes.

He said he talked to his wife mostly at that time "about our child."

Q. Who told you to change your story today?—A. Nobody.

Q. Who told you in New Jersey to change your story today?—A. I guess nobody.

Q. You remember these chisels?—A. Yes.

Q. You had them in a cigar box?—A. No, on the wall of the garage.

Q. Didn't you have those chisels in a cigar box in a closet of your home?—A. Maybe, yes.

Wilentz turned to a photo of the attic. Hauptmann said he recognized it.

His wife used the closet, in which was the trap door, leading up, but he said he never used the attic.

Q. You've been up to that attic?—A. Yes.

Q. And you're familiar with the attic, as a carpenter?—A. Yes.

Wilentz pointed to a large photograph of the attic and called the witness' attention to the missing floor board which the State contends made an upright for the kidnap ladder.

"Never Bothered With Attic."

Q. Did you ever know that floor board was missing since you moved in?—A. I don't remember.

"I never bothered with the attic," Hauptmann said.

Q. Do you know who left this board there when it was sawed off?—A. No.

Q. What kind of wood is this board?—A. Roofing.

Q. What kind of wood?—A. North-South Carolina pine.

Q. Do you know this is flooring?—A. Roofing.

Hauptmann said the cleats on the shelves were used to climb up to the attic.

Q. Mrs. Hauptmann couldn't climb up there?—A. She was up once.

Q. Of course it was easy for an athlete like you to get up in the attic?—A. No, it was not easy.

Q. It was difficult?—A. Yes.

Q. It was difficult to get up to that attic and that's the place you made the ladder?—A. I got a garage.

Q. So that's where you built the ladder?—A. I never built that ladder, never built any ladder.

Wilentz turned his questions to Hauptmann's arrest and the discovery of a ransom bill on him.

Q. You told the police that that $20 bill was the last of $300. That wasn't the truth. Right?—A. Yes.

Admits Deceiving Police.

Q. They found the money in the garage and you told them that was all and you were not telling the truth?—A. Yes.

Q. So they brought some more money to you?—A. Yes.

Q. And District Attorney Foley said to you "this is Lindbergh money" and you said "yes?"—A. I don't know what I said.

The attorney general again brought out the closet panel and sought to induce Hauptmann to agree that he had told the Bronx authorities that he made the notations on the panel.

"I can't remember, I guess it was like that," the defendant stated.

Q. So then when they brought the other money to you after you had told untruths twice, and Foley said to you, "what about the money, isn't it Lindbergh money," and you said, "yes?"—A. Well, if the first money was Lindbergh money, the second must have been Lindbergh money.

Wilentz swung back to the box of ransom money which Hauptmann said Fisch left with him.

Q. Why didn't you put the money from Fisch in the trunk?—A. It was wet already.

Hauptmann explained that sometimes rain seeped into the closet.

Q. How many times did it rain in? A. Two—three times.

Q. Why did you put it there when your best friend told you to put it in a dry place?—A. I forgot about it.

Hauptmann listed the things that were kept in the closet, including brooms and soap coupons.

Wilentz adduced that paper was not kept there because of the dampness. He exhibited a photo, however, in which rolls of paper were shown in the closet.

Hauptmann next gave him the dimensions of the little closet.

Q. You could see the top shelf of that closet?—A. Yes.

Q. Your wife used to go there every day. She never found or saw that box?—A. No.

Q. You never told her about it?—A. No.

Q. Anyway, you went there for a broom and hit the box somehow?—A. Yes.

Q. You say you were not glad or sad, only excited when you saw all this gold?—A. Yes.

Q. You didn't tell your wife—take her out and celebrate?—A. No.

Q. What size are you, Mr. Defendant?—A. Five foot 9½.

Q. What size shoe do you wear? A. Nine or 9½.

Q. When did you add on that half?—A. Sometimes I take 9, sometimes 9½.

Wilentz had taken a new angle of attack for the footprint found under the Lindbergh nursery was roughly that of a size 9 shoe, police have testified.

Wilentz sought to show that Hauptmann concealed the find from his wife and told her he was making money in the market.

"Loss Mostly Fisch's."

Q. Did you hear Mr. Frank, the Treasury expert, testify that your brokerage account lost $1,500 in 1933?—A. Yes, but it was not all mine.

Q. You mean the loss was mostly Fisch's and not all yours?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you hear Mr. Frank say you lost $4,634 in 1934?—A. I don't know.

Q. How much did you and Fisch deal in?—A. Fisch came in in March, 1932, and he lost $15,000.

Q. You know that isn't true?—A. It is true.

Q. You kept account of every stock you bought and for Fisch, too?—A. I know I keep books for Fisch one time.

Q. Now, didn't you lend Fisch $5,500?—A. No.

Q. Now, Hauptmann, you tell the truth. Didn't you say you loaned Fisch $5,500 in cash out of your private bank account?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you write Fisch's family after his death and say you loaned $5,500 out of your bank account?—A. Yes.

Q. My God—don't you tell anybody the truth?

The defense objected and Justice Trenchard admonished Wilentz to restrain his questions.

Hauptmann went through a long explanation of the loan to Fisch.

Q. You got a letter from his relatives, you knew he was dead?—A. Yes.

Q. You told them you gave him $5,500 from your private bank account?—A. Yes.

Q. You knew it wasn't the truth?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you get it out of your private bank account?—A. I didn't have a private bank account.

Q. So you didn't tell the truth?—A. No.

Q. You wanted to get your money back?—A. Yes.

Q. You wanted to be adminis-

Hauptmann Baby at Flemington

Associated Press Wirephoto.

Mrs. Bruno Hauptmann, wheeling her son, Manfred, through Flemington streets yesterday. She is expected to take the child into the courthouse where her husband is on trial.

down is that you were going to collect $50,000 ransom from him, isn't that true?"

"No, it's not true."

Wilentz took four strides across the courtroom. He was only 3 feet from the witness chair now. Hauptmann's eyes went down into slits and he leaned over on one side of his chair.

Then Wilentz shouted at him. Shouted at him in a voice that demanded an answer.

"Did you tell the truth—yes or no—in the Bronx about this board?"

Hauptmann dropped his head forward on his chest.

"Now, I will say, no, I didn't," he whispered.

Then Wilentz tore into him. The questions came rocketing at Hauptmann almost too fast for the court stenographer to get them.

"So you lied," Wilentz shouted. "You're having a fine time with me, aren't you?"

"No, I am innocent."

"You think you're a big shot, don't you?"

"No, but I am innocent."

Back came that refrain, time and again—"No, but I am innocent"—and now Hauptmann's voice also was rising to a shout. Wilentz gave no quarter.

"You smile every five minutes, don't you?" he yelled.

"I am innocent, I am innocent."

Shout at Each Other.

They were roaring at each other now. It had ceased to be a cross-examination and had become a feud. There they stood, shaking their fists in each other's faces.

Crazy things began to happen in the courtroom. A woman fainted, perspiration dripping to her chin, but she was so tightly packed into the throng that stood against the wall that it was impossible for her to fall. Nobody paid any attention to her. A girl in a blue beret, face and ears strained to catch every word, began to hum "The Carioca" as if this were some dance up the pike at Princeton University.

"You come here and tell lies on your oath," Wilentz shouted, and Hauptmann leaped half way out of the chair toward him.

"You stop that, you stop that——" the prisoner screamed in a voice that was climbing high and breaking.

Wilentz hammered away at him:

"You think you have great will power, don't you?"

"No; but I am innocent."

"You sit there and smile and smile, and lie and lie and lied——"

"Mister, you stop that lying yourself." Hauptmann shouted.

Fight Imminent.

Hauptmann's arm was out straight and taut, his forefinger almost against Wilentz's head. The attorney general's arm was rigid and accusing, pointing straight into the prisoner's eyes. Ten seconds more and it would have been a fist fight.

One mild little man—Frederick A. Pope, of defense counsel—had presence of mind enough to get up and say something. He wanted to make an objection.

"Particularly, you honor," he said, "I want to object to the line of questioning being pursued by the attorney general."

The cool, precise, legal phraseology sounded strange in this amphitheater of loud and unleashed anger. Justice Trenchard, too, saw that quick action was needed to prevent violence.

"I think we will take a five-minute recess," he said.

Wilentz turned his back on Hauptmann and went to the prosecution table.

The prisoner's face faded back to its chalky white and he got out of the witness chair to sit at the rail between his guards.

Outside, the thermometer was at zero; inside the air was suffocating. Spectators wedged in, shoulder to shoulder, gulped for oxygen that didn't exist. Men in heavy overcoats looked at one another and laughed to see perspiration trickling down hot cheeks.

Hauptmann's Admission.

At 4:30 p. m. the spectators went pushing and shoving out of the courtroom, still afire with the excitement of it all. Tomorrow they will be in line early, for Wilentz has more barbed questions to ask Hauptmann and it is possible that cross-examination may take another full day.

"It all depends on how Hauptmann behaves," Wilentz said after court adjourned.

Wilentz got these admissions out of Hauptmann today:

That the defendant hid money from his wife even though she was working in a bakery to help support the family.

That notes in a book of Hauptmann's, containing the word "boat" misspelled as "boad" were written in 1931 and not eight years ago, as Hauptmann testified Friday. The ransom notes also used the spelling "boad" for "boat."

That Hauptmann's finances were at such a low ebb just before the Lindbergh kidnaping that the defendant could not raise $74 with which to margin his brokerage account.

Trouble With Spelling.

That Hauptmann has trouble spelling the words "right" and "light." In one of his own diaries they were spelled "r-i-h-g-t" and "l-i-h-g-t." That is the way they were spelled in the ransom notes.

Most of the morning Wilentz and Hauptmann were good friends. The attorney general spent a good deal of his time, shoulder to shoulder, with the prisoner. Wilentz was standing beside the witness chair, going over the diaries with Hauptmann. They even traded a jest now and then.

"Were you ever rich before you came to this country?" Wilentz asked pleasantly.

"Sure," said Hauptmann, "I had billions in Germany during the inflation."

That was when a loaf of bread was selling in Germany for 20,000,000 marks one day and 100,000,000 the next. They both laughed.

Throughout the morning Wilentz kept popping one request at Hauptmann:

"Now, Mr. Defendant, spell the word 'signature' for me."

The attorney general was hoping to trap Hauptmann into putting an extra "n" in the word and spelling it the way the writer of the ransom notes spelled it—"s-i-n-g-n-a-t-u-r-e."

Each time Hauptmann came through with the correct spelling.

Then Wilentz handed him a check, and said:

"You wrote this, didn't you."

Hauptmann said he did.

Misspelling on Check.

"All right, spell out the word 'seventy' the way you wrote it on that check. Spell it loud so the jury can hear you."

Hauptmann studied it for half a minute and then began:

"That's right, you like to put extra 'n's' in your words, don't you. Now say 'Lindbergh' for me."

Hauptmann pronounced it "Lindenburgh" and then quickly corrected it to "Lindburgh."

They went along like that through most of the morning, bantering each other and slowly building up to the afternoon's outbust. Only once in the morning session did Hauptmann show any irritation. That was when Wilentz began asking him about little affairs of the heart in which he indulged while his wife was away in Europe.

"You went out to see a Mrs. Henkel, didn't you?" "You had coffee at her house in the morning—the second cup."

"Yes."

"And your wife didn't know about this?"

"I don't remember."

"Well she didn't, did she?"

Hauptmann flared for a moment:

"Do you know you are talking about my wife?" He said sharply.

Who won today's clash between Hauptmann and Wilentz is anybody's guess. The State contends it wrung some highly damaging testimony out of him. But defense lawyers said after court:

"I guess our man gave Mr. Wilentz, the man on the flying trapeze, a bad day."

D. C. to Repair Adams School Despite Its Age

Scene of $15,000 Fire Not to Get New Furnaces, 'Needed Elsewhere.'

Plans for repairing the damage that a four-alarm fire wrought yesterday upon the Adams School, which was recommended for replacement in 1908, are being made today while officials and their aids who were evicted by the blaze seek new working quarters.

Used since 1930 as an annex of public school headquarters in the Franklin Building, the 47-year-old school on R street, west of Seventeenth, was damaged to the extent of $15,000. The fire was caused by overheated furnaces and a defective flue. The two hot-air furnaces are of the same type as the ones in the Blair Grade School which almost precipitated a pupil strike last fall.

Although a special investigating commission recommended the replacement 26 years ago of Adams, with seven other school buildings still in use, it is planned to return the red brick structure to service as soon as possible.

Repairs to Take Two Weeks.

The basement and both upper floors, on the south side, were badly damaged by fire, smoke and water, and it will be at least two weeks before the building can be reoccupied, Jere J. Crane, first assistant superintendent of schools in charge of business affairs, said yesterday. The north, or front, part of the building, which housed $30,000 worth of highly inflammable motion-picture film and other visual education materials, was damaged only slightly.

A carpenter working in the second floor office of Dr. E. M. C. Barnes, director of music in the public schools, discovered the fire. He notified E. J. Lockwood, director of night and summer schools, who telephoned an alarm. So thick and black was the smoke when Lockwood turned to leave the building that he was unable to find a door and had to leap from a first-floor window.

His cries of "Fire!" had aroused other departmental directors and assistants, and all reached the outdoors safely after fighting their way through dense clouds of smoke.

Officials in Building.

Among them were Directors Rebecca Stoneroad, of physical education; Jessie Le Salle, of the educational research and mental testing division; Miss Elizabeth Dyer, visual education; Miss Ethel Bray, art; Miss Esther Scott, elementary science; Dr. Barnes and J. E. Zearfuss; head of manual training and custodian of the building. Miss Catherine Watkins, director of the kindergarten department, was absent.

Two guinea pigs, which were about to be presented to pupils of Whittier School as pets, were rescued by Charles Smith Beall, an employe.

While Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom directed his men in fighting the blaze, Dr. Barnes stood outside mourning the loss of a 30-year-old scrap book and numerous records, none of them replaceable.

Of the eight school buildings condemned in 1908, four—Force, Jefferson, Lincoln and Webster—are still in classroom use. Appropriation already has been made, however, for replacement of Jefferson Junior High, it was pointed out by R. L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools.

Uses of Buildings Described.

Force and Lincoln are elementary schools for white and colored pupils, respectively. Webster has Americanization classes for adults. The old Abbott School is used as a cabinetmaking shop. Berret is an administration building for special work in Divisions 10 and 13, and Bradley was abandoned recently to make way for enlargement of the Department of Agriculture.

Classroom use of the Adams School was discontinued upon completion of the John Quincy Adams School near Nineteenth street and Florida avenue in January, 1930.

Installation of a new heating plant in Adams school is not contemplated, Mr. Haycock said following inspection of fire damage caused by the old one, because there are about 25 other classroom buildings in need oof similar attention and these must be taken care of first. A new flue will be put in, he said.

Baltimore Utility Seen Ready to Act

'Favorable Move' on Cuts Now Reported Probable.

Baltimore, Jan. 28 (AP).—The public service commission reported "no developments" in the Potomac-Edison rate case today. Another reliable source, however, stated the utility company probably will make a "favorable move" before February 1.

The commission recently rejected the electric company's proposed new rate schedule on grounds that one-third of the $325,000 reduction in gross revenue it ordered was allotted by the company to subsidiaries serving other States.

Potomac-Edison serves Western Maryland counties and sections in Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The commission ordered the reduction to take place in February billings, and threatened to enforce a schedule of its own if the utility company did not submit a satisfactory one.

Ham on Porch Stripped to Bone By Hungry Birds

Frederick, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—Mrs. Stewart Filby, of Frederick, unintentionally presented to hungry birds here 10 pounds of freshly-cooked ham.

Mrs. Filby cooked the ham and hung it on a porch to cool while she visited a neighbor. When she returned, only the ham bone remained.

Neighborhood birds, hungry after several days of snow, had taken all the meat.

Brown to Ask Police Naming In Gangs' 'Link'

Major to Demand Schulte Reveal Evidence at Crime Inquiry.

knew of Jimmy La Fontaine's place.

"You've heard of 'Jew Boy' Dietz, haven't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"And Mickey McDonald? Killeen? Sam Beard?"

Maryland authorities have abandoned efforts to solve the murder of Allen Wilson, newspaper route agent, who was slain by persons believed waiting in ambush for McDonald, Commissioner Hazen said.

"Don't you believe legalized gambling would solve the gambling problem?" Commissioner Hazen gave his answer "off the record." "Why of course it would reduce your problems," Mr. Schulte said.

Maj. Brown Reveals Stand.

Later he asked the same question of Maj. Brown.

"I'll will answer that in two ways," the police chief replied. "Personally I never gamble. Officially legalization of gambling would solve our problem to some extent. Legalized gambling would be open and under police supervision and only decent gamblers and places would be permitted to operate. Those who wanted to gamble would not have to deal with law violators."

"Haven't some of the murders here been due to one element encroaching on the territory of another?"

"Yes. That has been back of some of our murders. Most murders, however, have been crimes of passion. The murder of Allen Wilson, we believe, was committed by men waiting to get Mickey McDonald. It was a brutal murder, rather poorly done, and far from the efficiency of the professional killer. If MacDonald would speak freely he could help solve the murder. The murder was committed at McDonald's home in nearby Maryland but we are interested in it because he is engaged in the numbers game in Washington.

"In every department in Washington there are persons taking numbers bets," Maj. Brown said, emphasizing the extent gambling had increased. He added, "I will say that we have done more against gambling in the last year than ever has been done before."

Organized Crime Denied.

Commissioner Hazen had deprecated complaints of widespread crime in the District.

"I don't think we have any organized crime in the District," he said.

Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, chairman, read a newspaper story quoting Maj. Brown that there was organized crime in the District.

"A little," Hazen agreed. "The tri-State gang operated here, but they worked in other cities, too. The 'purple gang' came in here. There is some organized gambling, but I want to say right now we have made it pretty hot for the gamblers."

"Is your police force adequate?" asked Mr. Randolph.

"No, sir; emphatically not."

"Is the force competent?" asked the chairman.

"It is," the Commissioner said. "So far as increasing the efficiency of the force is concerned I haven't any specific recommendations.

Asks Reforms in Law.

Existing laws were inadequate, he said, and recommended enactment of the pending gambling bill making possession of gambling records or paraphernalia prima facie evidence of guilt; a bill increasing penalties for prostitution; an automobile financial responsibility bill; a negligent homicide law, and increased penalties for larceny between $35 and $75. The United States Park Police ought to be merged with the Metropolitan Police, he said.

"Crime has increased in Washington because the number of people here has increased and you have a large transient population here," Representative Virginia E. Jenckes said.

"Exactly," Mr. Hazen agreed, "We have a very large transient population."

Representative Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, asked whether Washington was a "cesspool" of transients. Commissioner Hazen said no, not a cesspool, and after he had been pressed said a cross scetion of the Washington population would "average all right" in comparison with other cities.

Force Held Inadequate.

Replying to Representative Randolph, Commissioner Hazen said, "There is very much difference in the character of the people who frequent the joints on Ninth street and the Willard Hotel."

Maj. Brown told the committee that the 1,306 men on the force was inadequate and gave a detailed account of the assignment of a number of men. There was left only 758 men for patrol duty, divided into three shifts each day, without allowing for those absent on their day off, or on sick or annual leave, he said. Of the 758 there were 48 required to drive patrol wagons. He insisted that the presence of a uniformed patrolman afforded most protection to a neighborhood.

The hearings are executive and the general public is not admitted. Newspaper reporters are present, however, and only an occasional answer has been withheld from publication as "off the record."

Underwood & Underwood.

Having got the situation well in hand, these two firemen went in for a bit of relaxation by pounding out a hot tune on a piano in Adams School.

Decision Delayed On Death Inquiry

Winchester, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Pending the result of further inquiry of officers into circumstances surrounding the death early Sunday of Guy Barrick, 33, local furniture dealer, who was found shot to death at his home at Greenwood, a short distance east of this city, Coroner A. J. Tavenner said today he would withhold his decision until Tuesday.

At an inquest which did not end until nearly midnight Sunday, a half dozen or more witnesses testified that Barrick participated in a party which began at his store and ended at his residence. There was conflicting testimony, officers said, regarding alleged drinking during the party.

Mrs. Barrick testified that she found the body of her husband about 10 o'clock Sunday morning. She said she spent the night in the room directly over that in which the body was found by the officers. Near the body was a shotgun, apparently the weapon from which the fatal shot was fired, officers said.

63 Stockholders Sued For Bank Assessments

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Because they had not paid approximately $20,000 in stock assessments, 63 stockholders of the People's Banking Co., Smithsburg, were named today in an equity suit filed here by John J. Ghinger, receiver.

The suit would force payment of assessments equal to the par value of the bank stock held by the defendants.

Senate Passes April 1 Return Of U.S. Salaries

Compromise Goes to House Plan Seen Acceptable to President.

earlier would cost the country slightly over $21,000,000.

The restoration applies to all military and naval services, as well as to Government employes in the executive and legislative establishments.

Average Amount $15 to $18.

While it constitutes a partial victory for the Government employes, the average amount involved for each employe is between $15 and $18.

The pay amendment was stripped of all other proposed repeals of economy act provisions, such as the ban on reallocations of jobs, in order to facilitate passage.

Restoration of full pay on April 1 would restore Government salaries to the base of March, 1933, just two years ago, as the economy act effected the 15 per cent reduction on March 20, 1933. The first 5 per cent was dropped February 1, last year, and the second 5 per cent on July 1, last year, after Congress had passed the 5-and-10 compromise plan over President Roosevelt's veto.

The Senate amendment was adopted without a dissenting vote though without a record ballot.

Says Restoration Hinted.

Senator McCarran, in proposing the original amendment, said "it is time that the toiling masses of the country are given full restoration of salaries."

He expressed the belief that national recovery has gone far enough to merit the restoration.

Senator Byrnes, in asking McCarran to accept an April 1 compromise, pointed out that a retroactive amendment would create numerous complications, such as payments to employes who left the Government service between January 1 and the time an act might be passed.

Byrnes also offered another amendment, likewise accepted by McCarran, to prevent the possible application of the salary restoration to certain commissions whose compensation was permanently curtailed.

House Approval Predicted.

House leaders declined to predict what action the House will take on the Senate amendment, but sponsors of January 1 pay bills, including Representatives McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Boylan (Democrat), of New York, said they believed the House would concur if given an opportunity to vote.

Speaker Byrns said he did not know what attitude the House may take, but Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the steering committee, said the amendment would be approved "if it has Administration approval."

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, issued a formal statement that "it is a source of distinct gratification . . . that this decisive step has been taken to right an injustice and an economic fallacy. The National Federation extends thanks both to President Roosevelt and to the legislators who made this adjustment possible."

Steward expressed regret that January 1 had not been adopted but added that "the best interests of hundreds of thousands of workers involved dictated reasonable compromise."

Virginian, Slashed By 3 Men, Drives 10 Miles for Help

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Robert Simpson, of Front Royal, reported an attack on him last night by three men who slashed his neck, narrowly missing the jugular vein, and left him in the road.

After reviving, Simpson, who was alone in his car, drove 10 miles to the office of a local physician, who dressed his wound, which required five stitches. He was almost frozen and had suffered much loss of blood.

The attack occurred after midnight on the Strasburg-Front Royal road, 3 miles east of Strasburg. The injured man is suffering from a severe nervous shock and has been unable to give a full account of the affair.

He had little money on his person. It is understood he did not recognize his assailants.

Board's Order To Put Donovan Back in Lorton

Warrant Issued for Return of Paroled Man From Indiana Farm.

A warrant for the arrest of James F. (Buzz) Donovan, paroled District convict and storm center of a recent investigation by the District Parole Board, has been issued and he will be returned immediately to Lorton to complete his 10-year sentence, according to announcement last night by Wilbur La Roe, one of the three members of the board.

Donovan has been in Indiana working on a chicken farm since his release from Lorton last November, according to Mr. La Roe.

The parole commissioner, in making the announcement of the issuance of the warrant, said that the Indiana probation officer to whom Donovan was required to report was warm in his praise of the paroled man's conduct and that although he was being returned to Lorton he had in no way violated the terms of his parole.

"It seems," said Mr. La Roe, "that our plan did not work out quite so well. Donovan was paroled to work on an Indiana chicken farm operated by a close friend of Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions. The farmers, however, found out that Donovan was a former convict and made his life so miserable that he appealed to the probation officer in Indiana to find him another job. This official obtained a job for him in South Bend.

"When this news was communicated to the local board, the members were loath to grant permission for Donovan to work in a city and so issued the warrant for his arrest."

Donovan offered to return voluntarily. He has served two years of a ten-year term for robbery.

Smith Reynolds Kin Question Second Nuptials

Ask Probe of Validity of Divorce, Marriage to Libby Holman.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 28 (U.P.).—The three surviving children of the late R. J. Reynolds, tobacco multi-millionaire, today questioned, for the first time, validity of the marriage of their brother, Smith Reynolds, to Libby Holman, Broadway singer.

In a paper answering North Carolina's claim to tax from the inherited estate of Smith Reynolds, the Reynolds heirs asked investigation of validity of their dead brother's divorce from Anne Cannon.

As a natural sequence, the paper pointed out, if the divorce should be found invalid, young Reynolds' subsequent marriage to Libby Holman also would be illegal.

Proposed Settlement.

Despite their questioning of the divorce and second marriage, the heirs proposed settlement of their brother's personal estate, which, separate from his inherited estate, amounts to $182,000, as follows:

One-third to his first child, Anne Cannon Reynolds, 11; one-third to his second child, Christopher Smith Reynolds, son of Libby Holman; one-third to Libby Holman, all of these to be computed after the State has been paid inheritance tax on the personal estate.

Their answer denied the right of North Carolina to collect a regular inheritance tax on the approximately $25,000,000 estate, and proposed a compromise under which North Carolina would receive a stipulated $2,000,000 inheritance fee before any other division of the estate should take place.

Attorneys for R. J. Reynolds, jr., of Winstom-Salem; Nancy Reynolds Bagley, of Greenwich, Conn., and Mary Reynolds Babcock, also of Greenwich, filed the answer in Forsyth County superior court today by agreement of other litigants, although the allotted time for filing papers in the complicated case expired Saturday.

The case may be heard in court shortly after February 18.

Fair and Warmer Capital Forecast; Drifting Ice in Chesapeake Bay.

Associated Press reported, and its cost was estimated in the millions.

Lowest temperatures of the season were reported in northern New York and New England.

The mercury ranged from 20 to 40 below around Pittsfield, Mass., and equalled an all-time low of 20 below in Rochester, N. Y. New York City had another zero day.

Another death in British Columbia brought the total of flood and avalanche victims in the Far Northwest to 27. The high waters were receding, but the last of the trains marooned more than a week by the blizzard was not expected to reach Vancouver before tonight.

While Washingtonians enjoyed winter sports, Middle Western temperatures were in the 30s and 40s.

Drifting Ice Menace In Chesapeake Bay

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—Watermen turned anxious eyes on the Chesapeake last night as Maryland, after 24 hours of sub-zero weather, still had a day or so of extremely cold weather in prospect.

The ice situation on the bay was expected to become more serious as the Weather Bureau predicted partly cloudy to cloudy skies and temperatures remaining between a minimum of 10 to 15 degrees and a maximum of 30 degrees.

Large and heavy fields of drift ice dotted the bay from Sandy Point down. The lighthouse tender Violet worked at top speed yesterday taking up the expensive light buoys and substituting for them the can and nun buoys.

The Government station at Webers, near Oakland, reported a low reading of 22 degrees below zero yesterday and Chewsville, near Hagerstown, reported 19 degrees below. At Frederick the Monacacy River was frozen over and the mercury stood at 18 degrees below.

Oystermen, whose boats are icebound at Baltimore, were given food yesterday by State relief officials. Supplies also have been given oystermen whose craft are icebound in the harbor at Annapolis.

24 Below Near Leesburg.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Loudoun County experienced the coldest weather last night in years. Temperatures early this morning ranged from 12 below zero to 24 below.

Leesburg reported 15 below zero; Round Hill, 18 below; Purcellville, 12 below, and Waterford, 24 below.

Side roads still are blocked; traffic is tied up and a number of activities in the county have been suspended because of the intense cold.

Shenandoah Valley Hit.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.) With the official thermometer registering 14 degrees below zero and household thermometers in low-lying sections registering 20 below, the Shenandoah Valley this morning experienced the coldest weather of winter. The temperature rose to 20 during the day, but was falling rapidly after dark.

Little of the snow melted and highways still are covered, but are open to traffic. Some telephone and electric lines still are down.

The previous low this winter was 13 below Friday.

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Cloudy and warmer Tuesday, colder Tuesday night; Wednesday fair and colder; gentle shifting winds becoming moderate northwest by Tuesday night.

For Virginia—Generally fair and warmer Tuesday; Wednesday fair and colder.

For Maryland—Cloudy and warmer, possibly light snow in north portion Tuesday; colder Tuesday night; Wednesday fair and colder.

Conditions.

The minor disturbance that was central over northeastern North Dakota Sunday night has moved east-southeastward to the lower Lake region, Parry Sound, Ont., 30.06 inches, attended by light snow in its path. A disturbance of vast extent is centered off the southwest coast of Alaska, Kodiak, 28.94 inches, and pressure remains low over southwestern Greenland, Godthaab, 29.34 inches. High pressure prevails elsewhere over North America with centers as follows: Gods Lake, Man., 30.62 inches; Halifax, N. S., 30.58 inches, and Boise, Idaho, 30.46 inches. The temperature has risen from Minnesota and the central and southern Plains States eastward to the Atlantic Coast, while it has fallen in portions of the Dakotas and Northern Rocky Mountain region.

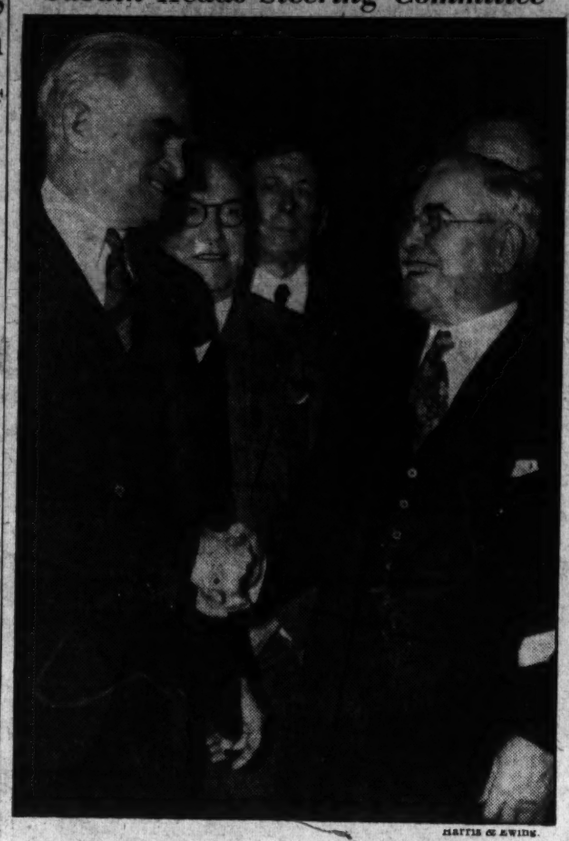
Sabath Heads Steering Committee



HARRIS & EWING.

Representative Adolph Sabath, of Illinois, right, elected chairman of the Democratic Steering Committee of the House yesterday, as he was congratulated by Speaker Joseph W. Byrns.

'Stop That,' You Lie, He Shouts in Clash With Prosecutor.

trator of his estate? You told them not to trust lawyers?—A. You are all wrong.

Q. You told them not to take a lawyer?—A. I told them to take a lawyer, but it would not be advisable.

Q. A backhanded way to tell them not to?—A. No.

Q. In that letter, if you put it there in German "$5,500 from my private bank account" there couldn't be much chance of a mistake could there?—A. No, I didn't want them to know Fisch was in the stock market.

Dealings With Fisch.

Wilentz led the prisoner into a discussion of his business relations with Fisch. He said he put in $12,000 in cash and Fisch put in $21,000 in furs.

Q. Did you take $12,000 in stocks into that business?—A. No, I never had that much.

Wilentz produced an account book and asked Hauptmann to indicate any insertions by the police. The defendant agreed the writing was his.

Q. You did put in $12,000 then? A. Yes. Let me explain. I made some in the stock market and Fisch put in $5,500 or maybe $3,000.

Wilentz asked him to explain whether Fisch put in $5,500 or $3,000.

Q. So your investment was $17,500?—A. Yes.

Q. And Fisch had $21,000 in furs up?—A. Yes.

Q. So you had $12,000 in stock and $5,500 in cash?—A. Not $12,000, but $9,500 in stocks.

Q. So you were wrong when you wrote the Fisch family you had $12,000 in stocks?—A. Yes.

Q. Instead of the $12,000 you had only $9,500?—A. Yes.

Q. Your books show $12,000. You wrote the Fisch family it was $12,000?—A. Yes.

Q. Was it the truth? Fisch made up no money?—A. Fisch put up $2,500.

The account book was introduced in evidence.

Q. You were quite a bookkeeper weren't you?—A. I don't think so.

Q. You were very careful in your accounts?—A. I don't think so.

Q. But you did put up $17,500 in this Fisch business?—A. Yes.

Q. In September 1, 1933?—A. Yes.

Matter of Bookkeeping.

Q. You put up $17,500 all together and you didn't take a dollar from the shoe box?—A. Yes.

"That $5,500 I never saw," Hauptmann explained. "It was only a matter of bookkeeping."

Q. So you didn't tell the Fisch family the truth?—A. It was the truth.

Q. You were spending their money already?—A. Yes.

Q. You had from August 15 to September 19?—A. Yes.

Q. You never told them or wrote them you found the money in that box?—A. No.

Q. So you wanted to cheat your best friend, didn't you?—A. No.

Q. You wouldn't tell his family you wanted to cheat your best friend's family?—A. No.

Q. You say that, in your own hanwriting, you got only $2,500 from him?—A. I got $16,000.

Q. Can't you show us anything, except your word that you got this money from Fisch?—A. I can't.

Q. Take a look at the book "July 10, 1933, Isador Fisch puts over to the account of Isador and Richard $2,103," that your writing?—A. I remember.

Q. So you bought $6,533 worth of stock for Isador and he put over $2,103?—A. That's right partly.

Hauptmann listed several persons, relatives, for whom he bought stock.

Wilentz sought to bring from the defendant the admission he told friends he was making money in the market and scoffed at their hard work.

"You are mistaken," Hauptmann replied.

Oil Firm Plotting Death, Long States

what he described as a plot to "murder" him, he said he would not be surprised "if several officials were removed from office."

Long, who sped back to Washington Saturday night amid rumors of a plot to assassinate him, hurled his charge at the Standard Oil on the floor of the United States Senate today.

An agent for the Standard Oil, whom he named as Fred C. O'Rourke, had declared him "Public Enemy No. 1," Senator Long asserted.

Raising his voice to a shout, Long declared that O'Rourke had published a statement saying in effect that the Louisiana dictator "must be killed."

Long said the uprising against him had been "squelched" by his militia and blamed it upon higher-ups of the Standard Oil, with whom he recently engaged in a controversy over newly-enacted oil tax laws.

The dramatic claim to a lengthy and bitter feud between Long and his enemies developing over the week-end left the capital tense tonight.

Citizens muttered and feeling ran high in the neighboring parishes of Iberville, West Baton Rouge and East and West Feliciana, officials of which were named at a Long-conducted court hearing Saturday as plotters in a conspiracy to assassinate him.

Seven companies of the National Guardsmen encamped on the Statehouse grounds. The city and parish remained under strict martial law.

The guardsmen took technical possession of the East Baton Rouge Parish sheriff's office today when provost marshal headquarters were established there with Lieut. L. C. Cave, of New Orleans, in command.

The regular duties of the office were not interfered with, but the move firmly established Long's control over the parish, which he plans to make into a little "District of Columbia" as the capital of his empire.

Long took the Senate floor to charge that the Standard Oil Co. was plotting his assassination to prevent him from continuing his "exposure" of the company's asserted action in the Bolivia-Paraguay war. He said that after the Standard Oil Co. reached a "compromise" with him over a tax on the refining of oil "those higher-ups in the company were holding a meeting and planning a meeting against my administration."

"Those little fellows were no leaders," he said, referring to officials of the Square Deal Association. "They have all disappeared. The real leaders were the high officials of the Standard Oil Co."

William S. Lyons, Ex-Banker, Dead

William S. Lyons, 40, of the 800 block of Madison street northwest, former assistant secretary of the Union Trust Co., died early yesterday at his residence after a lingering illness.

Mr. Lyons was retired by his firm in 1932. He was a graduate of local schools and Georgetown Law School, and during the World War served in France.

Surviving Mr. Lyons is his wife, his mother, Mrs. John Lyons, and three small children. He also leaves four sisters, Mrs. Chester Berry and Mrs. Frank Holford, of Washington, and Mrs. Ben Wellwood, of West Englewood, N. J., and Mrs. Warren Maxwell, of Hartford, Conn.

Funeral services will be held at the Church of the Nativity tomorrow at 9 a. m., with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

A Test Vote.

Mr. Lawrence Dennis, whose critics have never accused him of failing to be forthright and unequivocal, told the Town Hall audience on Sunday night that the United States is on the road to Fascism, "and what of it?"

Mr. Dennis and other believers in the passing of American democracy will find, before this issue becomes acute, that there is a great deal "of it." But with one point in his thesis there must be general accord. There is much more of a drift toward Fascist psychology in the country than any but analytical citizens fully realize.

One of many indications has come sharply to the fore during the debate, now fortunately all but ended, on American adherence to the World Court. On this subject there is a strikingly clear-cut line-up between the forces of reason on one side and those of bigotry and intolerance on the other.

Most advocates of American membership are restrained in their arguments. Knowing the facts, and scorning to overstate them, they merely assert that this is one step in the curbing of international anarchy in which the fundamental interests of the United States call for participation, and to which this country can lend itself without the slightest surrender of sovereignty, the slightest fear of any entangling alliance, or the slightest qualification upon complete freedom of national action.

Most opponents of American membership, on the other hand, are utterly unrestrained in their presentation. No assertion is too exaggerated, no emotional appeal too blatant, no denunciation of "foreigners" too preposterous, to be utilized. It is this notable division in the type of argument which gives the pending World Court vote an importance far greater than anything implied by the decision itself.

The basic essential of Fascism is a bitter and ignorant inferiority complex which seeks to glorify an intolerant nationalism by denouncing everything outside its highly circumscribed mental horizon. And the arguments used by the World Court opposition have been so psychologically similar to the Nazi invectives against "non-Aryans" as to horrify all those who have any real love for and understanding of American traditions.

By the forthcoming vote in the Senate, among other portents, we shall know more clearly the validity of the predictions made with such assurance by Mr. Lawrence Dennis on Sunday night.

The Birthday Ball.

Broadly speaking, the practice of soliciting funds for whatever benevolent purpose by means of a subscription entertainment is distasteful—smacking too much of the daily quid pro quo and in direct contrast with the fundamental principle of charity. The Birthday Ball for the President, however, stands out as a notable exception.

Washington will trip the light fantastic tomorrow evening not only to celebrate Mr. Roosevelt's anniversary, but also to further the fight against infantile paralysis. Seventy per cent of the proceeds will be spent to help crippled children of the neighborhood, while the remainder will be turned over to a national commission for research to the end that the childhood scourge may be completely eradicated. With services almost entirely donated and with a citizens committee to vouch for the bookkeeping, the affair deserves the hearty support of the community.

It is well, also, to utilize this particular occasion to demonstrate that the impulse to help unfortunates through personal generosity has not yet been atrophied by the socialization trend.

The Spectacle At Flemington.

Steps are now being taken to reduce the number of persons admitted to the courtroom at Flemington. The aisles have been so crowded for the past week that court officials have had great difficulty getting to their designated places. Mink coats jostle homespun; Social Registerites forget their manners and point out interesting details to each other; actors make mental notes of every expression crossing the faces of those on the witness stand. Guthrie McClintic, theatrical producer, says the trial is "the greatest drama of this age."

It is said that women in the audience, as well as those on the jury, averted their faces Friday when Attorney General Wilents questioned Hauptmann on the word "boad." The nervous writhing of the accused man was too much even for the curiosity mongers. The aged court crier, unable to stand the strain, withdrew to the judge's chamber.

From the viewpoint of "good theater," perhaps Mr. McClintic is right. Any night involving life and death naturally takes on dramatic potentialities. But the audience at Flemington might have the elementary decency to remember that this is no three-act play from which the actors may retire when their parts are said. There is a horrible note of mass morbidity in this crowding into the courtroom day after day, in this gluttonous feasting on a spectacle which at times is so agonizing that civilized men and women must lower their eyes.

Perhaps the all-high mark in cultural debasement was exhibited when a young woman spectator attended the trial with a miniature replica of the "kidnap ladder" pinned to her fur coat. In a contest for the crudest and most insensitive action of the year, that young woman should stand more than a chance of uncontested triumph.

A Riot In The Lodge.

Of all the stimulating controversies which beset the Nation, that which has developed among bonus proponents stands first. Commander Belgrano, of the American Legion, has replied without pulling any punches to Representative Patman's charges of legion sabotage, and the fight is on. Paradoxically, the harsh words bandied between Mr. Patman and the legion on this issue harmonize into sweet music for the Nation as a whole.

Representative Patman's position, in his own opinion, is unassailable. Since he is the author of the original bonus bill, which has twice passed the House, he thinks that his measure should once more be accepted. In other words, he is loathe to sacrifice his position as spearhead of the bonus forces. But many in the legion seem fed up with him. And its national commander strongly resents such unspeakable epithets as "banker," which Mr. Patman recklessly applies to discredit those who disagree with his projected legislation.

It was Mr. Patman who invented the magic formula for paying the bonus and saving the country at the same time. Indeed, he still offers Congress a plan of reviving business through the distribution of $2,400,000,000 among veterans without creating any "additional debt." But old man Townsend has breezed in from the West and stolen a lot of Patmanesque fire. And the legion, being largely composed of solid citizens who have a sense of what inflation would mean, is cruelly pointing out that Mr. Patman's proposal to create $2,400,000,000 out of thin air is "a currency measure first and a so-called bonus measure last."

The legion has been old-fashioned enough to suggest that funds to pay the bonus must actually come out of the Treasury. To the bonus-inflationists that is a ghastly heresy. So the legion is accused of throwing "a monkey wrench into the legislative machinery"—of advocating a "bankers' bonus bill." And Mr. Patman virtually admits that all save honor is lost.

What the legion has done, of course, is to put the demand for prepayment of the bonus on a realistic basis. It has had the courage and self-respect to make its demand upon Congress without any illusive sugar coating or other mumbo-jumbo. In effect, it has told the public that there is no practical means of paying the bonus now without either greatly increasing taxes or incurring further gobs of debt. Mr. Patman is doubtless right in assuming that such unpalatable truth scares some of the bonusites. Especially is this true when they recall President Roosevelt's insistence that only Administration bills can be permitted to add to the deficit.

Prepayment of the bonus attained its greatest popularity in the House when it was viewed as taking another rabbit out of the hat. All the critics in the country were then unable to make Congressmen see the very obvious illusions in the Patman bill. Now the legion itself is bringing education to Mr. Patman. The sweetness generally associated with light, however, is reserved for those on the sidelines in this very pretty scrap.

Primavera.

From Chicago comes word that the new Montgomery Ward spring and summer general catalogue is in the mails. Market analysts have pounced upon the bulky tome to discover that "prices on the whole average slightly below the preceding fall and winter catalogue." More statistically minded observers remark that the new issue contains 18 per cent more pages than the corresponding book of a year ago. Typographers and advertising experts note the increased use of photography and rotogravure.

In the bald language of the financial marts, farm wagon prices range from "unchanged to lower." Automobile tire prices are up, it appears. Pinnacle prints are offered at 15 cents a yard against 17 cents in the previous general book. Electric ironers and the new electric washers show no price change (look well, ye of the Tennessee Valley). Two models of cream separators are now equipped with stainless steel discs, but their prices (alas!) have been advanced. The greatest use of space appears principally in nine of the company's 40 departments, as follows: underwear, hosiery, shoes, men's clothes, floor coverings, curtains and drapes, furniture, house furnishings and children's clothes.

But to less calculating folk, to the farm and fireside elements of the Nation, the arrival of this substantial institution provokes no such abstract scrutiny. Instead, symbolizing the ceaseless turn of the seasons, it harbingers the coming new year more definitely than any almanac solstice chart. Spring is almost at hand: new fashions, new models, new ideas. Already the eyes of millions are poring through the encyclopedic pages; pencils check and recheck in the endless pleasure of resolving budgetary facts with fairy godmother fancy.

Not a page is missed as the rejuvenating business of compiling the itemized blanks proceeds, ordering the latest Boston Stone shoes, the adjustable curtain-rods, the 120-stop accordians, the two-ply munsingwear, the new improved harrow-blades, the lariats, the hot water bags, the patent hog oilers, down to and including the "flashy Kollege Kut service trousers, with 12-inch cuffs (state size and pattern desired)."

The Show-Down Approaches.

It is becoming more evident every day that President Roosevelt will have to come to grips with the patronage hunters if the recovery program is to be saved from progressive sabotage. Not satisfied with the addition of nearly 100,000 employes to the Government pay roll, virtually all of them without benefit of the civil service, a number of Congressmen are now plotting to extend their power over personnel matters in a most vicious way. If they should be permitted to succeed some of the most vital agencies of the New Deal will be in jeopardy.

The drive to intimidate executive agencies controlling large staffs will come to a head at a caucus of House Democrats tonight. But some of the more vociferous spoilsmen have already carried their fight to the floor of the House in the hope of browbeating officials who will not yield to their demands. Representative Blanton, for example, openly appeals for elimination of the item from which salaries of the HOLC are paid, unless that organization bows to political dictation.

Incidentally, this vociferous representative from Texas has given the public a key to the whole patronage imbroglio. He accuses the HOLC of violating "the understanding we have all had concerning appointments." That agreement was made between certain Congressmen and Postmaster General Farley in his capacity as chairman of the Democratic National Committee and chief patronage dispenser. Among other promises concerning the RFC, the AAA, etc., it appears that Mr. Farley told the Congressmen they could appoint appraisers for the HOLC. But Chairman Fahey of the HOLC denied them that privilege for the obvious reason that appraisers must be trained specialists, not party camp followers.

From these circumstances it appears that the Postmaster General has countenanced a near-conspiracy with politicians, which, if permitted to materialize, would undermine important agencies of recovery. Against serious odds Mr. Fahey rescued the HOLC from an orgy of political corruption in the early stages of its development. Is his organization now to be excoriated and punished because it refuses to sanction practices that would almost certainly lead to corruption?

The public has a right to know whether any member of the Cabinet is supporting this outrageous demand that Federal business organizations, created to relieve acute distress, surrender control over vital functions to unscrupulous politicians.

Snow Special.

Bright and early Sunday morning, according to the New York papers, a special train pulled out of the Grand Central Station packed with 500 gaitered and be-mittened persons whose skis and ski-poles cluttered the racks and passageways of the cars.

For three hours or more as the engine chuffed up through the Connecticut hills on little-used freight tracks in the back country, the coaches rang with the never-ending debate on the relative merits of practically identical waxes while a guitar and accordion thrummed the throng through choruses of such boreal ballads as "Wenn Wir Marschieren" and "Medel, Willst Du Schneeschuh Laufen?" After a day of variously gliding and tumbling in the foothills, the varicolored assembly piled back into the waiting cars to return for another steam-heated week in the city.

The moral? None at all. It is a pleasant picture: It has a Continental, particularly Alpine, flavor: It suggests that sports in winter need not be entirely a matter of smoke-filled arenas and pop bottles. We wish we'd been able to go along.

The Dionne babies had a visit recently from the Premier of Ontario and several members of the Legislature. The Ontario government may well point with pride to the quintuplets and challenge the world to produce their like.

Amelia Earhart says she can think of no reason for having made the 2,400-mile transpacific flight. Many think she did it just because.

World Peaceways, Inc., is using a great deal of display space in advertising for peace. We suggest also a few locals in the "Lost" column.

Rail Income And Outgo.

(From the San Francisco Chronicle.)

In its annual report to Congress the Interstate Commerce Commission virtually concedes the case set up by the railroads in their application for increased freight rates. The commission declares the roads can not, at present freight and passenger rates, stand the burden of the wage increases they are compelled to make in the early part of this year unless they get more business. It points out that the present freight rates and passenger fares are below the level of those of 1926, whereas the wages paid, as they are to be restored this year, will be above the level of those of 1926.

Thus the commission, although not explicitly making the point, recognizes the principle that wages can be paid only when the wherewithal to pay them is coming in.

The class 1 steam railroads had net deficits in 1932 and 1933 and the commission, drafting its report before the year was closed, figured that 1934 would tell the same tale of more outgo than income.

Applauds Four Billion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Were this country put up and sold on the auction block, say July 4 next, and all other nations combined were able to buy and pay for it, Uncle Sam would not realize as much from the sale, including water power, capitals, skyscrapers, railroads, paved highways, eminent domains and all else as it would have been worth to Christopher Columbus in 1492.

Bewildered, intoxicated by the apparently inexhaustible wealth of its natural resources, Uncle Sam's tenants during the one and one-half centuries of squatter sovereignty have destroyed 90 per cent of this Nation's forest wealth, and by blundering tillage and deforestation and resultant erosion, about 55 per cent of the crop content of its soil besides.

In the summer of 1932 in a letter to Mr. Roosevelt, his opinion was sought as to a suggested permanent solution of the Mississippi River problem. His reply indicated his keen and long-felt interest in that, in flood control in general and in forest conservation and erosion. He added that conservation of natural resources was very close to his heart and would receive especial attention at his hand if elected. His message of the 24th instant, to my view the most constructive of his career to date, bears out his statement.

The entire Nation is, therefore, to be congratulated upon the prospect of President Roosevelt being given a free hand in dispensing the four billion and odd millions of appropriation now up before Congress, because of his attitude on this vital question of conservation of natural resources. GEORGE E. GARY.

Death Of A Star.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To the younger generation the death of Frank Daniels, aged 74 years, at West Palm Beach, Fla., on January 10 meant nothing. But to those of the gay nineties who witnessed his stage successes, his passing will bring memories which time can not erase.

Thirty years ago the name of Frank Daniels, the comic opera star, was a household word. His unique personality and antics convulsed discriminating theatergoers. Simply to put his name in front of the Columbia Theater in this city or any other theater throughout the country meant packed houses during the week. Of all comic opera stars before or since his time, with the possible exception of Francis Wilson, none has appeared on the stage since his day who even compared with him. His unique personality and extemporaneous stage chatter convulsed the elite of theatergoers of yesteryears.

Frank Daniels made his debut in the "Chimes of Normandy," followed by "Little Puck," "Pinafore," "Rag Baby," "Miss Simplicity," "Wizard of the Nile" and "The Idol's Eye." Probably his greatest success was in the latter. Financially, it was the greatest money-maker of that era. I recall that we played three successive yearly engagements with "The Idol's Eye" at the Columbia Theater to weekly receipts up to that time which broke all previous records.

With the advent of moving pictures Frank Daniels disappeared from the public view and retired in 1913 to Rye, N. Y., and Palm Beach, Fla., where he died.

Seaman's Tribute.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thousands of men who have served under Admiral R. E. Coontz are saddened by the news of his death. Life aboard ship was made pleasanter by his personality. He made men in the lower ranks feel that they were something more than a thousandth part of the ship's organization. He made their relationship personal through an extraordinary faculty for names and faces, backed up by an interest of heart. I am grateful for the privilege of serving under him in the schoolship Enterprise.

In the Enterprise we all felt his friendly justice. If punishment was of necessity severe it was without vindictiveness. The discipline was always just. That goes big with seamen. I never toed a seam on deck in the night, or sat on a topsail yard, because some one, unidentifiable, had caused a disturbance along the gun deck. I believe every vessel he served in must have been a "happy ship" for he himself would make it so.

He leaves his old shipmates with many pleasant memories as he slips his moorings for the last passage guided by the pilot with the silver oar. GERSHOM BRADFORD.

Human Sardines.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been a great deal of warranted complaint regarding the transportation facilities from the South Building—just back of the main Department of Agriculture Building, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets and Constitution avenue and Independence avenue southwest. The car service there at 4:30 p. m. is a disgrace.

One-man cars seem to be mostly in evidence along there, and enough passengers are seen standing outside to fill several of them. They must file in through the narrow door of these abominations and be herded in in a way that would make a sardine feel comfortable, by comparison. Then there is a lurch and a jerk, and those who have not managed to get hold of a strap are thrown backward against those at the rear.

It is often the case that in these human sardine boxes there is not a single ventilator open. It took me nearly an hour and one-half to get home today and I can walk it in 55 mintues. In the horse-car days we never had such performances—I once rode in them. There were no automobiles in the world then.

Government workers earn all they get in their "pressing" efforts to get to and from some offices.

Congress And Disasters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Again the editorial department of your paper has scored! It is far from pleasant to have pointed out, as you do, that some part of the blame for the latest marine disaster involving American shipping is due to the failure of Congress to consider and enact into law, either in its original or modified form, the London Ship Convention of 1929.

The Seventy-fourth Congress, in the face of the Morro Castle and Mohawk catastrophes, can do much to stop future appalling loss of life by creating laws designed to give the traveler at sea all the safeguards that modern naval construction and rigid inspection of vessels ought to provide.

Swedenborg's Birthday.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A columnist's recent comment that Emanuel Swedenborg is the world's "forgotten man of genius," serves to remind us that January 29 is the 247th anniversary of this extraordinary person's birth.

However, although it has been said that Swedenborg encompassed in himself a greater variety of human knowledge than any other individual in the world's history, above all he seems remarkable as a religious reformer or leader.

The old theological conceptions of hell fire and brimstone, infant damnation, a heaven with streets paved with gold, etc., against which Swedenborg contended so long ago, have given way to the very doctrines he taught and for which the church condemned and persecuted him.

Hail to another stalwart in man's battle against ignorance and intolerance! LESLIE MARSHALL.

You See What You Want To See.

"I shut my eyes and it comes," says Tom Cobb in Gilbert's play. Such seems to be the general principle of surrealism in painting, as explained by one of its apostles. Sometimes the artist himself, as well as the public, may be puzzled by a picture. But the reason is plain enough. Surrealism is the expression of subconscious ideas. All the objects are symbols. Thus a watch may grow on a tree, if that is the conception in the mind of the artist. Reality has nothing to do with it.

Salvador Dali, the Catalonian leader of the surrealist school in Paris, is at pains to elucidate all this in a lecture he has delivered in New York for the benefit of the philistine. He has trained himself, he informs us, to remember his dreams in detail. That, presumably, is why he can transfer them to canvas out of his inner consciousness. He needs no models; he can shut his eyes and visualize the work of art complete. In such conditions almost anyone, it might be supposed, could be a painter. The weakness of the dream principle is that some dreams may be nightmares, and a Welsh rabbit could become a sunset.

Selah!

Surveying the inefficiencies, extravagances and corruptions of American Government, Lord Bryce entered this record in his memorable work:

"America wastes millions annually, But her wealth is so great, her revenue so elastic, that she is not sensible of the loss. She has the glorious privilege of youth, the privilege of committing errors without suffering the consequences."

So it may have seemed. But natural laws are inexorable and the government of the cities, which Bryce conceded was "the one conspicuous failure" in the period of which he was writing, is today the most conspicuous. We are reaping what we have sown.

The Post Impressionist

"A Good Dog And a Fair Dog."

Post Office, Tuesday.

THE blind man walked up Pennsylvania avenue at something more than moderate pace. Both the eyes in his head were darkened—but a third eye led him.

It was a dog, that third eye. It was one of those dogs variously called, and generally miscalled, Belgian police-dogs and German shepherd dogs.

Blind men have had dogs to lead them since time immemorial. But, until lately, no blind man has had such a dog as this one.

They came, that man and this dog, to Thirteenth street, where a red light shone across the traffic. Many a dog would have essayed passage: this dog stopped until the red light changed to green.

They came, a little later, to a puddle. Half the city dogs in the world jump puddles; 25 per cent plunge through them. This dog carefully circled this puddle.

They had now turned twice and were passing the White House. Winter-weary, one of the boughs of one of the elms there had broken and hung low. An undersized man might have passed untouched beneath it. It would have at least brushed off this blind man's hat. His dog led him to one side.

There are hundreds of such dogs doing such work in America today. They are doing it because Hans died in Switzerland a dozen and a half years ago.

Hans was a so-called German shepherd dog. He was the cleverest dog his mistress—who had owned and loved dogs all her life—had ever known.

She was an American woman from Philadelphia, well-known in Washington, then resident at Vevey—about 20 miles up Lac Leman from Geneva. She was devoted to Hans, Hans to her.

When he died, she at first decided that she would have no more dogs. However, by and by, she thought she might replace Hans—might purchase a pair of dogs that would breed a second Hans.

She started a kennel. Soon that kennel was supplying dogs for work with the Swiss police, the Swiss army, the Swiss customs force which has stations all along the Alpine border of Switzerland on high peaks and in deep forests where man needs the help of four-footed friends at once sagacious and intrepid.

The woman's name is Dorothy Harrison Eustis—Mrs. Eustis. She is the daughter of one of the ablest provosts in the history of the University of Pennsylvania. Here in Washington, not so long since, she told the Post-Impressionist a little about her work. In a recent issue of the North American Review, Francis Rufus Bellamy tells everybody more about it.

Says Mr. Bellamy:

"So far, her interest constituted a hobby little different from a thousand other hobbies. In 1923, however, her ideas took a totally new direction.

"On a visit to Germany, she saw the amazing uses to which the Germans were putting their shepherd dogs as guides for former soldiers blinded in the war. Across streets, under awnings, through traffic, into stores, barber shops, trains and trams went sightless Germans led by dogs—blind people possessed of a freedom and independence only to be appreciated by those who have sat helpless, dependent and despairing in the dark.

"The dogs were like eyes to them."

Mr. Bellamy is writing about philanthropic hobbies in general—about fads of people who can afford fads and yet prefer fads that are of some use to other people. In his article, the story of Mrs. Eustis's dogs is merely one of several examples provided of such hobbies. But to the Post-Impressionist's mind it is by far the most striking.

* * *

Anyhow, Mrs. Eustis "became absorbed in what could be done to help the blind in other countries" besides Germany. And she realized that, at her kennels, she possessed the basis for such a work. In Vevey, she perfected her training methods. In Morristown, N. J., she soon set up her blind-men's eye-farm.

More than 11,000 dogs form today the alumni association of that canine university. They "are acting," says Mr. Bellamy, "as guides to blind clergymen, lawyers, insurance men, canvassers, newsstand owners."

Nearly 2,000 persons interested in the institution contribute about $64,000 to it annually. "Breeding has been given up, and fine German shepherd dogs are purchased or accepted as gifts, for training." One hundred dogs were graduated in last year's fourth senior class. The course is a three months' affair. But four years' training is required to train a trainer.

Mrs. Eustis calls her work "The Seeing Eye." Mr. Bellamy calls it the next best thing to the invention of Braille—for the blind man.

It seems to us that both Mrs. Eustis and Mr. Bellamy are right.

Shouse Urges Citizens To Watch Government

Liberty League President Would Awake Voters To Exercise Their Sovereignty.

FOR that, unfortunately, large group of citizens who seem disposed to regard their Government as a nuisance in prosperity and a free lunch counter in adversity, Jouett Shouse has prepared a political primer which the trend of the times makes less superfluous than it should be.

In "You Are the Government," Mr. Shouse seeks to convince the average citizen that the Government belongs to the citizen and hence that it shsould be watched and safeguarded as the citizen would watch or safeguard his private business or his household.

Proceeding on the justified assumption that the strain of the depression has caused many citizens to lose sight of the essential character of government and their relation thereto, effort is here made to reduce these facts to words of one syllable. The book begins with a chapter on "Popular Government," outlining the differences between governmental systems in which power was assumed to flow downward from above, and the more modern system based upon the conception that sovereignty resides in the people, who delegate its exercised to elect representatives.

Included is an explanation of the necessity of constitutional guarantees to protect the rights of minorities against mob rule and of the representative system which makes possible the functioning of democracy over wide areas and numerous and diverse populations. The study would be more thought-provoking and comprehensive if it did not ignore the world-wide trend toward the development of occupational, as opposed to merely geographical, representation.

• • • •

THE book is a presentation of the viewpoint of an experienced and thoughtful, albeit rather conservative, political thinker. Nevertheless the fact remains that Mr. Shouse, author, and Mr. Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, are one and the same person. He is definite in his statements of general principles, but refrains, with a few exceptions, from illustrating his principles by commendation or condemnation of particular current policies or activities. Perhaps such concrete illustrations should not be expected in a book intended for more than ephemeral circulation. But it is something that most readers are likely to look for—precisely because Mr. Shouse is president of the Liberty League.

However, there are some refreshing examples of a timely moral drawn to adorn the tale. For example, speaking as a former chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, Mr. Shouse expresses regret that there is basis for the charge that his party has violated a pledge in the platform of its last convention. The reference is to the promise to make an immediate and drastic reduction in governmental expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and offices, consolidating departments and bureaus and eliminating extravagance.

This is an observation, incidentally, which was written before the Administration revealed that its plans contemplate a continuation of huge governmental deficits through the next fiscal year at least, and the creation of a vast new bureaucracy to administer the so-far amorphous work-relief program.

• • • •

THERE is also something of a bill of particulars in the chapter on "The Menace of Bureaucracy." This contains one paragraph to which a reply from the AAA is almost demanded:

"An outstanding example of bureaucratic tendencies among recent emergency agencies is furnished by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The farmers who have accepted benefits from the Government have been required to submit themselves to unbelievable regulation. Even their household budgets are a matter of review by the AAA. Bullying and threatening letters have gone out. Because farmers cooperated with respect to one crop, they have been compelled to subordinate their own judgment to that of bureaucratic officials with respect to all other crops."

At a time when there is a plethora of talk about the duty of the Government to the citizen—predicated upon the theory that the Government should feed, clothe, employ, insure and pension the citizen, it is refreshing to encounter the radical suggestion that the citizen has also some duties to his Government. Mr. Shouse, while admitting that present conditions do not permit its strict application, quotes with approval the principle enunciated by President Cleveland that "though the people support the Government, the Government should not support the people."

"Popular government can not be one sided," Mr. Shouse comments. "The people must be interested in the affairs of Government if they expect it to be conducted in their interest. Sovereignty lies in the people themselves. If their power is to be exercised intelligently and effectively, they must be awake to the issues of the day."

One of the most effective touches in this compact little volume is found on its jacket. The title—"You Are the Government"—is surcharged on a reproduction of the original copy of the Constitution. Many are apt to forget the wording of its preamble. "We, the people of the United States . . . do ordain and establish this Constitution."

3 Ousted Officials Denied Injunction

Court Rejects Plea Against Cotton Code Unit.

Because he held that "under all the circumstances I think it would be unreasonable to issue the preliminary injunction requested," Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in District Supreme Court yesterday refused to order the reinstatement of three former members of the code authority for the cotton garment industry.

Justice Adkins indicated he had grave doubts about his jurisdiction over the Cotton Garment Code Authority, Inc., which is a Delaware corporation having its principal office in New York, and maintaining only desk space in this city. The authority was named as a co-defendant.

The ousted members, Justice Adkins said, had no property rights in their positions on the code authority, for all they drew as compensation was actual expenses.

The plaintiffs, E. M. Joblin, Lee H. Jones and W. E. Stevans, sought to force their reinstatement by a court order which would have hogtied the authority pending their reinstatement.

The case is now to be set down for a hearing on a final injunction.

Hundreds Expected At B'nai B'rith Fete

Oklahoma Senator to Talk at Thursday Banquet.

More than 700 gusets are expected to attend the banquet of Argo Lodge of the B'nai B'rith Thursday evening at the Willard Hotel, it was announced today by Leon Katz, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The principal speaker will be Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Isidore Hershfield will serve as toastmaster. There will be several other prominent local speakers.

Alfred L. Bennett will be installed as president, succeeding Morton H. Wilner.

Other officers to be installed are: Alfred Goldstein, vice president; Leon Katz, warden; Moe Offenberg, financial secretary; David Wiener, recording secretary; Morris Garfinkle, treasurer; Stephen Sills, guardian, and Joseph D. Kaufman, Isaac Lapidus, Max Bernstein, L. V. Freudberg and Dr. Carl Basseches, trustees.

Heckler Fined $5, Rebuked by Court

Concert No Place To Protest, Miss Rappaport Told.

A $5 fine and a severe reprimand from Police Court Judge John P. McMahon was the penalty Miss Sva Rappaport, of New York, paid yesterday for interrupting a Hans Kindler musical at Central High School Saturday.

Miss Rappaport was charged with disorderly conduct. Members of the Police Crime Prevention Squad said she protested violently when Director Kindler announced that his orchestra would play the German national anthem.

Approximately 1,000 students and music lovers jammed the school auditorium when Miss Rappaport arose to protest, it was testified. Judge McMahon held that she was guilty and warned her a public gathering is no place to voice protests.

A. F. of L. Officers Seeking Records

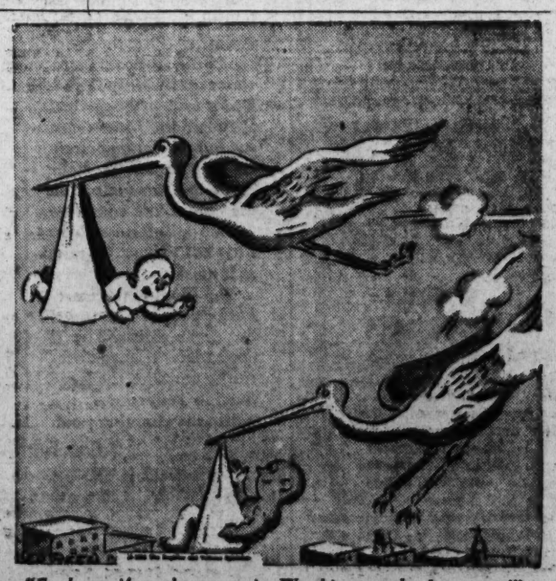
Building Trade Department Asks Court Order.

The building trades department of the American Federation of Labor yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to require the former officers of the department to turn over to them the books, papers, records and funds of the union.

The complaint asserted the defendants were let out of office January 1, 1935, but had refused to surrender their records.

The former officers sued were Michael J. McDonough, John J. Hynes, Joseph A. Mullaney, William C. O'Neill, Laurence P. Lindelof, Paul J. Warren, William J. McSorley and Frank Finney.

The suit discloses that a bank account in excess of $50,000, together with the per capita tax on 400,000 members of the building trades department, were involved in the dispute.



"So long, if you're ever in Washington, look me up!"

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Georgia's Distinction

THE small band of Republicans on Capitol Hill doesn't seem to be getting anywhere, but they are having a lot of fun with their little jokes on the Administration. There is hardly a day they don't have a new joke and when they tell it to you they roar like nobody's business. "Ho, ho, ho," they say, hitting you on the back, "isn't that a good one."

BARGERON.

Sometimes one gets the impression they are spending most of their time working up jokes instead of doing something effective in committee or on the Senate floor.

There is their story now about the Democratic candidate in the last congressional elections who shouted:

"Ladees and gentlemen, our President is the greatest man since Lincoln."

A drunk nodding in the audience grumbled: "I don't like him."

"Ladees and gentlemen," continued the candidate, "our President is the greatest man since Lincoln."

"I don't like him," again mumbled the drunk.

"And do you know, my friends," the speaker pursued, "that before he makes an important decision he always counsels with a higher power?"

"I don't like her either," retorted the drunk.

The Republicans had better cut out their devilment and go to work.

• • • •

It is doubtful if the attitude of Georgia can be that of the drunk, but something is happening down there that should give the Administration pause.

Georgia Congressmen constituted exactly half of the Democratic revolt on the final vote on the works bill in the House the other day. There were not but ten Democrats voting against the bill, but five of them came from Georgia. Three of this courageous group came from Virginia and the remaining two from Indiana.

These are days when only the hardiest of the Republicans like to buck Mr. Roosevelt. When you get five Democrats from such a State as Georgia it would seem to be worthwhile noticing.

Not only this, but the Georgia governor has several times been in opposition to Mr. Roosevelt. During times when Mr. Roosevelt, with the tremendous funds at his disposal and with his personal popularity has only to crack the whip and every Democratic governor will jump, Talmadge of Georgia, has stood out in bold relief. Now come five bolting Congressmen.

• • • •

It must be assumed these gentlemen know what they are doing. They, at least, don't believe they are taking any political risks. In fact, Talmadge's popularity in the State is said to be as great as ever before. The assumption is he will be seeking a senatorial seat soon.

How can one explain this when Georgia is looked upon as one of the most favored States at the hands of the New Deal, that is, favored insofar as patronage and pork barrel are concerned. From the number of Georgia cars on the streets here the impression might be gained that a good size of the population has come up here to go to work. She has had her share of public works and relief funds. She can't possibly have a complaint on this score.

Yet the situation in the State is such that a Governor antagonistic to the Administration retains his popularity and five of the State's Congressmen lead a revolt on an unprecedented bill.

• • • •

It must be remembered, too, that Georgia is the President's second home. At every opportunity he runs down to Warm Springs. It was there he finally yielded to the importunings of Al Smith to make the race for Governor of New York in 1928, a step which led to the Presidency. The State was in the vanguard of his presidential supporters. A regular home boy, they said of him.

It was just last Christmas, too, when this writer read a most enthusiastic newspaper report of how the people of the State had their larders filled better than in a long, long time—maybe it was in history.

Perhaps the State can't be bought though. In that event, it ranks high in common sense, notwithstanding Miss Perkins' belief that the people all go barefoot down there.

No End Of Books

The Search for Social Right and for Social Wisdom As Seen by Louis Brandeis and Graham Wallas.

By Theodore Hall.

BACK in 1911, Louis D. Brandeis told an interviewer: "Some men buy diamonds and rare works of art, others delight in automobiles and yachts. My luxury is to invest my surplus effort, beyond that required for the proper support of my family, to the pleasure of taking up a problem and solving, or helping to solve it, for the people without receiving any compensation."

That spirit and that sustained, humanitarian grappling with society's problems have made Mr. Justice Brandeis perhaps the most widely known, certainly the most widely appreciated and beloved, of the gentlemen on the Supreme Bench. Just how broad have been his "luxuries" comes clear in the pages of "The Curse of Bigness: Miscellaneous Papers of Justice Brandeis" (Viking, $3.50), as edited by Osmond K. Fraenkel upon the arrangement set by Clarence M. Lewis before his death.

• • • •

Most of the papers reprinted here came out before Mr. Brandeis' appointment to the Supreme Court in 1916, but there are many subsequent opinions (dissent in the Oklahoma ice and the Florida chain store cases, for example), articles and speeches.

Still, from earliest to latest, they exhibit his efforts toward reform of workmen's insurance, toward efficient industrial democracy, toward the preservation of small business (the title section), toward a constructive cooperation among railroads, toward the furtherance of Zionism, toward the ideal of public service among lawyers, and toward certain points in what one might call the humanizing of the law.

A full bibliography of books and articles by and about Mr. Brandeis and a topical list of his court opinions since 1931 (advancing Prof. Frankfurter's list in "Mr. Justice Brandeis;" 1932) makes the volume indispensable to all students of this unique career. Lay readers will find it a mine of suggestive thinking, couched with the exactness of the legal brain, directed by the conscience of a man who remembers that the world is made up of individual, sensate human beings.

• • • •

Nothing I found in the book seems to give the directions, the very gist of his aims better than a brief statement entitled "The Right to Work," which was first formulated in 1913 and published in the Survey Graphic in 1929.

"For every employe," declares Mr. Brandeis, "who is 'steady in his work,' there shall be steady work. The right to regularity in employment is coequal to the right to regularity in the payment of rent, in the payment of interest on bonds, in the delivery to customers of the high quality of product contracted for. No business is successfully conducted which does not perform fully the obligations incident to each of these rights. Each of these obligations is equally a fixed charge. No dividend should be paid unless each of these fixed charges has been met. The reserve to insure regularity of employment is as imperative as the reserve for depreciation; and it is equally a part of the fixed charges to make the annual contribution to that reserve. No business is socially solvent which can not do so."

In 1913 that was heresy, I dare say—in 1940 it may be the flattest common sense of business procedure. Any reader of "The Curse of Bigness" will find a dozen other examples of the Promethean quality of Mr. Justice Brandeis.

Graham Wallas, English sociologist and author of "Human Nature in Polotics" and the more widely read exhortation to good thinking, "The Art of Thought," died in August, 1932. He was mid-way on another work which concentrated on the effort of his whole life—"the problem," as his daughter writes, "how knowledge of the nature of individual man may be used for the general good of mankind."

Miss May Wallas now brings out that first, truncated, but invaluable half — "Social Judgement" (Harcourt Brace, $1.50). "At this moment in world history it is tragically desirable that men should act not rationally only but wisely," states the author. His book, with evangelical but measured fervor, with an arsenal of weapons accumulated from ancient and modern learning, attacks that problem of finding wisdom among a plethora of knowledge.

• • • •

One passage in particular comes to the aid of anyone smothered under the current deluge of skepticism and determinism.

"There is nothing in modern physics and chemistry to prevent the social student from believing and feeling that he is an agent and not a mere spectator of action; that his problem may be "What shall I choose to do?" and not merely "What is it that must happen?" and that all the knowledge which he can gain of causes and effects, whether in the world outside him or in the habits and passions and associations of his own personality, may strengthen instead of paralizing the reality and efficiency of his choice. All that is necessary for him to assume is that both consciousness and will vary, like everything else in the universe, from more to less."

• • • •

In different ways, for different but related ends, the two writers considered today will remind readers of a spirit which Matthew Arnold once voiced in his poem, "The Last Word."

"Charge once more, then, and be dumb!
Let the victors, when they come,
When the forts of folly fall,
Find thy body by the wall!"

Mrs. Cooke Reelected Auxiliary Board's Head

Mrs. Leila J. Cooke yesterday was reelected president of the general auxiliary board of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home at the annual meeting held at the Masonic Temple at Thirteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

Other officers named were Mrs. Carrie Smith, first vice president; Mrs. Esther V. Cross, second vice president, and Mrs. Selina Foster, secretary. Mrs. Cooke is a past matron of St. John's Chapter, No. 18, O. E. S.

Crazy Success

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

ALTHOUGH I am an ardent admirer of the operas of Wagner, and believe that he alone contributed more to that particular form of art than all other composers put together, that does not lessen my intense enjoyment of "Faust;" which is the most popular opera ever written and deserves to be.

By those persons who assume self-delegated superiority and despise everything that is generally enjoyed, "Faust" is viewed with a lifting of the eyebrows and is called saccharine. As a matter of fact, what this means is, that this opera is full of melodies from beginning to end; the music, both in orchestral accompaniment and in solos and choruses, is bewitching entrancing, enchanting, irresistible.

• • • •

On the last night of 1934, "Faust" was sung at the Opera House in Paris for the 2,000th time.

Ceremonies appropriate to the occasion were enjoyed by the audience. During one of the intermissions, the singers and the ballet did homage before a bust of Gounod placed on the stage, while the orchestra played his "Missa Solemnis."

"Faust" was first produced March 19, 1859; it was what the French call an instantaneous crazy success—the whole audience going wild. Next day it was the talk of the town, and the day after that, the talk of the world.

In those days Gounod was so full of inspiration that he could produce melodies on demand. During rehearsals, the manager or the conductor asked him if he would not write just a bit of music to greet the return of the soldiers. He went to his studio, and either on that same day or the next (I forget which) he came back with the "Soldiers Chorus."

• • • •

The first time I heard "Faust" was in New Haven, Conn. It was produced by the short-lived National Opera Company, with Theodore Thomas conducting. I can see his bald spot now as he took the chair. Emma Juch was the Marguerite and William Ludwig was the Mephistopheles; both were very, very good.

The second time I heard it was in Paris; a classmate and I were on a bicycle trip through Europe. It was in August, 1890, and as we took our seats, a gentleman sitting close in front of us turned around and said to me, "I recognize your voice." (People are always recognizing my voice; is there anything the matter with it?) He was Dr. W. R. Martin, my beloved teacher in the high school at Hartford. He said, "You are in luck tonight. The soprano is Emma Eames, a beautiful American girl from Maine. All Paris is wild about her." And in a few minutes I was; for she was the best Marguerite I ever heard, and I have heard Melba, Calve and many other stars of the first magnitude. The Mephistopheles was Pol Plancon, and with the one exception of Edouard de Reszke, he was the best I have ever heard in that part. So it was a memorable evening.

• • • •

In the spring of 1892, in Mechanics Hall in Boston, I heard "Faust" sung with the ideal cast—and the name given to it by the management did not exaggerate. Emma Eames, Jean de Reszke, Edouard de Reszke, Lasalle, Mmes. Scalchi and Bauermeister.

Now I usually hear it twice every year at the Metropolitan Opera House, and when I become tired of good health, good weather and good friends, then I shall become tired of hearing "Faust."

Bureau Job 'Rights' Sought By Democrats

House Caucus To Protest Emphasis On Aptitude In HOLC And PWA Selections.

By Elliott Thurston.

IF the party is held as scheduled, House Democrats will meet in caucus tonight to demand their "rights." The spectacle will be comic, tragic, even pathetic, depending upon how you look at it. Voluble and volatile gentlemen will arise and, with appropriate gestures, cry out to high heaven against the iniquities of those Government officials, like Chairman John H. Fahey, of the HOLC, and Secretary Ickes, of the PWA, who fail to lend a sufficiently attentive ear to the patronage pleas of Democratic statesmen.

Only the ignorant, or callous, will fail to have some sympathy with the distressed orators. Under the Constitution, at least, they have a right to live. How can they survive, politically, without patronage? Some of them do. But it takes strong character, not to mention a high order of intellect, to get by in politics without patronage. Those who by pure reason and cold logic, rather than by jobs and cold cash, can persuade the voters to return them to Congress are relatively few. Perhaps that is not due so much to the avarice of constituents as to the rarity of the ppeals to reason.

Or it may be that in many cases Congressmen who stood or fell on an appeal to reason would fall. However, that is a side issue. What is being urged herewith is that, human nature being whatever it is, the Congressman who fights for patronage as ferociously as a starving lion would fight for a scrap of meat is as much to be pitied as censored. One can laugh and still be sorry.

• • • •

AT all odds, this evening the starving Democrats are to hold an indignation meeting. They mean to burn the Messrs. Fahey, Ickes and every other similar sinner in oratorical effigy. Some people, notably Republicans, had supposed that today's Democrats had enjoyed more patronage, more largesse to fling bountifully to the voters, than any set of men in the world's history. However, the Democrats would, or might, retort that they have never before had so many deserving constituents. There certainly are not enough jobs to go 'round, even though the New Deal has created more jobs than were ever heard of before under one government in time of peace. As for the cash, how long that will hold out nobody knows.

Unhappily, it is a characteristic of the pie counter that the more pie you dish out, the bigger the demand. And when some of the slices, even slender slices, go to constituents who have not been personally selected and approved by the Congressman there is sure to be a terrific howl from the Congressman. When, as in the case of the Messrs. Fahey and Ickes, complaining Congressmen have been treated coolly, even coldly, that is adding insult to injury. Doubtless the Messrs. Fahey and Ickes could be more tactful. They might sit down sympathetically with Democratic Congressmen and explain that if the Congressmen's appointees were selected in numerous cases, the result would be very bad for the public service.

• • • •

FOR the basic trouble is that some of the New Deal officials —far removed from the genial Mr. Farley's venerable theory of spoils—have insisted upon choosing appointees, especially for highly skilled work, on a basis of merit and fitness. Thus, Mr. Fahey, after first obtaining President Roosevelt's authority, removed from office certain officials who definitely were not skilled or trained in anything save agility and adhesiveness in attaching themselves to the public pay roll.

Mr. Fahey has chosen appraisers, for example, from among appraisers. It so happens that in some places there do not happen to be any Democrats who have ever been appraisers. Mr. Fahey, or his board, have had the curious notion that men picked to make appraisals upon which the lending of the public funds is based ought to know something about the technical business of appraising.

Other public officials, down through the ages, have had odd views of this sort about the public service. Almost invariably, this has produced complications with the politicians whose standards of selection seldom take account of such extraneous matters as fitness and aptitude. That is, the first rule of fitness is to vote right. However, most Congressmen can be placated if handled gently and sympathetically. They can then go back to their offices and tell their constituents that, while it is an outrage, they can not get the jobs. They can even make fervid speeches about it on the floor.

• • • •

HOWEVER, the scheduled indignation meeting tonight has gotten out of bounds. The air is full of dire threats. The still starving though supposedly overfed Democrats, like the less repressed Mr. Blanton, have blood in their eyes. They threaten, as Mr. Blanton does openly, to cut off the appropriations of the HOLC, for instance, or else to launch investigations that will tie the HOLC in knots until it surrenders. This ceases to be amusing to the innocent bystander, when it gets to the point of crippling important relief agencies, theoretically operating to relieve human misery on a nonpartisan basis and not operating as a haven for job-hunters or a grab-bag for deserving constituents who want their mortgages cashed and no questions asked.

Probably, the Democratic uprising will be quelled, if it takes the White House to do it. Mr. Farley will not quell it. He sees eye to eye with the patronage hunters. However, Mr. Roosevelt to tolerate a cabal designed to raid relief agencies, if not their treasuries, would be a fatal error, which nothing in his political career suggests that he is likely to commit. Somehow, there must be some way to bind up the wounds and tongues of the outraged Congressmen and at the same time preserve the competency of such few agencies as have escaped Mr. Farley's comprehensive clutches.

Insull Goes on Trial In State Case Feb. 19

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Samuel Insull will go on trial February 19 on a charge of embezzling $66,000 from the Middle West Utilities Co., it was ordered today by Judge Cornelius J. Harrington in criminal court.

The State alleges Insull unlawfully diverted the money from the company funds to cover a brokerage acount of his brother, Martin.

First Lady Faces Busy Social Week

Today's Events Include Luncheon at Capital and Large Tea.

Opera, Birthday Ball and Congressional Reception Also on List.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

This week's social calendar will be one of the busiest of the season, especially for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Yesterday morning at 10 o'clock she attended the meeting of the American Civic Association in the Union Trust Building. She held her weekly press conference at 11 o'clock in the White House, when she announced her plans. Today she will attend the Senate ladies' luncheon at the Capitol and will return to the Executive Mansion to receive a large group of guests for tea. These guests will include those who have left cards at the White House this season.

Mrs. Roosevelt said it would simplify matters if the cards of each person bore an address as well as the name of the caller. With hundreds of cards bearing no address it is impossible for the White House to make any record of the callers and to identify them for invitation lists.

Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, will attend the performance of "La Traviata," to be presented by the Cosmopolitan Opera Association at Constitution Hall tonight. She is a sponsor for this outstanding musical event of the season, of which Mrs. James A. Moffett is active chairman. The boxes which surround the beautiful auditorium will rival the "diamond horseshoe" at the Metropolitan in New York, for Washington society, diplomatic, official and resident, will be there. Artists of world renown will be heard in the leading roles, and the list of patrons includes many prominent residents.

Will Attend Musicale.

Later Mrs. Roosevelt will drop in at the Mayflower to attend the President's birthday ball, which will be under the auspices of young Democrats.

Mrs. Roosevelt plans to attend the last of this season's morning musicales at the Mayflower tomorrow, when Mrs. Lawrence Townsend will present Miss Helen Jepson, lyric soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, and Mr. Richard Bonelli, barytone of the Metropolitan. That evening there will be a family dinner at the White House to celebrate the President's birthday anniversary, and later, accompanied by her daughter and son, Mrs. John Boettiger and Mr. Elliott Roosevelt, the First Lady will attend the birthday ball at the Shoreham. The entire country will unite in paying tribute to President Roosevelt on the occasion of his fifty-third birthday anniversary at 7,000 balls to be given throughout the country.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be the guest in whose honor Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior will entertain at luncheon, Thursday, and that evening the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will be hosts at the Congressional reception, one of the largest of the State functions. It will mark the first appearance at the White House of many of the new members of Congress.

Mrs. Garner Guest of Honor.

Mrs. John Nance Garner is also being entertained by wives of the members of the Cabinet. Yesterday she was the guest of honor at the luncheon given by Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr. The other guests were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, and Miss Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor. Also present were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Miss Mabel Boardman, Miss Mary Patten, Mrs. Carroll Miller, Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace and Mrs. Edwin Thomas Meredith, whose husband was Secretary of Agriculture in the Wilson Administration.

Mrs. Roper has invited a number of guests to meet Mrs. Garner February 7, and on the following day Mrs. Wallace will entertain at luncheon in her honor. Mrs. Dern will entertain for Mrs. Garner on February 14.

Marlboroughs To Visit in N. Y. And Palm Beach

Duke and Duchess to Be Entertained Extensively in Florida.

The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough will arrive in New York today aboard the Aquitania. Their arrival will be a surprise to many in society as their departure from England was not generally known. The duke is the tenth of his line, having succeeded to the title on the death of his father, the ninth Duke of Marlborough in London last summer.

After his father's death, the duke, then the Marquess of Blandford, succeeded to all of his father's titles, which included the Earl of Marlborough, the Earl of Sunderland, Baron Spencer of Wormweighton, Baron Churchill of Sandridge, Prince of Mendelheim in Swabia, and Prince of the Holy Roman Empire.

The duke and duchess were in New York two years ago, when they attended the funeral of his grandmother, Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont.

They will be in New York for a brief visit. Within a few days they will go to Palm Beach, where the duke's mother, Mrs. Jacques Balsan, the former Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, and her second husband, Col. Balsan, and the duke's uncle, Mr. Harold Stirling Vanderbilt, have homes and where they will be entertained extensively.

DemocraticClub Hears Address

Anti-War Conference Delegate Discusses Buying Power.

The Woman's National Democratic Club had as guest speaker at its luncheon yesterday Miss Zelma Brandt, of New York. Miss Brandt has been in Washington as Woman's Trade Union delegate to the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War.

On a recent trip to England Miss Brandt became interested in the Maj. Douglas monetary theory, and at the luncheon discussed "America's Need of More Purchasing Power." Miss Brandt has spent much time in Geneva as a student of the League of Nations and also in Russia.

Mrs. Julian Friant introduced the speaker, and seated with them at the speaker's table were Mrs. Emil Schram, Mrs. Dall Cunningham and Mrs. Edward Keating.

Among those at the luncheon were Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin and guests, Miss Leila Peachy and guests, Mrs. Hugh Mathews, Mrs. Samuel Majors, Mrs. A. F. Busick, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. George M. Eckels, Mrs. Boaz Long, Mrs. Frank Tighe, Mrs. Frank Morrison, Miss F. Kempton and guests, Mrs. Elizabeth Towne, Mrs. Lawrence E. Ruebel and Mrs. Berry D. Hill and guests.

Town Chatter

Who's Where—and Why, Around the Capital.

It is a bit ironical that Edis Phillippe, diva of the Cosmopolitan Opera Company, should have been asked to countless cocktail parties since her arrival here, for the fair lady doesn't touch alcohol. After consuming innumerable thirst-making hors d'oeuvres, she asked for some water, whereupon ice water was brought to her. Her mouth parched, she reached for the blessed liquid, but it turned out to be a mirage. Max Rabinoff, in the role of Cerberus, had snatched it away, the reason being that the care of the vocal chords requires that only tepid water be drunk.

We would like to know where Mr. Kindler bought those pearl-gray trousers which he wears when he conducts the symphony. They are reminiscent of the mauve decade, only lacking the strap under the shoe.

Armand Tokatyan, the Armenian tenor who is to perform in "La Traviata" tonight, is known not only for his singing, but also for his excellent acting. On one occasion his histrionic ability almost broke up the show. He was playing Turiddu in "Cavalleria Rusticana" and in the fight scene the two men were to bite each others ears. So carried away was he that he actually planted his teeth in his opponent's flesh, upon which the artist called out: "Say, what are you doing?" thereby adding much to the reality of the situation. Fortunately the two were good friends, so that even though blood was drawn, no bad blood was made.

Cleansing Oil Keeps the Skin From Chapping

Excellent Preparation on Sale at $1 for Large Bottle.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SHOPPPING news—and beauty news—are centered now around a very excellent cleansing oil which all need to insure our faces against the ruthless onslaught of the wintry weather.

Nine out of ten women have chapped faces because they don't know how to protect them. It often happens that the powder bases they are using are unsuited to their skins. As a result, they find that, on being exposed to the weather, their skin becomes red and drawn, after the next application of powder, they note to their horror that the skin is flaky.

The best way to prevent this is to wash your face with warm water and then cleanse it again with this excellent cleansing oil. In order to close the pores, rinse your face in cold water. The cleansing oil seeps into the pores and supplies any oil deficiency. This will automatically prevent chapping.

The cleansing oil is a pleasant preparation to use. It has a fresh, clean aroma and is infinitely soothing to the skin. A large bottle of it costs only $1 and as it takes only a mere bit to do a thorough cleansing job you'll find it economical.

Hanging Flower Pots.

Even though there's winter outside, and a blazing fire in your hearth, it's great fun to give a touch of spring to your room by having a few green, growing plants.

A downtown store has a wonderful buy in hanging flower pots. These are attractively painted gold and ivory and come with metal hangers which look like vines. They are easily attached to your wall or window frame and are excellent for small plants.

At present they are selling two for $1.

Mentholated "Handkerchiefs."

Here's a real boon to those suffering with the sniffles. A local store is selling neat little cellophane packages of mentholated "handkerchiefs." These measure eight by nine inches and look very much like cleansing tissues. In fact, they may be used in this wise, and their mentholated treatment makes them very refreshing to the face.

However, they were designed to take the place of handkerchiefs. A cellophane package contains 250 and costs only 25 cents.

Wool Strips For Turbans.

What looks like long strips of ribbon turns out to be wool. If you're at all inclined to do your own millinery, you can use a yard or two of this to make yourself a fascinating little turban in plaids or stripes. As for colors, there are so many different combinations that you'll have no trouble finding exactly what you want.

"Beau Knot" Packages of Yarn.

Another way of satisfying your millinery tendencies is to buy a neat little "beau knot" package which contains sufficient yarn for you to knit yourself a perfectly adorable little "beau knot" beret.

Best of all the directions come with the yarn so that you'll have an easy job if you know the A B C's of knitting.

This "love of a hat" as it has been described, is ideally adapted to winter sports. It perches on the top of your head with a devastating air.

You can buy the yarn in red, aquamarine, brown, coral, Kelly green, royal blue and beige.

Chinese Mats.

The sale is almost over but there is still time if you shop immediately to pick up some of the hand made Chinese mats which are selling now for 50 cents and up.

In the lot you'll find many that are new but there are also quite a few which are genuine antiques. The embroidery has been taken from the sleeve of mandarins long departed. They are interesting to see—whether you buy or not.

Sailor Frock Is Nautical Down to Smallest Detail

Pattern No. 769

HERE IS A SEAGOING fashion that every young landlubber will like. A strictly "regulation" sailor frock to add a Jack Tar touch to the classroom. Braid trimming, sailor collar, lacing—it's completely nautical down to the smallest detail.

In white with navy blue trimming, or in navy blue with white braid, the sailor frock is a favorite with mothers who like simple good taste in children's clothes. It is one of the many smart fashions for the younger generation featured in the Advance Spring Pattern Book. In size 10, the short-sleeved version requires 2¼ yards of 35-inch material and ⅝ yards of contrasting trim. The long-sleeved version requires 2½ yards of 39-inch material. Sizes are 8 to 14.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: A man with whom I am in love has asked me to marry him, but because he is so bound to his mother I hesitate to undertake it. He is an only child; his mother has no other near relatives, takes little interest in friends, and for years the two have always been together.

• • • •

The mother is unusually selfish with him, which is not only my opinion but that of all who know her. I have very little respect for her and it is hard for me to see this man so willing to sacrifice himself to her. He depends on her very much and is very much more influenced by her than by me. I am afraid of her influence because he is unaware of it, and can not even see that she is selfish.

• • • •

On the other hand, he is very good to me and thinks that he can make me happy, although he does not think that by marrying me he should feel any greater responsibility to me than to his mother. He insists we should live in the house next door to her, but I dread this prospect, for she would be with us constantly, as she never wants to be alone.

• • • •

I think we should live in a different part of the city from her. He will not promise me this, as he says she has her heart set on this other arrangement. Have I a right to ask this of him? He says if I loved him enough I would not ask it. But since he is asking me to leave my home and move to a strange city, I think he should also give up something for me. Besides, she has sufficient means to afford every comfort. Nor will he promise that she will not some time come to live with us.

• • • •

He can not understand my unwillingness to have his mother so much a part of our life. But I think my only means of having an independent married life and of getting him away from her influence would be for us to live some distance away from her.

• • • •

I am 30 and he is 36. I know it is foolish to try to make a man over by marrying him, and I know this man is very weak-willed when his mother wants to have her way. Do you think there is any way of straightening out a problem such as mine beforehand? ELEANOR.

It's Inadvisable.

DEAR ELEANOR: Frankly, I don't believe you stand a ghost of a chance of making a successful marriage with this man. There is no sorrier figure in fact, fiction, or drama, than the mother-dominated male, unless it is the misguided woman who haplessly marries such a man. And there is no greater mischief maker in the universe than a possessive, ever-present mother-in-law.

• • • •

Forget him. Leave him to his mother, who already has made of him a helpless puppet, dancing aimlessly on the end of her apron strings. The hopelessness of the situation is told in one sentence you have written: "He says if I loved him enough I would not ask it." If that particular sentiment was not dictated, actually or indirectly, by his mother, then it reveals the unreasoning egotism of the man, who will never be able to deal honestly and generously with reality.

• • • •

That's the main trouble with mother-possessed men. They expect every issue in human relationships to be solved on a basis of emotionalism. And why not? It's the tactics their mothers have pursued in gaining ascendancy over them. It's the only address to life they know from experience.

• • • •

I am averse to suggesting half-way measures in a case of this kind. But your only hope of making a marriage free from interference, on the one hand or learning definitely that you could never be more than a hand-maiden to his mother, is to tell him he can choose between his mother and you. And if he continues to offer half a loaf to each, break the engagement. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

IF JANUARY 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

On this January 29 envy may be the pernicious prevailing cause of friendly relationships becoming strained, so it will be wise through action or speech to avoid arousing it. Be watchful that a stranger does not take unfair advantage, after awakening your sympathy. Charity should be bestowed with discrimination.

A package or letter might also help brighten your day in a very agreeable way. This is an auspicious day for any form of social entertainment. Married and engaged couples, as well as suitors, will be happier if they make up their minds to be thoroughly agreeable if asked to do something which might make the evening pleasant for the other one.

If a woman and January 29 is your birthday, it might prove profitable if you will realize it pays at times to listen ot advice. Stubborness is a fault that causes a lot of trouble, so avoid it. You should be very lucky in business matters. Money might possibly come to you in an easy manner; be careful it does not go in a similar way. Marriage should play an important part in your life and be the means of securing a great deal of happiness. As a professional shopper or buyer, public stenographer or writer of short stories, you might be able to establish an enviable reputation.

The child born on January 29 may, when it reaches its teens, display a great deal of artistic ability. This should receive encouragment by arranging for its proper training.

If a man and January 29 is your natal day, you have an unusual amount of grit and determination, both of which will stand you in good stead in your business or professional career. If you marry it might pay you ot discuss your problems with your wife, providing you have faith in her business judgment, for some time a woman's intuition is better than a man's.

Let Me Be Words.

LET ME BE WORDS to you who have no words;
Who, knowing love yet can not speak its name;
Whose thoughts hide like siesta-keeping birds
From noonday's flame.

Let me be speech to you whose lips keep back
The flood your heart holds. Let me span the breach
From life to you, that there may be no lack
To you whose tide of thought can never reach
The shores of speech.

I who have ripened at your being's core
Drinking the cool sweet waters, let me stir
The depths that other friends may taste its store—
And love shall make me your interpreter—
Let me be words.

Stranger.

I DO NOT KNOW this woman in the glass,
She seems a masquerader in my guise,
Asking for understanding of this place,
For a sweet word before she has to pass,
Where frightened from the unfamiliar face
Stare watchfully her unforgotten eyes.

I knew a girl once who had eyes like these . . .
That is the best that I can feel or say,
She did not know what you and I have learned,
Tired stranger begging me for memories;
She went; I do not know which way she turned.
Forget her, then; and hasten on your way.

SOMETHING MORE than the Moccasin spread below,
More than the city, more than serpentine flow
Of the Tennessee; with friendship's flag unfurled,
We laughed together and planted our heels on the world!

But what we left on the valley bed were shrouds.
Here we were born again, to scale of a plan
Of mountain to mountain smiling, man to man.

ROSE-TREE is bowing
Her thorny head.
Rose-tree is widowed
For summer is dead.
Gone, too, her children
Their brief glory done;
Frail little rosebuds,
Gone, every one.

Rose-tree is comforted,
Lifts up her head,
Bears in the snow time
Roses of red—
Or else they are redbirds,
Beautiful things!
Posthumous roses,
Roses with wings.

SPEED RUNS LIKE water in the street.
It flows around my flowing wheels.
At every turn new currents meet.

The highways of the mind. It goes
Along bright channels, wide and new.
It whirls and overflows,
While slow thought, standing at the side,
Waits for the waters to divide..

The festival of music all may share
Through mist-gray dawn and noon and purple night
Like carillons it sweeps the lambent air,
Invades dark places, garmented in white.

And I am moved to join this lyric throng
However thin or quivering my voice;
My soul has held, for ages, wisps of song
That will not be denied—I have no choice—

Program to Make 1936 a Banner Year for the Party Mapped by Reorganized Democratic Women's Unit

Tenschert Photo.

Democratic women are starting their campaign maneuvers for 1936 under the active leadership of Mrs. James H. Wolfe (right), newly appointed chairman of the women's division, and Miss Mary Dewson, chairman of the general advisory committee of the division.

Reporter Plan Will Be Pressed At Conferences

Workers to Be Told of Policies at Series of Regional Meetings.

CONVINCED that elections are won between campaigns, the reorganized Democratic Women's Division already has swung into a series of aggressive political maneuvers designed to make 1936 a banner year for their party.

With the appointment of Miss Mary Dewson as chairman of the general advisory committee (a position created to accommodate her far-reaching talents), and Mrs. James H. Wolfe, as director of the Women's Division, the feminine wing of the Democratic National Committee now presents a unique leadership.

Miss Dewson (Mollie to her friends), is the answer to a party's prayer for a practical woman politician. An organizing genius, she has definitely replaced women leaders of the visionary variety. An actionist as well as educator, she already has accomplished the impossible as a vote-getter. She alone is accredited with having swung Republican Maine into the Democratic column last campaign.

Mollie, in the words of James Farley, "gets anything she goes after, and she goes after plenty."

A Practical Idealist.

In Mrs. Wolfe, of Utah, Miss Dewson's own choice to fill her former position as director of the Women's Division, the party has the practical idealist and thorough-going educator.

Acting in Miss Dewson's place for the last seven months, Mrs. Wolf was encouraged to extend her program throughout the Nation. With the aid of Miss Dewson, so far she has succeeded in launching the reporter plan of education in practically every State in the Union.

Further enlarging its national program, the women's division has added a woman "Brain Truster" to its staff, in the colorful person of Miss Harriet Elliot, political science professor of the University of North Carolina. Miss Elliot, who has taken a leave of absence from her academic duties, will be known as director of study groups in the national organization.

The initial meeting will be held in Richmond. With Miss Frances Perkins invited as guest speaker, this conference will set a precedent for other regions to follow.

Other Appointments.

Other appointments in the reorganization set-up include Mrs. Casper Whitney, of New York, regional adviser of the northeastern division including Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware; Mrs. Charles Tillett, jr., regional director of Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida; Mrs. Burton Musser, who will fill Mrs. Wolfe's former position as regional adviser for Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, Nevada and Arizona.

Other women regional heads were renominated to fill their former capacities. They include Mrs. June Fickel, assistant director of the women's division, who also is regional adviser of the section embracing Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota and Nebraska; Mrs. Harrison Parkman, whose region takes in Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Colorado; Mrs. A. P. Flunn, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, West Virginia and Kentucky, and Mrs. Elsie Gardner Picking, Montana, Washington, Oregon and California.

Thermometers Now Considered Important Part of the Kitchen

They Are Used for the Oven, for Candy, and to Test Fat for Deep-Fat Frying; Queries on Cooking Are Answered.

By Dorothea Duncan.

Food thermometers are now considered an important part of the well equipped kitchen. There are thermometers for the oven, for candy, to test fat for deep-fat frying, and even for testing the inner temperature of a roast of meat.

A reader asks: "May I use a candy thermometer that goes to 340 degrees F. for deep fat?"

Some kitchen thermometers are double duty ones. However, the candy thermometer that registers no higher than 340 degrees F. will break if used for deep-fat temperatures, as the fat should be heated anywhere from 360 degrees to 390 degrees depending on the type of mixture to be fried. A thermometer that will register, higher, is a more practical one to buy if you haven't one already, as it can be used to better advantage. Other questions follow:

Will you please tell me why my baked custards always curdle?

Temperature plays a very important part in the making of a smooth custard. The pan or casserole of custard should always be placed in a pan of hot, but not boiling water before it is put into the oven. The oven should never become so hot that the water in the pan will boil, as this in turn will make your custard boil, and it will be curdled instead of smooth.

The following recipe should prove satisfactory.

Baked Custard.

2 cups scalded milk
3 eggs
4 tablespoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Scald the milk. Mix sugar, eggs, salt and flavoring and combine with scalded milk. Pour into custard cups or baking dish set in a pan of hot water, and poach in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) until firm. A knife blade run into the center of the custard will come out clean when it is done.

Is compressed yeast a regular cake like you buy for 3 cents and how do you set it to rise?

Commercial compressed yeast is a form of the cultivated yeast plant and is sold in large quantities to the housewife and to bakers. It is obtained by sowing selected cells in vats filled with a warm, sweet, filtered mash prepared by malt conversion of starch. As the cells multiply they collect in a thick, yellowish, frothy coating on the surface. This is skimmed off from time to time, washed, freed from part of the water, and made into the soft, rather soggy cakes which are sold in such large quantities for 3 cents apiece.

The following recipe for doughnuts has been requested. These are made with compressed yeast, and the recipe will show how yeast is set to rise.

Raised Doughnuts.

1 cup milk
¾ cup flour
1 cake of compressed yeast

Heat the milk to scalding and cool to luke warm. Crumble the yeast in the milk, add the flour, then beat to a smooth batter. Let rise until very light and full of bubbles. Then add:

1 cup sugar
1 cup scalded milk, cooled to lukewarm
2 beaten eggs
1 cup butter
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1½ pounds of flour, about 6 cups.

The sugar and butter may be added to the scalded milk or they may be creamed together and added. Add the beaten eggs, then sift salt, nutmeg and flour together and add to make a soft dough. Knead lightly and set to rise. When double in bulk, roll to about ½-inch thick and cut with a large doughnut cutter. Arrange on a floured surface and let rise until very lgiht. Fry in deep fat (375 degrees F.) to a golden brown. Dredge in sugar.

When making raised doughnuts, it is important to let them rise until about double in size. When lowering the doughnuts into the fat, place the raised side down in the hot fat. This allows the under side to rise.

Peery Fears 'Insecurity' In U.S. Plan

Governor Asserts Cost of Pensions Would Be Prohibitive.

Sees Tax Increase in Proposal, Expenses Over $10,000,000.

Richmond, Jan. 28 (AP).—In a statement amplifying previous explanations of his opposition to the old-age pension plan embodied in the Wagner-Lewis bill now pending in Congress, Gov. George C. Peery today said he is not opposed to sound social security and relief legislation, but that "I do not believe we can promote permanent social security for our people by financial insecurity on the part of the State."

Answering a particular editorial criticism, which he said did him an injustice, the Governor said his opposition is not to security legislation in general but to this particular plan, which would provide a pension of $30 per month for persons over 65 years of age, to be provided on a 50-50 basis by the Federal and State governments, but would allow no benefit to a State unable to provide its part of the cost.

Sees Cost Over $10,000,000.

"I requested our very efficient State tax commissioner, whose estimates have generally proved to be reliable and conservative, to make a study of the matter and advise me what the cost of the plan would be to Virginia," said the Governor.

"And he advises as follows:

"'As I view the matter, if Virginia were to be called on to raise $15 per month under such a bill as the Wagner bill, the cost to Virginia would range anywhere from $10,000,000 per annum to $20,000,000 per annum. This cost would be prohibitive.'

"This estimate of the tax commissioner as to the cost is amply confirmed by insurance actuaries whom I have consulted about the matter."

Gov. Peery added that an editorial contention that the cost to Virginia would be only about $2,600,000 per year "can not be sustained and would rest upon a hope that could never be realized unless the number of persons eligible for pensions be cut down to about one-fifth, or the amount of the pension be reduced to about $3 per month from the State, neither of which would be at all practical or satisfactory.

Fears Doubling of Taxes.

"The plan, therefore, would virtually mean that our tax bill must be doubled in Virginia. The tax commissioner says that it would be prohibitive."

After asserting his opposition to causing financial insecurity of the State, the Governor added that "all of our people must be housed, fed and clothed. They are entitled to receive more than bare subsistence. Those who can not be provided for by private industry must be cared for by the Government in some one or more of its branches, and to this end we must direct our efforts and service."

He recalled that in March, 1933, former Gov. John Garland Pollard appointed a commission to study the problem of unemployment insurance and that this commission's report has been filed and includes a proposed bill on unemployment insurance which will be considered by the next General Assembly.

Asks Spirit of Fairness.

"I may add," he said, "that any legislation on this or kindred matters which Congress may enact should be studied and will receive careful consideration in its relation to our State.

"In the meantime, we should approach these problems in a spirit of fairness, and with the purpose to give all of the facts. The solution of the difficult problems confronting us involves not only the State, but the present and future welfare of our citizens, many of whom are in distress."

The unemployment insurance plan for Virginia proposed by the commission referred to by the Governor would include all employes receiving less than $2,000 a year in establishments with more than seven employes, but excluding farm labor, personal and domestic service, casual labor or less than four weeks, interstate commerce, employment by any governmental unit or private school where the employment contract is on an annual basis or in a hospital not operated for profit.

An employe would have to be employed at least 13 weeks in the 52 immediately prior to his application in order to be eligible for benefits, would have to be capable of and available for employment and registered at an employment office.

The proposed compensation is 50 per cent of the average weekly wage but not more than $15 for not over 26 weeks in any 12-month period. Benefits for partial unemployment would be the difference between wages actually received and 50 per cent of the average wage.

Would Set Up Reserve.

Individual reserves would be set up by employes and supplemented by a State insurance fund if they should become exhausted would furnish funds under this plan. Employers would have to pay into their reserve funds 2 per cent of their pay rolls for 2 years and until the reserve amounted to $65 per employe and 1 per cent of the pay roll from this point until the reserve was $100 per employe, after which contributions might be discontinued.

An assessment of one-half of 1 per cent of pay rolls would provide the State insurance fund.

Employes would make no contribution to the funds.

The State would administer the act through the Department of Labor and Industry.

Assembly to Get Nice's Inquiry Plans Tonight

Inquiry Into All State Departments Called For in Measure.

Annapolis, Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Gov. Harry W. Nice today said the administration bill calling for a thorough investigation of all State Departments will be ready for presentation to the General Assembly when it reconvenes tomorrow night. It will be introduced by Senator J. David Baille, Republican, Carroll County, minority floor leader.

The proposal will fulfill a preelection promise. Need for such a probe was stressed by the Governor in his campaign tour, and it also was put forward in his inaugural address. The bill will ask legislative authority for the Governor to name a commission of three to conduct the probe.

The Governor said the investigation would require about two years, and the commission's report would be presented to the 1937 session. The bill does not stipulate the cost of the inquiry, but the Governor intimated it would be about $120,000. His estimate, he said, will be incorporated in the forthcoming budget.

"There is unrest throughout the State," the Governor added. "Expenditures will be justified so long as an investigation proves them necessary and gives the true facts concerning them."

Robin Too Early, Finds Frederick Covered by Snow

Frederick Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—Frederick's first robin arrived two months in advance and found himself on top of an 18-inch snowfall.

Residents near Hood College campus noticed the robin, said to be a very forlorn figure, hopping about languidly on top of the snow. They tossed it bits of bread and other food.

Old residents said the bird set a local record for early arrival of robins. Usually, they said, the first robin did not show up here until the latter part of March.

Misunas Gets 35-Yr. Term InRichmond

Mais' and Legenza's Aid Smiles as He Hears Murder Sentence.

Gunman to Be Brought Here Shortly for Trial in Brewery Holdup.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Arthur (Dutch) Misunas, 37, last of the Tri-State gangsters to receive sentence for murder here, was ordered to the penitentiary for a term of 35 years by Judge John L. Ingram, in hustings court this afternoon.

Misunas will be taken to Washington in a few days to stand trial there for his part in a holdup and shooting near the District of Columbia postoffice in December, 1933.

The sentencing of the gangster who turned State's evidence against his former friends, Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, and was instrumental in starting them on the path to the electric chair, came as a complete surprise. District Attorney Leslie Garnett and Assistant District Attorney Louis I. Richards, of Washington, accompanied by Sergt. Floyd Truscott, of the Washington police, arrived in Richmond this afternoon and asked Judge Ingram to pass sentence in order that the burly gangster might face a second trial in the Capital.

Brought From Henrico Jail.

He was brought from Henrico Jail, where he has been confined since he was returned from San Francisco last July, by eight county police. Clean-shaven and dapper, despite his size, he stood in a courtroom empty save for the Washington officials and newspapermen and smiled slightly when he heard his sentence. Misunas had feared a life term. It was explained to him that good behavior would cut his term in half.

Misunas has confessed that he was the trigger man in the postoffice robbery for which he will soon be tried. The driver of the mail truck was shot in the leg and has never completely recovered. The gunman may expect leniency in Washington also, for late in November he was taken there and his testimony for the prosecution led to the conviction of John Dunn and Sam Berlin, two more of the gang, who received sentences of from 3 to 15 years for their part in the Heurich brewery holdup.

A few days before Legenza and Mais shot themselves out of the city jail here, the former told a reporter here that Misunas was "a dirty welching rat," and swore eternal vengeance on the man who he felt had sent him and Mais to the chair. For this reason, a guard of 20 armed police was thrown around Misunas' cell the morning of the jail break, many persons believing that the fugitive killers would attempt to consummate their revenge on the "welcher" before they left Richmond.

Misunas' Confession.

Misunas, before joining the gang, was alleged to have been a small-time racketeer in Philadelphia. In his detailed confession he told officers a story of widespread criminal activities in which he and other members of the organization, all now either dead or in custody, participated between the summer of 1933 and last spring. He said he left the group after the shooting here and fled to San Francisco with his wife, where he entered the restaurant business. He was arrested when mail sent to him was traced by postoffice operatives.

Howard Sutton, of 7 South Fourth street, who told the local police Saturday that he aided Mais and Legenza in procuring guns which they used in the jail-break, just as heatedly denied the story under further police questioning today.

Sutton was arraigned in police court today charged with "feloniously secreting and conveying" the pistols to the condemned gangsters and his case was continued until February 8. Chief of Detectives A. S. Wright said that Sutton told him today that he was under the influence of narcotics at the time and "just didn't know why" he made statements which might make him liable to the death sentence as an accessory in the murder of Policeman W. A. Toot, slain as Mais and Legenza fled.

Virginia U. Class To Elect Leaders

Nominees for other offices are: Secretary, Randolph Garnett, of Norfolk; Edward M. Hudgins, of Chase City, and Robert E. Spaulding, of New York City; treasurer, Lewis H. Bosher, jr., of Richmond; Griffith Dodson, jr., of Norfolk, and William S. Munday, jr., of Lynchburg; historian, George Cooper, jr. of Louisville, Ky.; Paul S. Dulaney, of Washington, and William H. Peden, of Freeport, N. J.

Roanoke Boy, 13, Recovering After Losing Part of His Brain

Victim of Auto Accident Suffers Only Minor Memory Lapse From Unusual Lobar Punctures; Recalls Being Hit by Car.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Following the removal of a part of his brain, in what is described here as one of the most remarkable cases in medical history, Robert Miller, 13, Roanoke boy, is recovering with apparently no more serious effects than lapses of memory.

Miller was struck by an automobile last November and a hole the size of silver dollar was torn in his head. The bone pressed down upon his brain.

For five days the youth remained unconscious and at times appeared to be on the verge of death. His condition was aggravated as the inflamed brain began forcing its way through the skull puncture. In time, however, this condition was checked by means of lobar punctures which relieved the pressure and caused the brain to be completely drawn back into the skull.

Today Miller is practically normal and remembers events that occurred on the day of the accident. However, he does not recall that he made a home run in a baseball game that afternoon and doesn't remember attending school in the afternoon. Physicians say that in time he may regain, through association of ideas, his ability to remember as well as he did before the accident.

Virginia Synod OpensRoanoke Sessions Today

Lutherans to Hear Sermon by Dr. Scherer at First Meeting.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The annual convention of the Lutheran Synod of Virginia will open tomorrow at the St. Mark's Lutheran Church here, and continue through Friday. The synod comprises 171 congregations, 78 parishes and 30,000 members.

The Rev. Dr. J. J. Scherer, jr., of Richmond, president of the synod, will preach the opening sermon. A banquet of the brotherhood will be held Wednesday at Hotel Patrick Henry with the Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Baker, of York, Pa., as the principal speaker.

An address on missions Thursday by the Rev. Lewis Koon, of New Market, and an address Friday by the Rev. Henry Einspruch, of Baltimore, Md., head of the Jewish mission, are listed as other high lights of the convention.

Trustees to Roanoke College, Salem Orphans Home, Lutheran Seminary, Columbia, S. C.; Marion Female College, the Lowman Home for the Aged and Helpless at White Rock, S. C., and the Williams-Henson Home for Boys at Knoxville, Tenn., will be elected at the business sessions.

Fire Siren Betrays School Children; Classes as Usual

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—The fire siren played a mean trick on Waynesboro's school children.

R. C. Jennings, supervising principal, had announced that in case of unusually bad weather a long blast would be sounded on the fire siren at 7:30 a. m. to indicate that the school would remain closed on that day. Just recently, with the mercury standing at 4 degrees below zero here, Prof. Jennings called the firehouse and told them to blow the whistle and carry the glad tidings to the kiddies.

But the fire siren wouldn't blow! Firemen worked with it for 15 minutes, but not a toot did it toot. Perhaps it had ice in its tonsils or something . . . anyway, it simply wouldn't make a sound and classes were held at the schools as usual.

Huge Road Program Planned.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Ernest L. Balley, State road commissioner, announces that plans are being made by his department for the expenditure of $6,000,000 in Federal and State funds for the improvement of unimproved gaps in the primary State road system. The work will be apportioned among the 55 counties on the basis of unimproved mileage with 20 per cent retained by the State road commission to be spent by it in its discretion.

TrappedDriver Is Saved by Pal In River Plunge

Man Reaches Surface, Then Dives to Rescue His Companion in Truck.

Salisbury, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—Trapped in the cab of a truck which careened into the ice-covered Wicomico River here today, Lewis Sneed, of Cherryville, N. C., owes his life to his companion, Carl Thornburg, also of Cherryville.

Thornburg was asleep in the bunk of the truck when it skidded on the slippery street and plunged through the ice into 12 feet of water. He managed to break through the glass surrounding the bunk and fight his way to the surface.

He pulled himself out, only to find Sneed was still trapped. Thornburg dived back into the river, broke the glass in the cab window and hauled the unconscious driver out.

He administered first aid until physicians arrived.

The truck, loaded with eight tons of yarn and asbestos, was bound from Gastonia, N. C., to Chester, Pa., Philadelphia and Trenton, N. J. Sneed and Thornburg rested here tonight while mechanics with cranes sought to haul the truck from the river.

Youth Near Death In Sledding Accident

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Lester Peck, 19, of Clearspring, was near death tonight after a sled on which he was riding collided with a car driven by S. F. Winter, Hancock. Both of Peck's legs were broken.

It was the third sledding accident during the week-end, Charles Youngblood, 16, Hancock, having succumbed to injuries received when his sled collided with the car of Harold Moore, Hancock, and James O. Waugh, 16, Funkstown, who is in the hospital here.

Ruth Delbert, high school student, was knocked unconscious when a slide of snow and ice from a roof struck her on the head. Her condition is improved.

Veterans at Roanoke To Hear Col. Kearney

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Col. B. W. Kearney, national senior vice commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, is scheduled to address local members of the V. F. W. here Wednesday night. He is to discuss the bonus question and other proposed legislation.

Organization of another post of V. F. W. is expected to be completed at the meeting, H. L. Cooper, commander of Post 1264, said. Post 484, the largest in Virginia, had its charter taken from it last fall.

Maryland Briefs

(Associated Press.)

Frostburg.—Residents here fear the renewal of an epidemic of rabies which swept the community last summer and resulted in the death of one prominent citizen.

Reports of several savage dogs running loose have been received, and one dog was killed by Police Chief Benjamin Thomas at the request of its owner. The head of the dog has been sent to the county health officer for examination.

Frederick.—A favorable report is expected soon from the Frederick County delegation in the Legislature regarding a bill to refund an outstanding city bond issue here by the sale of $35,000 worth of new bonds. The bill was introduced last week and was referred to the county delegation for study.

Crisfield.—No deaths thus far have been reported from the mild epidemic of influenza prevalent throughout lower Somerset County. Patients have been confined to their beds for varying periods, but physicians here believe the situation is under control.

Chestertown.—An increase in the number of persons on the relief rolls of Kent County is noted in the December report of the County Welfare Board.

In November, only 2.5 per cent of the population was on relief; in December, the figure was 5.7, or a total of 800 men, women and children.

Leonardtown—The Rev. Richard M. McKeon, S. J., director of the Cardinal Gibbons Institute at Ridge, Md., for a two-month period, has returned to New York after a study of conditions and affairs of the institute. While in Ridge he reorganized the fiscal system of the school.

Cumberland—Cumberland's North Centre street is proving a motorists' Nemesis. Within the last week four cars have skidded on the slippery street car rails and plunged across the sidewalk.

The last machine to do so went through a plate glass store window.

Frederick police here are running down numerous clews and tips in their efforts to trap "joy riders" who have been responsible for the thefts of nine cars from local streets during the last five weeks.

Officers said the thieves finish their "rides," then remove radios, lights and other accessories.

Baltimore—Anthony Marrara, a Philadelphian, talked so well in traffic court here that Magistrate Edward M. Staylor not only reopened a case in which Marrara had forfeited collateral, but also lent the man $1 when he explained he had no funds to buy food or obtain lodging.

Marrara told the magistrate he missed the train from Philadelphia which would have got him here in time for the trial.

Prosecutors Will Discuss LawChanges

Wells Favors Lighter Penalties in Auto Death Cases.

Parole, Habeas Corpus Revisions Also to Be Parley Topics.

Baltimore, Jan. 28 (AP).—Three important legal questions will come before the second annual meeting of the Association of State's Attorneys of Maryland here on Thursday. Possible changes in parole and manslaughter laws will be discussed, as well as a change in habeas corpus proceedings.

J. Bernard Wells, State's attorney for Baltimore City, stated that the new classification of "involuntary manslaughter" is desired and will be discussed in detail.

Middle Way Need.

"We are in need of a middle way for the motorist who through some fault other than gross negligence runs down and kills a person," Wells said. "At present the driver is either guilty of manslaughter and subject to imprisonment for ten years, or is guilty of nothing at all. I believe we can keep that charge and in addition have a charge of involuntary manslaughter with a maximum penalty of three or five years. Juries will then be much more willing to bring in verdicts against prisoners who caused deaths, but are not guilty of gross carelessness or negligence."

A system of indeterminate sentences will be discussed, Wells said, which, if it became effective, probably would supplant the present parole system.

"Under it, a prisoner would be sentenced to a term of, for instance, from 1 to 14 years. At the end of one year a board of prison control would hear his case and facts regarding his conduct as a prisoner, and determine if he should serve longer. At present a prisoner becomes eligible for parole after one-third of his sentence has been served," said Wells.

Encroachment Fear.

The official expressed the opinion that the proposed change would be an encroachment upon the bench, and may be inadvisable for that reason.

The "endless chain" system in habeas corpus proceedings may result in the group recommending that a prisoner must submit new evidence or a new issue in an application for the writ if one has already been refused.

Approximately 30 persons, 24 of them active State's attorneys, will attend the meeting. Business discussions will be held in the afternoon, and a dinner at night.

Peach Growers Fear Big Loss

Marylanders Afraid Sub-Zero Weather May Kill Off Crops.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Fruit growers were apprehensive following the second sub-zero weather within a week, recalling what the 20-below-zero weather last February 28 did to peaches.

The 1934 peach crop was virtually wiped out, there being only a 20 per cent crop in the Hancock section, one of the most extensive peach-growing areas in the East, a d virtually no crop in the Smithsburg section.

Peach buds last winter were frozen in the bark and it is feared today's sub-zero weather also may have killed the buds.

In 1912, when the mercury dropped to 26 below, there was no peach crop.

Apples are hardier and growers were hopeful that they have not been affected.

Shooting Suspect To Face Jurors

Tucker Is Accused of Attacking Widow.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Thomas E. Tucker, 25, who police said confessed to shooting Mrs. Grace Peterson, 23, widow, last December 9, was held in $5,000 bail today by Magistrate Richard Sweeney for the action of the February grand jury on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

The woman was confined to the Washington County Hospital for some weeks with bullet wounds in the chest and abdomen, after she was shot while alighting from a car in front of her home.

Mrs. Peterson testified she believed jealousy was the cause of the shooting. Tucker did not testify.

Payne Holdings Of 1½ Million Shown in Will

Schools, Red Cross Share Bulk; Fund Created for Employes.

John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, who died last week, named Washington and Lee University, William and Mary College and the American National Red Cross as the principal beneficiaries of an $1,500,000 estate, revealed yesterday when his will was filed in the District Supreme Court. The three institutions are to share the residue equally after approximately $400,000 in specific bequests are paid.

In addition, Mr. Payne established a $50,000 trust fund to aid present or former employes of the Red Cross who need financial assistance, and bequeathed a $12,000 fund to the University of West Virginia to maintain scholarships for two students who must come from Taylor and Preston Counties, and who must be worthy of the trust.

Mr. Payne left $10,000 each to his nieces and nephews, children of his six deceased brothers and sisters. He left no closer survivors. He directed that the same sum be divided between the children of nieces and nephews who may have died. His executors have the names of 22 surviving nieces and nephews and children of two deceased.

D. C. Institutions Named.

Silas H. Strawn, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and the Washington Loan & Trust Co., of which Mr. Payne was a director, were named to execute the trusts and pay out the bequests of the estate.

Mr. Payne decreed that four institutions should have $5,000 each. They are Art Institute of Chicago, Field Museum of Natural History, Old Peoples Home (Chicago), and the Glenwood School for Boys, near Flossmoor, Ill. Three Washington institutions are given a like amount. They are Children's Hospital, Garfield Hospital and the Florence Crittenton Home.

The hospital at Warrenton, Va., is to have $5,000 and the Warrenton Library is to be given $2,000 to purchase books "of real literary value." Mr. Payne's portraits of his mother and father are also to go to the library.

State to Receive Paintings.

Mr. Payne's valuable collections of paintings by old masters and modern artists are donated to the Commonwealth of Virginia, in whose custody they have been for several years. They are housed in the Battle Abbey at Richmond, and in addition a number of paintings that include the portraits of John Marshall, Thomas Jefferson, Lord Byron, Lady Doubleday, and others are to be added to the collection.

A collection of etchings and Portuguese carvings, furniture from his home, and an endowment of $50,000, the income from which is to be expended to acquire meritorious paintings by contemporary American artists, were provided for the Commonwealth of Virginia by the will.

The trust company was named trustee to care for a fund that is to be utilized in preserving the graves of relatives in three cemeteries near Orleans, Va.

Firemen Save Mother, Girl 8 Hours Old

Husband Burned Aiding in Rescue of Two at Charles Town.

Overheated Stove Called Cause of Blaze at Rural Home.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Firemen of the Independent Fire Company of Charles Town responded to an alarm on the F. L. Jordan farm, west of here, this afternoon and rescued Mrs. Elmer B. Mason and her new-born baby daughter, less than 8 hours old.

The fire started in the room occupied by Mrs. Mason. An overheated stove, which was being kept heavily heated due to the sub-zero temperature and the arrival of the baby daughter, was said to be responsible for the fire.

Flames broke through a chimney partition. Firemen, although hampered by the intense cold, saved the house from complete destruction.

Harold Blum, second lieutenant of the fire department, was severely burned about the face and arms when flames burst through the windows.

E. B. Mason, husband of Mrs. Mason, also suffered minor injuries fighting the spread of the flames before the arrival of the firemen.

Firemen Frost Bitten In Blaze at Monrovia

Frederick, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—Cold weather stole the show completely today as flames razed a warehouse at Monrovia, near here.

Firemen from Frederick and Mount Airy responded to an alarm to the burning building, but found, when they arrived, that the only available water was in a nearby creek. But the creek was covered by several inches of ice.

Undaunted, the firemen chopped holes in the ice and inserted hose lines. Then it was found that gasoline-driven pumps on the fire engines had frozen tight.

By the time the pumps had thawed out, the fire had leveled the warehouse, owned by the George W. McComas Co., Inc., a canning concern. The loss was estimated at $3,500, which was covered by insurance.

Firemen said cold weather is believed to have caused the blaze when a wire, contracted by cold, snapped and brought on a short circuit.

On the way back to Frederick, firemen received their last blow at the hands of cold weather. It was found that several of the men had suffered severe frost bite due to the 15-degree-below-zero weather.

Services Held for Child Killed in Gun Accident

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Funeral rites were held today for Robert Lee Willis, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Willis, living at Karo, a line company village about 6 miles from here, who was killed Saturday by the accidental discharge of a shotgun.

The gun was lying across an upturned barrel in the home of the boy's parents and when the child sought to remove the weapon the latter was discharged, the charge penetrating the neck and head.

"Enchanted April," With Ann Harding and Frank Morgan, to Open Here Tomorrow

Strong Support Will Appear in Roles of Merit

Has Been a Book and Play; Theaters Aid Benefit; Amusement Chatter.

(Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.
By Nelson B. Bell.

One hobbling back on the job knows he has found the right desk by the first announcement he encounters upon it.

I mean to say, what could be more warmingly home-like to a briefly truant dramatic editor than the statement that beginning tomorrow—characteristically out of kilter with the so-called "regular" opening day—Ann Harding will take possession of the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater in her latest RKO-Radio production, "Enchanted April," a picturization of the novel and play of the same name by "Elizabeth"?

Just like salt-rising bread and popcorn on the Thanksgiving visit home to grandma's.

But about this latest of the Harding vehicles: It is interesting to note that "Enchanted April" is opening in the National Capital in advance of its scheduled showing as a major feature at Radio City Music Hall in New York. This is an honor occasionally, but not often, accorded Washington. It is even more important that Frank Morgan will be seen in the principal male role opposite the star. These are factors that augur well for tomorrow morning's opening on Fifteenth street.

Suited to Role.

Miss Harding was chosen for the stellar role in this subject, one is led to believe, because it was the RKO-Radio executive consensus of opinion that she was the only contract player on the lot who could do justice to Letty Wilkins in her gallant fight for a fling at romance.

Ann Harding's list of film plays that have proved popular with Capital audiences and profitable to Washington managements is a considerable one, including such items as "Holiday," "East Lynne," "Gallant Lady," "The Fountain," "The Girl of the Golden West," "The Life of Vergie Winters," "When Ladies Meet" and numerous others, not forgetting the very recent "Biography of a Bachelor Girl."

Such distinguished leads as Miss Harding and Frank Morgan suggest the necessity of a supporting ensemble of at least comparable ability and experience.

This need seems to have been met in the assemblage of a cast of associate players among whom the names of Reginald Owen, Katherine Alexander, Jane Baxter and Ralph Forbes are prominent.

Tomorrow will tell the tale. Let us hope it will be a pleasant one.

Due to sudden illness, Mabel Albertson, one of Phil Baker's mainstays in his radio revue on the stage of Loew's Fox this week, has been forced to relinquish her part, for the time being, and has been replaced by Estelle Jane, the young lady with two first names. Miss Jane arrived in town yesterday morning and assumed her new duties at yesterday's first performance. This was made possible by the fact that Miss Jane played opposite the accordion-pleated comedian in "Calling All Stars," one of Broadway's recent disappointments.

Theaters Adopt New Plan.

Instead of presenting their individual entertainments, as was done last year, the theater managers of Washington have decided to bend their efforts toward the aggrandizement of the ball to be given at the Shoreham on Wednesday night of this week as part of the Nation-wide campaign to raise funds for the fight against infantile paralysis, centering in the President's interest in the Warm Springs Foundation and the celebration of his birthday.

This decision will provide an absolutely unique entertainment and concentrate interest and earning power in the one gala event at the Shoreham.

Managements Combine.

John J. Payette, general zone manager for Warner Brothers; Carter Barron, eastern division manager for Loew's, Inc., and Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's and chairman of the showmen's committee, have virtually completed plans for their participation in the event through a series of conferences with the general ball committee.

Phil Baker, currently headlining at Loew's Fox, will act as master of ceremonies, a tricky business on an occasion of this magnitude at which he is an adept. His radio revue will be on hand, en toto, and Phil Lampkin will see to it that the Fox's contributions to the program are given the benefit of superior southpaw musical direction.

Rubinoff and his violin, headliners at the Earle, will be among those present, as will also the Radio Aces, from the same bill, with the veteran Freddie Clark swishing the rattan before the instrumentalists to insure the proper accompaniment of the Earle's stage representatives.

Floor Shows Represented.

In addition to these stars, several of the artists appearing in the Troika and Shoreham floor shows also will appear.

Plans for the presentation of all this talent—over and above the preparations made by the ball committee on its own account for an exceptional evening of merrymaking—have been perfected by Guy Wonders, in charge of stage entertainment at the Earle, and Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Fox and former production manager at the Capitol Theater on Broadway.

These two able and amiable gentlemen were to have shared the difficulties of stage management "behind the scenes" at the ball, but with Mr. Ford lamentably confined to his hospital bed by a sudden appendectomy, Mr. Wonders will have to go it alone—which fortunately he is wholly competent to do.

The Columbia Players are to all intents and purposes agog and a half over the recent felicitations received from Stanley Ridges after he had learned that they plan to present C. B. Fernald's adaptation of Luigi Chiarelli's "The Mask and the Face" in Pierce Hall on Febuary 6 and 7, for the first time on any Washington stage, professional or amateur. Mr. Ridges, former leading man with Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players and last seen locally as the fiery Lucifer Tench in Maxwell Anderson's new play of "Valley Forge," played the leading role in "The Mask and the Face" for the Theater Guild in New York in the spring of 1933. Mr. Ridges sends special greetings to Arthur Westover, the Count Grazia in the Columbians' production, remarking that both he and Mr. Faversham, who played the role before him, found the Count a "problem" and expressing the kindly hope that Mr. Westover "will have more success than either of us." Washington's amateur groups at least do not pick the soft spots!

Speaking of Maxwell Anderson's "Valley Forge," Margalo Gillmore, who also supported Philip Merivale in that Theater Guild production both here and in New York—her performance here, by the way, was her first, Miss Gilmore having been added to the cast following the Pittsburgh opening week—will be seen in her former role of Henrietta, the rebellious younger sister, in Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," when Katharine Cornell revives that admirable drama in New York as part of the repertory so magnificently inaugurated with Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

Miss Gillmore acted Henrietta during the major portion of the first New York engagement and the first coast-to-coast tour of the Besier play. She was seen in the part—it is the one played by Maureen O'Sullivan in the screen version—here at the Belasco.

In March she will be seen in Miss Cornell's production of John van Druten's new drama, "Flowers and Forest," which he has come to America to supervise.

Sweet are the uses of adversity—or so I am told.

Last Wednesday night's sudden crack-up, with the pounding head, scorching eyes, burning body and brief relinquishment of the senses, our personal society of physicians and surgeons informs us, put us to bed one scant leap ahead of what might have turned out to be a complete outfitting either of bronchial pneumonia or pleurisy. While they decline to guarantee which, 11 to 10 seems about right that it would have been the latter.

And never did even the apothecary in "Romeo and Juliet" think up such potions as these present-day, remedial practitioners are able to concoct!

One chief item of medication, I think, was composed of equal parts of solutions of quinine and asafetida, mixed with chopped-up sewing needles.

You must come up and try some, one day!

Dots and Dashes.

Max Rabinoff's production of Verdi's grand opera, "La Traviata," in Constitution Hall tomorrow night, is exerting an appeal beyond society and music circles into the professional field. . . . Phil Baker and Rubinoff, already celebrated in these vagrant dispatches, will occupy a box. . . . That would be between their own performances at Loew's Fox and the Earle, respectively . . . And, of course, to witness the local debut of Edis de Philippe, native of Manhattan, who will sing Violetta. . . . It is even being bruited about that Phil is bringing Mrs. Phil all the way back from Florida for the event. . . . Or was she coming back, anyway? . . . There is a definite demand in Washington for a view of Sean O'Casey's "Within the Gates," the play that ran in New York, was bitterly opposed in certain communities on the road and now has returned to New York. . . . How about it, Mr. Cochran? . . . The play is one for thinking audiences. . . . That is the only kind we have here, you might point out. . . . Without having seen any of the new film bills, through force of circumstances and not personal preference, I am still willing to wager that the two funniest scenes on view are in the pictures continuing their runs. . . . I mean the intoxicated hogs in "A Girl of the Limberlost," ending its run at RKO-Keith's tonight, and Stepin Fetchit counting the sheep, with Will Rogers in "The County Chairman," at the Columbia. . . . It would be interesting to know how they ever got those pigs that way . . . But then, it would be interesting to know how a lot of people ever got that way!

Personal aside: Okay, Mr. Olsen, not only will I move over, but you may have my place entirely. And thanks a million for a bothersome emergency job well done. Or maybe you think "nasty" is the word.

Additional Complaint Note.

And another thing I don't like about it. Blowing up at just the time I did cut into my snowballing something terrible!

Gayety

"BOSTON BELLES." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 29 scenes, with Mike Sachs, Charles Bohn, Johnny Barry, Harry Allen, Floyd Hatlicy, Jack Richards, Dorothy Wahl, Virginia Alley, Cecil Von Dell, Evelyn Brooks, Alice Kennedy and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Flagg; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

It will probably seem like rank heresy even from a Yankee out of the very stronghold of Yankeedom to say so, but these "Boston Belles" are no particular embellishment to what is colloquially known as "The Hub of the Universe."

Further, whatever they might have had to crack all recrods at the famed "Old Howard," in Boston, surely must have been left in the Hub, for this week's burlesque at Jimmy Lake's estimable temple of pulchritude is of a caliber quite unworthy of the wheel, the management, and the cast.

One should not, perhaps, find fault with a show that has as many as four bright spots, yet in view of the other 25 scenes of dubious merit, these really meritorious moments are overshadowed.

In the order of presentation—and they are all in the first act—they are the pantomime of Mike Sachs and other members of the company; the eccentric inebriate dance, by Charles "Peanuts" Bohn; the gold-image routine, by Dorothy Wahl, and the hill-billy singing of an unprogrammed trio.

Miss Wahl the Smash Hit.

Unstinted praise should go to Dorothy Wahl (billed indiscriminately as "Dorethea" and "Dorothea" and "Dorothy Wahl") for her stirring dance in a costume of gold paint.

As hill-billies, the anonymous trio is really terrible, but they play and sing and dance with such utter abandon that the musical qualities of their numbers are forgotten and the sum total of their presentation is nothing but fun and plenty of it.

Cecil Von Dell and Virginia Alley head the cast as display artistes, with Alice Kennedy the prima donna, and Evelyn Brooks working many of the skits as soubrette.

The Dancing Bryanettes, when they all decide just when to pick them up and put them down in unison, will become more of an embellishment to the program than at present.

Mentioned Among Year's Winners

While the winners of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' annual awards are said already to have been decided upon, those honored by this famous West Coast clearing house for talent will not be made public until next month. However, among those said to be under consideration for a statauette, for her fine work in "As the Earth Turns," is Jean Muir, pictured above, coyly shushing herself in the mirror. Miss Muir, incidentally, will be along soon in the Warner Brothers' "The White Cockatoo."

West Virginia 'Gretna Greens' Hit in Assembly

Ban on Soliciting Nuptials or Accepting Fees Provided in Bill.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—West Virginia's "Gretna Greens," where thousands of young people annually are wed in hasty elopements, may be legislated into a more prosaic existence.

A bill was introduced in the Senate today to prohibit ministers from soliciting the right to administer marriage vows and subsequent fees from the grooms. It also would forbid the minister dividing the fee with others.

It came from Senator Paull (Democrat), Brooke, a native of the State's most widely known "Gretna Green" at Wellsburg and provided the spice of a quiet Senate session. Paull said the bill was introduced "by request."

Each branch received a bill to fix the maximum alcoholic percentage of nonintoxicating beer at 5 per cent. Nonintoxicating beer is now defined as that with a content less than 3.2 per cent.

The beer bills came from Delegate Lafon (Democrat), Monroe, chairman of the judiciary committee, and Senator Beacom (Democrat), Cabell, father of the State's 3.2 per cent beer law enacted in 1933.

Only one bill was passed at the short sessions. Calling for an extension to December 31 of the time for the auditor to certify delinquent lands for tax sales, it was approved by the House without a dissenting vote and sent to the Senate. It is a companion to a moratorium measure enacted previously by the House.

Byrd Urges Payment For Work at Ft. Myer

A bill to fix standards for fruit and vegetable containers was offered yesterday by Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, according to the Associated Press.

The Virginian also introduced measures to authorize payment of subcontractors for materials and labor furnished at Fort Myer, Va., to pay Butler Lumber Co., Inc., Richmond, $60,185 in damages, and to confer on the Court of Claims jurisdiction to render judgment on such claims of the Norfolk Southern Railway.

Nice to Hold Reception For Assembly Feb. 28

Annapolis, Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Gov. and Mrs. Harry W. Nice will give a reception in honor of members of the General Assembly at the Executive Mansion on February 28 from 8 to 11 p. m., it was announced today.

Mrs. Nice also has laid plans to enter actively into the social activities in Annapolis. Today she announced that on February 7 she will inaugurate a series of public receptions and will be "at home" on Thursdays through February and March. The hours will be from 4 to 7.

American Coalition to Meet.

An open meeting of the American Coalition will be held at 8:30 p. m. today in the Hotel Carlton. Speakers will be Bainbridge Colby, Thomas F. Cadwalader, Representative Martin Dies and Richard H. Sanger.

It Happened One Night

Hollywood, Jan. 27.

GARBO TALKS! GARBO SMILES GARBO CAFES! This is Greta's latest accomplishment. Garbo stepped out Friday night for the first time in public. She went to the Cafe Trocadero. If an earthquake had occurred at that time it would have gone unnoticed. The movie stars behaved as if they were a bunch of autograph fans. They came to see and gape at a legend.

The word traveled, every one told you confidentially: "Be at the Troc tonight by 11. Garbo's going to be there." At 11:30 Garbo made her debut. She was nervous. She was with Salka Viertel, friend and adviser; Max Reinhardt, Gottfried Reinhardt and Marcel Archard, the French director. The star-studded room was waiting; every one had his chair placed facing the door. The orchestra became bewildered and stopped playing a dance selection. Billy Wilkerson, owner of the Troc, ran to the bandleader and ordered him to continue playing.

* * * *

The headwaiter spoke to Garbo: "I can give you a table in a corner," he said, "where no one will see you." Garbo didn't want to slink away. She was to sit at a ringside table with Princess Natalie Paley and Felixe Rollo, the pseudo Egyptian prince. It was Rollo who had made the reservation. It was his first date with Garbo, arranged by Mrs. Viertel. Princess Paley and Greta had met before.

Previously, Mrs. Viertel, the Reinhardts and Archard had dinner at Garbo's house. Greta wanted to step out for some time and now—the hell with legends—she was doing it.

* * * *

Garbo sat at the large ringside table with one of the spotlights glaring down on her. The crowd was well-behaved. They merely took looks and danced near this fellow performer, whom they had never seen in person before. Garbo smiled and chatted with her companions. She seemed pleased to see two people who walked over to her table. Ernst Lubitsch went over to say "Hello." Walter Wanger, who produced "Queen Christina," said "Hello," and asked Greta if he could have the next dance.

"Not tonight, Walter," answered Greta. "Let me get used to all this first."

Louis B. Mayer, who gives Garbo $270,000 for each picture she makes, was in the room. He was astonished to see his exclusive star. He did not walk over to the table. He tried smiling, sheepishly, at her.

Peggy Fears, Marlene Dietrich and Lili Damita were present. The Misses Fears, Dietrich and Damita generally sit together at one table at the Trocadero. This night they all had individual tables. They were on their own.

* * * *

It was the first time Dietrich and Garbo met face to face. They did not speak to each other. Fears and Damita didn't get a word in with Garbo, either. Garbo wore a tailored suit and a necktie. Marlene Dietrich, Peggy Fears and Lili Damita also wore pants.

Miss Damita had her hair combed in Garbo fashion. Lili's escort, Michael Pearson, arrived late. From the back he mistook Garbo for Damita. He rushed over to Greta's table, slapped her on the back and said: "Hello, Toots." Garbo turned about and smiled at him.

* * * *

GRETA did not dance and she did not eat. She sat there talking, glancing and drinking champagne. In the party with Wanger and his wife was Frances Langford, the singer, in Hollywood to make a picture for Wanger. Miss Langford got out on the floor and sang "Night and Day." About 1 o'clock one of the Garbo party suggested that they leave. Garbo said: "I would like to hear that girl sing another serious song before I go." Frances Langford obliged with another song.

At about 1:30 Garbo said: "Let us go." She didn't say "I tank I go home now." This trite phrase now belonging to her past. She had discarded it. A waiter brought the check. Garbo wanted to pay it. "I don't want you to pay for my good time," she said. Felixe Rollo paid the check, which called for $65. While the check was being paid, Marlene Dietrich and her escort, Fritz Lang, hurriedly left.

Garbo's exit was not as brazen as her entrance. She left by the back door, walking through the kitchen. The photographers were waiting near her parked car. She fought against having her picture taken. She didn't want to break all legends the first night; after all there will be other nights.

Greta is going to step out again. Of course, she won't overdo it; she's too smart about publicity for that. She enjoyed herself, and she's fed up with playing the "I want to be alone" game. She found out how the other half lives and she likes it.

HolyName Unit Flays Mexican Persecutions

Western Maryland Group Wants U. S. to Call Halt on Drive.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). The Western Maryland section of the Holy Name Society, Archdiocese of Baltimore, comprising ten parishes in Garrett and Allegany Counties, yesterday at Frostburg condemned the Mexican government for "conducting a widespread and vicious religious persecution in Mexico under which the teaching of religion is prohibited, the property of religious orders is being confiscated, the holding of religious service is being curtailed and the right of people to practice their religion is being prevented."

The resolutions call on the United States Government "to immediately take proper steps to influence the Mexican government to stop this persecution."

The withdrawal of Josephus Daniels as ambassador to Mexico is urged, "believing that through lack of knowledge or because of unfortunate prejudices, he is unfitted to represent our country in Mexico."

The resolutions "indorse the suggestion of the supreme board of the Knights of Columbus that a Senate investigation of this matter be at once undertaken." The resolutions are signed by J. Leo Delaney, secretary of the Western Maryland Holy Name Societies, and the Rev. James A. Dwyer, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church, this city, sectional spiritual director.

FJORDS and FIELDS ★★ ★★★★ OF NORWAY

By Ben Blessum.

Here is the inspiring story of the Vikings, told against a rugged panorama of the northland as it is today. Mr. Blessum weaves an intensely interesting story in describing the attractions of Norway, embracing a jaunt along the coast into a number of yawning, fantastic fjords, the Seven Sisters Waterfall, the glorious midnight sun. He describes the splendid native costumes, the fishing villages, a trip to Bergen, Oslo, Stavanger and Kristiansand . . . and Telemarken with its mountains and lakes.

Ross Outpoints Klick to Retain Title in Torrid Miami Battle

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

IT now appears that the resolve of the Cincinnati Reds to play a share of their games at night under lights is not the only bright idea spawned by the prolific mind of Larry MacPhail, aggressive vice president and general manager of the Reds, who is shocking conservative baseball magnates at the rate of an innovation per week.

Backed by the radio millions of Powel Crosley, MacPhail now is gathering Cincinnati fans unto him every day by the push of a button that sets in operation the radio microphone he has installed on his desk. Whenever he wants to talk to Cincinnati baseball followers, he simply reaches for the mike, pushes the button, and is on the air, thanks to Boss Crosley's own radio station. Every day, MacPhail regales Cincinnati fans with tales of the Reds' promising young ball players for 1935.

MacPhail first shocked the league last summer by impressing into service an airplane to take the players on the Chicago-Cincinnati jump, despite the horror with which other big league magnates regard such methods of travel, the plane's cargo representing, as it does, several hundred thousand dollars worth of human chattels.

Whenever a player or prominent visitor drops into MacPhail's office, the general factotum of the Cincinnati Club is liable to say to him: "Wait a minute, will you? The fans of Cincinnati might be interested in our conversation. I'll press the button and we'll be on the air." The fans must like the intimate manner in which the Reds conduct their business, 'cause they've already bought 17,000 tickets to the club's opening game against the Pirates on April 16.

THE holdout season is at hand again and out of winter quarters will come a few desultory yaps from ball players who think they haven't been done right by in the matter of salary terms, but inasmuch as the last word rests with the club owners, the latter find little, or nothing, to get excited about. The history of holdouts is distinctly against the holdouts.

There have been holdouts ever since Al Reich signed the first professional contract in 1864, but by reason of the iron-clad baseball contracts which impose a virtual boycott on players who refuse to sign at the magnates' own terms, the recalcitrants are foredoomed to failure.

There even have been salary revolts en masse, but their prospects of success were no brighter than Bruno Hauptmann's future. Back in 1884, disgruntled players formed the Union Association as a rival of the National League and American Association, which crashed ignominiously, and in 1890 Clark Griffith, then a star pitcher, led another revolt named the Players League, or the Players Brotherhood, which was equally as unsuccessful in boosting players' wages.

When reminded, during his current contract wrangle with his players that he was once a prime mover for higher baseball wages, Griffith has his answer ready. He laughs off the attempt to compare modern baseball salaries with the salaries of his own time as a ball player when $5,000 was tops. "Why, you can't get a decent rookie to play ball for less than $5,000 these days," he says. "All ball players are paid handsomely now."

THE first confirmed holdout in baseball occurred in 1870, when the Cincinnati Red Stockings were the only club that paid all its players. Charley Sweezy, the second baseman, who had received $800 for playing in 1869, asked for a $1000 contract, and was sent packing. The team's entire pay roll approximated only $9,000, as compared to the $250,000 that the Yankees hit in the peak years.

The most tragic of all the holdout cases was that of little Dickie Kerr, the wee left-hander of the White Sox, who was one of the few not involved in the World Series conspiracy of 1919. Kerr was receiving only $4,000 that season, but the conspirators recognized that it would be useless to enlist the services of Kerr in their plot.

Dickie came out of the Black Sox mess with an immaculate record, but when he demanded an increase of $2,000 in his contract for the 1921 season, he was given the cold shoulder. He held out, remained adamant, and did not gain reinstatement until four years later when he attempted a comeback with the Red Sox only to learn that he had lost his stuff. He was a holdout victim.

Back in 1930, Eddie Roush, then with the New York Giants, could see no advantage in accepting a $6,000 cut in his $21,000 salary and stayed out of the game for the full season, and the Giants also lost Mike Donlin during the 1907 season in the same manner when he sought and was refused a $2,000 increase in his $5,000 stipend. Roush returned to the game later in his career, but the one-year layoff ruined Donlin as a ball player.

The 1934 season saw two of the most protracted holdouts in recent baseball history. Wes Ferrell, who refused to sign with the Cleveland Indians on a bonus arrangement, stayed out of the game for more than half the season until he was traded to the Red Sox, and little Cliff Bolton, of the Nats, did not join the club until September, after losing five months' wages.

The irony of it all might be revealed next summer when, if the Reds fail to climb out of their second-division berth, unkind baseball writers are apt to refer to the Cincinnati Club as the "Macphallures."

Little News in U. S. Big News To Gallico, Far Over the Sea

By Paul Gallico.

MUNICH, Germany (By Mail). When one is away for any length of time, especially abroad amidst newspapers of foreign languages and foreign interests, how hungry he gets for every little morsel of information from home, or anywhere that things are at all familiar. I remember once in Rome, my interpreter asked me whether I knew a boxer named Canzoneri. Then he read me a little squit from an Italian sports page, about five lines, which said that Tony Canzoneri had knocked out Eddie Ran, I think in New Jersey, of all places.

How the item ever got into the paper in the first place was a mystery, but it was like a breath from home. Two familiar names—Canzoneri, Ran. It was so pleasant. It brought back to my mind Tony's round, flat, homely, good-natured face. And right away I thought of him sitting at a table in Laliff's tavern in New York, nattily dressed. Then I thought of Jack Spooner, the famous tavern waiter who insults you. How I longed to be there to be insulted by him. Homesickness.

So Tony is knocking out junior welterweights now. I saw Billy Petrolle knock out Eddie Ran in Madison Square Garden. Wonder if Tony will have a sort of a rebirth as a puncher. Certainly he is through as a speed boxer. He can't go at top speed for ten rounds any more. But if he got to putting the boys away in four or five rounds * * * I remember, too, in Rome paying my respects to the boxing commissioner and seeing, quite by accident, on his desk a contract for a prize fight, and the name of the manager on it was Dave Lumiansky.

Why, I know Dave Lumiansky! He used to be a manager in New York. I can't remember whom he managed, but I recall him, a tall, thin, shallow-faced chap with spectacles. Now he manages American

Grove Is Expecting Good Year on Slab

Arm Has Quit Troubling Him, He Declares.

Lonaconing, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.). Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, of the Boston Red Sox, returned to his home here after a flying trip to New York for a contract conference with Thomas A. Yawkey, president of the Boston club.

"I am figuring on leaving February 26 for the training camp in Sarasota, Fla. I feel certain that I am going to regain my usual ranking as a winning pitcher and think the Boston's pennant chances are very good. My arm has never troubled me all this winter.

"I spent most of my time hunting and am in the best of condition. I never take on weight during the winter and it takes only a short time for me to get in shape to pitch. I am looking forward to having one of my best years."

Referee Ills Up Today in New York

Many Remedies Offered; Drastic Overhauling One of Panaceas.

Brown Hints Dempsey Is Not Wanted; His Two Errors Recalled.

By Edward J. Neil.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP).—All sorts of remedies, ranging from pills to pillories, were suggested today for the worst headache boxing has suffered here in years—consistently bad officiating.

As a result of the boxing commission's reversal at the Madison Square Garden ringside Friday night of a decision originally awarded to Babe Risko over Vince Dundee, all hands have been summoned to a clinic in the commission offices tomorrow. Out of the melee may come a new ruling as drastic as the stand Postmaster General James A. Farley took four years ago, when, as head of the commission, he passed a "no foul" rule to end an epidemic of low blows.

No Commission Rule.

The more rabid today were for adopting a "no commission" rule, automatically voiding Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman; Bill Brown and D. Walker Wear, while the more thoughtful suggested a complete overhauling of New York's staff of judges and referees, allowing fighters to agree on their own officials, setting up of a small but efficient group that would work all fights, or the bringing in of outside referees of known ability.

Col. John R. Kilpatrick, president of the Garden, formally requested the commission to name Jack Dempsey as referee for next Friday's 15-round match between Art Lasky, Minneapolis heavyweight, and Jimmy Braddock, New Jersey veteran.

Complete Confidence.

"On the grounds that the general public has lost all confidence in the present staff, I have asked the commission to name Dempsey, whose ability is unquestioned, and in whom everyone has complete confidence," he said.

Brown answered him unofficially, indicating that the commission isn't likely to accept any of the suggestions outsiders have been making.

"We aren't going to let the Garden pick our referees for us," said Brown, "though the commission will consider Kilpatrick's request. We have capable referees. How do you think they'll feel if we put someone else in there?"

Fumbled Twice.

The faithful recalled that Dempsey himself in two appearances in the Garden has fumbled just twice. He got mixed up in his count and gave Max Baer a knockout over Tom Heeney when the latter was ready to continue, and he awarded Phil Scott a 2-round decision over Otto van Porat on an invisible foul in 1929, setting in motion the indignation that resulted in Farley's "no foul" rule.

On the carpet tomorrow will be Jed Gahan, refreree, and the two judges for the Risko-Dundee bout, Sidney Scharlin and Jack Britton. Scharlin, a newcomer to the Garden, stirred up the tempest by voting for Risko after Britton had balloted for Dundee, giving the former champion seven of the ten rounds.

Assemblyman Urges State Investigation

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 28 (AP).—Declaring it has "fallen into such public disrepute as to seriously affect its administration of boxing and wrestling contests in this State," Assemblyman Herbert Brownell, jr., Manhattan Republican, tonight asked a legislative investigation of the State Athletic Commission.

In a concurrent resolution introduced in the New York Legislature, the Republican asked creation of a committee "with full power and authority to examine into and investigate activities of the athletic commission, the relation of politics to the law under which the commission operates and any improper influence exerted by or upon its members.

It further sought a far-reaching investigation into "the entire boxing and matchmaking situation" in the State.

The resolution pointed to the commission's "stepping in to overrule presumably competent judges and the referee" in their decision in the "Babe" Risko-Vincent Dundee match in Madison Square Garden last Friday night.

Meyers Assumes Lead In Court League Race

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Central High's flashy guard, Johnny Meyers, jumped from fourth to first place in the Western Maryland Interscholastic League scoring race last week and William ("Red") Miller, Allegany star, replaced James Evans, Beall, in the high average division. Meyers has a total of 50 points in four games, while Miller has an average of 16 points in three games.

Naomi Clark, Bruce, moved from seventh to first in the girls' division with a total of 54 markers. Regina Conway, Beall, is second with 46.

Pladner Retains Title.

Paris, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Spider Pladner, of France, retained his French bantamweight championship tonight by scoring a knockout in seven rounds over Tiger Eugene Huat, also of France and former world flyweight champion, in a scheduled 15-round bout.

Hoyas to Meet Army's Five Tomorrow

Is Rated Even With Rivals; Maryland Invades Annapolis.

BUOYED up by their surprising victory over Carnegie Tech Saturday night, Georgetown's basket ball forces invade West Point tomorrow afternoon, bent on administering a similar dose of medicine to the future "ginrlie." At the same time, Maryland will be at Annapolis debating a few points with the Middies.

Georgetown's stirring triumph over Tech, which helped throw the Eastern Conference race into a turmoil, has made a new team of the Hoyas. Instead of stalking around, they will be steadier, more poised and confident against the Army. On the strength of its showing Saturday night, Georgetown rates on even terms for this game.

Defeated North Carolina.

Should Don Gibeau go on another scoring spree, with Capt. Ed Hargaden playing at his usual brilliant clip, it will be curtains for the Cadets. But Army's win over a previously undefeated North Carolina quintet and its fine record for the season can not be entirely overlooked. Army has a smooth team, make no mistake about that, and Georgetown will have to be at its best to win.

Navy's victory over Penn, which tops the Eastern League, installs it a 5-3 favorite over Maryland, which has been an in-and-outer this season. Maryland may be fresh after a week's lay-off because of exams, but it was work, not rest that the Terps showed a lack of in their recent games.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 28 (AP).—Turning on the steam during the second half after trailing, 8 to 6, at the close of the first half, the University of North Carolina tonight won its sixth straight Southern Conference victory, beating V. P. I., 29 to 13.

Both teams were greatly handicapped by the cold that slowed play to a standstill, and forced numerous substitutions.

Virginia Ringmen Drilling for V.P.I.

LaRowe and Stuart Ill, York Directs Squad.

University, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—With both Johnny LaRowe, Virginia varsity boxing coach, and Harold Stuart, freshman coach, confined to their beds, Assistant Varsity Coach Al York today took over instruction of both squads in preparation for Saturday's matches with Virginia Tech.

All 16 Virginians who participated in a double victory over North Carolina last week came through without injury and will be ready for action this week-end. Neither head coach was present to aid the squad against the Tarheels, LaRowe being taken ill just as the squad left and Stuart having to turn back after getting as far as Greensboro, as result of influenza.

La Rowe, who is in his sixty-seventh year and has coached the Cavalier mittmen through 14 seasons, suffered a leg injury last summer that has kept him on crutches most of the time since.

Twenty Grand Withdrawal Is Urged

Star Is No Longer Sound, Should Be Retired, Says Trainer.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28 (AP).—Twenty Grand, once a great champion among race horses, today drew near the end of the trail, with his permanent retirement to the blue-grass fields of Kentucky a likelihood.

Discouraged by the manner in which the 7-year-old developed lameness after his attempted "comeback" at Santa Anita last week, Bill Brennan, Twenty Grand's trainer, telegraphed Maj. Louis Beard in Kentucky recommending the withdrawal of the veteran campaigner from the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap next month.

Trainer Heartbroken.

Brennan, heartbroken, because Twenty Grand has been his pride, urged that the horse be sent back to the blue grass to grow old in peace.

Twenty Grand has garnered $260,840 in prizes for his owner, Mrs. Payne Whitney, including the winning of the Kentucky Derby in 1931. This places him eleventh on history's list of money winners.

Brought out of retirement, to which he had been sent in the latter part of 1932, Twenty Grand began his comeback campaign with a fast race against High Glee and Mate over the 7-furlong distance—much shorter than Twenty Grand's usual race—and his third place, although disappointing to the crowd of nearly 20,000 that was on hand for the occasion, was not discouraging to Brennan.

"No Longer Sound."

It was, said Brennan, faster than he had expected, but it soon developed that Twenty Grand was "no longer sound," and Brennan reluctantly advised his retirement.

Withdrawal of Twenty Grand from the big Santa Anita Handicap would destroy what promised to be a brilliant three-cornered race with the Whitney veteran, Equipoise, and Cavalcade.

Ruth-Simmons Deal Is Refuted by Barrow

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, today said there was no truth in a report that Babe Ruth and several young players would be sent to the Chicago White Sox for Al Simmons, Ruth to supplant Jimmy Dykes as Sox manager.

"We have had no negotiations with the White Sox conerning either Ruth or Simmons," Barrow said. "We know nothing here of any concerted action by other American League club owners to make Ruth the White Sox manager."

Veteran Squares Match at 27th After Trailing by 5 Holes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 28 (AP). The sub-par golf of Harold "Jug" McSpaden, of Kansas City, Kans., defeated Harry Cooper, of Chicago, 3 and 2, today in the 36-hole finals of San Francisco's open tournament.

The 26-year-old Kansan who joined the tournament procession a year ago and since has developed into one of its brightest stars, claimed top money of $750 to become undisputed leader of the shotmakers now swinging around the "golden trail" of golf.

McSpaden ended the match on the thirty-fourth with a birdie 3 to chalk up his third major tournament victory within a few weeks. He headed the field in the recent Pasadena and Sacramento opens.

McSpaden held a 3-up lead at the end of the first half of the match, shooting the 18 in 70, two under par.

Applaud Comeback.

Cooper came back with a third nine finish that had the 2,000 galleryites applauding. The Chicagoan, one of the best competitive golfers in professional ranks, dropped long chip shots and approached with deadly accuracy to square the match at the twenty-sixth hole. For the third nine the Chicagoan had a 34, two under par, while McSpaden's temporary faltering game accounted for a 37.

A 30-foot putt that ran true to the cup gave McSpaden a 2-up lead again. He had to shoot an eagle 3 to claim the advantage as Cooper was down in birdie 4.

He went 2 up at the thirty-first by laying Cooper a partial-stymie and halving the next two holes, clinched the match at the thirty-fourth with birdie 3, gained from a 6-foot putt. Cooper had a par 4.

McSpaden shot the first 18 in 35, 35—70, to Cooper's 38, 35—73.

Halve Four Holes.

The third nine of the match was the most sensational of the day. Three down as they teed off at the nineteenth, Cooper won back the twentieth when McSpaden dubbed his second shot. They halved the next four holes and Cooper took the twenty-fifth with a birdie 2 after sinking a 20-footer from a small bank off the green. He evened it up on the next hole with a birdie 3 after approaching within 5 feet of the cup.

In the morning round McSpaden approached to within 5 feet of the pin and dropped the putt for a birdie 4 to go into the lead on the first hole. Each overshot the second to halve it in 5, and they played the next hole in par 4s.

Cooper was trapped on the fourth, McSpaden going 2 up. The Chicagoan won back a hole by 2-putting the fifth for a birdie 3, but he used three strokes on the next green to go 2 down again.

Shoots Birdie 3.

They halved the seventh in 3s and McSpaden went 3 up with an 8-foot putt that gave him a birdie 3 on the eighth. The next three holes were halved. McSpaden increased his lead to 4 up when Cooper 3-putted the twelfth; the next two were even, and the Kansan went 5 up with a birdie 3 on the fifteenth, gained from a 7-foot putt.

The sixteenth was played on even terms and Cooper won the last two holes of the morning round to whittle his rival's lead to 3 up again. Cooper sank a 12-footer for his birdie 3 on the seventeenth, while McSpaden missed a 5-footer to lose the eighteenth.

Cooper's runner-up status netted him $400.

3 Carolina U. Boxers Seeking To Enter Catholic U., Is Report

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Three North Carolina University boxers, troubled by eligibility charges tonight were reported to have withdrawn from the local institution and headed for Washington, D. C., where they will apply for admission to Catholic University.

Jules Medynski and Tom O'Flaherty, two of the boxers, were barred from Carolina's match against the University of Virginia team here last Saturday night by order of the university administration as a result of an investigation which revealed that the pair had misrepresented their status in registering as State students.

They were to be given a hearing before the university student council tomorrow night.

The third youth said to be en route to Catholic University is Max Novich, against whom similar charges were preferred, but who was exonerated.

The charges are that Medynski and O'Flaherty registered as residents of Charlotte, N. C., to escape the out-of-State tuition fee, which is twice that of State residents, whereas Medynski is said to be from Newark, N. J., and O'Flaherty from Waterbury, Conn.

The university administration emphasized today that no protest against the participation of the two boys in Saturday night's bouts had come from Virginia officials. The complaint originated here as the result of the return of letters that had been sent to North Carolina addresses given by the two students. It was merely a coincidence that the matter happened to come up at the time of the Virginia matches, university officials said.

Sarron Rally Turns Back Rivers

Takes Early Lead, Then Almost Wilts Under Rival's Attack.

By Bill McCormick.

PETE SARRON, Alexandria featherweight, uncorked a last-minute rally that sent some 1,200 fight fans into a frenzy, to eke out a close decision from California Joe Rivers in the ten-round feature bout at the Auditorium last night.

Sarron was closer to defeat than he has been in many a battle and at times only his cleverness, heart and stamina kept him from dropping under the terrific impact of Rivers' hammering fists. Midway of the bout, after piling up a substantial lead, Pete fell victim to a series of rights to the body that almost caused him to wilt.

Rallies in Ninth.

The boys were almost even going into the ninth round, when Pete's rally commenced. In that round he worked to perfection, swarming over the Mexican and completely takin gthe play away from him. Toward the end of the ninth, Sarron dropped Joe through the ropes with a long right to the head and Referee Morris counted three before Joe was able to unscramble himself and clamber back in the ring.

Pete swarmed over Joe in the tenth almost sweeping him to the floor with the sheer number of his blows. He swung a vicious right, which missed so hard Sarron landed on his face in the resin dust. Rivers hardly gave him time to get up before he tore in and Sarron retaliated by punching him through the ropes and to the floor outside the ring.

Sarron weighed 126½, Rivers 130½.

Jones Beats Landis.

Jimmy Jones, of Baltimore, took a unanimous decision from Mickey Landis, of Washington, in a six-round semifinal that was a very gruelling affair, which, albeit, it did not please the customers. Jones carried the fight to Landis throughout, pummeling his midsection mercilessly. The patrons did not like the infighting, and neither did Landis.

Ray (Kid) Ingram, a lightweight recently imported from Florida, took a close and much-disputed decision from Jimmy Tramberia in an interesting five-rounder. Referee Kid Sullivan voted for Ingram, as did Judge Jack Dunn. Judge Bob Eller balloted for Tramberia.

Deacon Owen and Walter Kirkwood, two Washington middleweights, went five rounds to a draw in a rough-and-tumble preliminary. Owen finished strong to earn the stalemate.

Cavalcade 3 - 2 For Coast Race

Kearney Drops Odds Due to Heavy Play.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 28 (AP).—A heavy play on Cavalcade today caused Tom Kearney, St. Louis betting commissioner, to tighten up on the Santa Anita Handicap favorite and odds of 3 to 2 to win were offered.

Cavalcade formerly was offered at 3 to 1. Equipoise was second high in the new book, quoted at 4 to 1. Time Supply was listed at 6 to 1, and Twenty Grand, High Glee and Mate would pay 8 to 1.

Chance Sun was made the favorite for next May's Kentucky Derby, offered at 6 to 1 to win, 3 to 1 to place and 3 to 2 to show. Omaha was next at 8 to 1 to win.

Los Angeles, Jan. 28 (AP).—Cavalcade, future book favorite for the $100,000 handicap here February 23, breezed a mile today in 1:38 2-5 hard held. Cavalcade's handy method of traveling impressed the clockers. He carried 135 pounds.

Cubs Sign Warneke.

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—The signed contracts of Lon Warneke, star right-hander, and Fabian Kowalik, a recruit hurler, were received by the Chicago Cubs today, bringing the number of those in the fold to 17.

Goes Down for 8-Count but Rises to Carry Fight to Champ.

Max Baer Clowns With Maloney; Shucco and Knight Draw.

By Walter Haight (Post Staff Writer).

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 28.—Two world champions successfully defended their crowns in the sometimes sunny South tonight. Barney Ross, of Chicago, kept his synthetic world's junior welterweight title, a sort of drug on the boxing market, by outpointing Frankie Klick, of San Francisco in ten rounds.

Ross had to go along in high gear from start to nish to outgeneral Klick, a formidable young man from the West Coast. But Heavyweight Champion Baer played tag with a fat Miami Beach copper, Jim Maloney, in a four-round exhibition. No one expected Baer to be serious and no one was disappointed.

The 12,000 who paid in the neighborhood of $45,000 to see the show witnessed a main go packed with action. There was not a laugh in the Ross-Klick battle, the smaller boys went at each other with a will from the opening bell and were swinging willingly at the end.

Klick Down for Eight.

Ross scored the only knockdown of the bout in the rst round. For the first time in Klick's career he found himself knocked to the canvass by a right to the jaw. The Californian stayed on one knee until the count of eight, and recovered form quickly to hold Ross even for the remainder of the round.

Klick gained condence as the fight progressed and showed his best form in the sixth and seventh rounds. Several times he shook Ross with lefts to the face, but the champion came back with stinging rights and lefts to the body.

As in many rounds Klick snapped back into action and was banging away at the bell.

Ross came in to the ring at 136-pounds and Klick, 137. This fact made safe Ross' lightweight crown and for the same reason Klick kept his junior lightweight title.

Baer Clowns With Maloney.

Earlier in the evening Max Baer grinned his way into the ring to meet Jim Maloney the Miami Beach policeman who looked as if he had been on the force for 20 years. Baer was in a clowning mood as usual and entertained the crowd with every trick in his book in the first round. He spun Maloney around and stood still and let Jim punch his stomach at will. Once he held Maloney on the end of his left while a photographer took a picture. Baer was hitting and yelling "woof" with each blow.

The crowd booed the pair at one stage but they soon caught the spirit of the thing and sat laughing at their antics. Baer conversed with those close to the ringside and staggered back to his corner after each round.

Tom Heeney former champion refereed and wisely kept out of range of the playful champion. Heeney broke them only once and thereafter leaned across the ropes with a wide grin on his face.

In the fourth and final round, Baer "fouled" Maloney repeatedly. He struck him low, turned him around and paddled him, kneed him and struck him with an open glove, but he kept his title.

Buddy Baer Winner.

Big Buddy Baer scored a one-round knockout over Tommy Davenport, of Little Rock, Ark., whom he outweighed 44 pounds. Buddy floored his opponent four times for counts of six, seven and ten. Davenport arose at the count of nine and appeared to be ready to fight at ten, but Referee Red McLachlin ruled him out on a knockout.

The fight lasted only a minute and a half.

Buddy appeared to be an overgrown schoolboy and seemed rather slow for a boy who is champion Max's shadow. Davenport, although hit hard, appeared to be looking for a place to sit on one occasion when he went down.

Knight-Shucco Draw.

Joe Knight, of Cairo, Ga., who used to show his fistic wares around the Nation's Capital, renewed his rivalry with Tony Shucco, of Boston, in the semifinal. The result was the same as in their last meeting. The judges called it a draw although most score sheets gave Shucco an edge.

Knight missed his big opportunity in the third round when Shucco walked into his left and all but wobbled to the canvas. The Bostonian, however, clinched for the remainder of the round and was not in trouble at any other stage. It is probably just as well that the fight ended in a draw because someone would have had to pay to see the winner fight Bob Olin.

Dizzy 'Just Negligent,' Hasn't Mailed Contract

St. Louis, Jan. 28 (AP).—It's "nothing to worry about," Dizzy Dean said today in a telegram about his failure to mail a signed contract to the St. Louis Cardinals Baseball Club.

Although Dizzy agreed to Sam Breadon's terms some time ago, he had not mailed his contract and there was some worry about it in the Cardinal office. But in answer to a query, he wired:

"Nothing wrong, just a little negligence."

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Up and Up Takes Hialeah Feature Event

Gilbert Rides Gelding to Victory

Favored Purple Knight Falters in Stretch, Runs Second.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Miami, Fla., Jan. 28.—The pink and black of the Greentree Stable played a prominent part in today's program here in the tropics, and Mrs. Payne Whitney, the owner, was all smiles as she viewed the proceedings from the clubhouse lawn. Her principal victory came in the day's feature event—the Sarasota. Up and Up, a gelded 3-year-old which comes by his name naturally, being by Upset out of Upsedaisy, led a field of 10 over the seven-furlong course to win pulled up.

Mrs. Whitney had scored earlier with Squawker in the hop,skip and jump for juveniles along the straightaway. Johnny Gilbert batting for Silvio Coucci, who is riding for the stable in California, piloted the winner in perfect fashion.

Purple Knight, the favorite, labored along at the finish four lengths away from the flying Up and Up, with San Froid third, another length and a half back.

Purple Knight Fades.

Backers of Purple Knight were spending their winnings as the field rushed up the back stretch. The purple and white of Jockey Litzenburg's blouse was windblown as he cut out a fast pace. Up and Up was a rather unimpressive second at this point as Purple Knight continued to open daylight between them. However, approaching the turn into the stretch, little Georgie Watson shook up his mount and the Greentree youngster began to cut down the leader.

At the eighth pole, Up and Up went to the front, drew out and was running nicely in hand at the wire. Purple Knight was easily second best. Mrs. Whitney and other Up and Up betters collected at the rate of $9.90 for the usual deuce.

Squawker, a big filly from the Greentree Stable, stuck to her racing guns under Johnny Gilbert's urging long enough to save the winning money in the first race by a head from Zowie, a representative from Hal Price Headley. The latter gained momentum in the last part and would have won in another jump. Camden, one of the well-played field, was third after threatening to run away with the purse. Squawker paid $31.10.

The favorite players were given their first chance to cheer since last Friday when Epical won the second race, a six-furlong dash. It was another close decision, with Justa Jane a nose away and Dan Skilling third, some five lengths away. Epical and Justa Jane fought it out from flag fall to finish in a thrilling battle. The winner was a $4.40 proposition.

Merovech, the property of Miss L. C. White, ran away with the third race at a $30.60 mutuel under the guidance of Apprentice Lyhch. Squeeze Out's closing rush accounted for the place with Erebus third. Wooly West, the hot paddock tip, and Stall Man, the heavily played favorite, were nowhere in particular.

Hardware Triumphs.

Colonel Greene, the horse that the majority of selectors and regulars said couldn't lose, lost the fifth race in the stretch run. Glenn Haines, on Hardware, brought his charge up with a rush just beyond the eighth pole and won with plenty to spare.

Georgie Watson went to the whip on Colonel Greene in an effort to save the race, but the Colonel was weary from setting the pace. Beaver Dam beat tired horses for the third money.

The slow starting Brindle took the sixth in a blanket finish which saw Diverting, the choice, second and Show Boy Third. Brindle was Apprentice Bryson's second winner and paid $10.50.

The final went to Tiempo, which skimmed along the rail with Haines riding like a wild man. It was a double for the rider.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Hialeah Park, Jan. 28.

They have a contraption here called a "walk-up starter." The theory is to have the horses line up and march to the starting point behind a tape carried along on tracks on either side. When they reach the starter he presses a button and the field gets away. The present generation of horses, educated to various gates and stalls know nothing about walk-up starts, and it appears that they wouldn't keep alignment if a big red apple were hanging on the tape for each one. The jockeys add to the confusion either by being unable to control their mounts or being too anxious to beat the barrier. Early last week, 17 minutes passed before a race began. Last Saturday the time involved was not as long but the field went away as if someone had exploded a firecracker. This machine is used only on the turf course. Incidentally, Jockey Mack Garner, a daily visitor to the press box, says Man o' War horses have the best of it on the turf. He spoke before Octaroro won on Saturday, too. Want to thank G. W. M. for that note and tell him that I'm getting a little tired of that Mike-Joe race myself. BILL.

First race—Sparta comes to the races backed by some fine trials and assured of an outside post position, an advantage on the short juvenile course. Clapping Jane's last was a beaut. Gives the top one 5 pounds. Little Nymph for the show.

Second race—Happy Find gets in this race with a feathery impost of only 90 pounds and will have Georgie Watson to do the riding. I seen no reason for mistakes. Mantados, another light weight, will be dangerous if he sees action. Sun Tempest appears the best of the others.

Third race—Seven furlongs may suit the brand of speed packed by Chatterdoo. This one is as sharp as the proverbial tack. Highest Point has been consistent in Florida and should not be worse than second. Canter Boy for the show.

Fourth race—Golden Way gets in with only steadying weight, thanks to the apprentice allowance. May improve enough off that last effort to score a good mutuel. Quickly won his last and will be right up there agin. Recovery may be better than rated.

Fifth race—Band Wagon has been carefully handled and appears ready to cause trouble in a field of this sort. Evergold is almost certain to be the favorite and is the best figure horse of the group. Some Pomp for the minor award.

Sixth race—Hogan's Fox has earned his oats here among the sheltering palms. Not a stand-out in this field, but one that will give us an honest effort. I'm stringing along. St. Moritz and Little Cynic to complete the money picture.

Seventh race—Peedeeque is an underestimated horse here. He packs a stretch punch that may find him galloping over the field at the finish. Breaks from the outside where his lack of early speed will not get him in trouble. Cousin George and Al Neiman for the rest.

Ping Pong Tourney.

Ranking players will not be permitted to compete in the Class "B" ping pong tournament Thursday night at 1510 H street northwest, Ray Sherfey, director, last night said. The tournament is open only to players of unknown ability.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MEROVECH, $30.60, $12.70, $6.50; SQUEEZE OUT, $6.20, $4.30; EREBUS, $5.50.

MEROVECH, displaying keen speed, was sent to the front with a rush, raced EREBUS into defeat, and gamely stalled off the determined bid of SQUEEZE OUT. The latter finished very fast. EREBUS showed early speed, but was bothered some by the winner turning out of back stretch. WOOLY WEST came from a long way back. STALL MAN ran a disgraceful race, being outrun from the start. CHIEF A. showed early speed.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000 The Sarasota. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:54½. Off at 3:58½. Winner, Greentree Stable's ch. g. (3), by Upset—Upsedaisy. Trained by M. C. Lilly. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:24.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UP AND UP, $9.90, $3.80, $2.80; PURPLE KNIGHT, $3.30, $20; SANG FROID, $2.70.

UP AND UP, well handled, followed early pace to the stretch, where he ran into lead, drew away and won easily. PURPLE KNIGHT got away flying, opened wide lead, but tired suddenly in final furlong. SANG FROID ran a listless race. He was never a serious factor at any part of the race. STICKHANDLE showed flash of speed in middle quarter. RIGHT RANK ran a race worth remembering. REBEL YELL closed a big gap.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800. Claiming price, $2,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:28½. Winner, Mrs. W. R. Flemming's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARDWARE, $8.30, $3.70, $2.90; COL. GREENE, $2.70, $2.30; BEAVER DAM, $3.10.

HARDWARE was allowed to rate along off the early pace, began to move up turning out of back stretch, raced COL. GREENE down in stretch, took lead, and won going away. COL. GREENE had more early speed than usual, opened wide gap in final furlong, but tired badly in stretch. BEAVER DAM made a game effort. THE AENEAD lacked speed and failed to close any ground. BOUNDING COUNT closed a big gap.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800. Claiming price, $2,000. For 3-year-olds Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:53. Off at 4:57. Winner, Starmount Stable's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRINDLE, $10.50, $4.20, $3.20; DIVERTING, $4.20, $3.00; SHOW BOY, $3.90.

BRINDLE was badly outrun for the first six furlongs, closed very fast in stretch, and won going away. DIVERTING miserably ridden. She was rushed into a long lead in first half-mile and was leading by winning margin at furlong pole, but boy tossed race away by an overconfident ride. SHOW BOY moved up gamely around turn, but tired suddenly. SUNCHANCE could not get up. FLYING WOOD had plenty of speed and is about ready to win. FIZZAZ had speed for three furlongs, then quit. NEWELL ran good race.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. Claiming price, $1,200. For 2-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:22. Off at 5:24½. Winner, C. C. Smithson's br m. (6), by Lucky Hour—Daisy Carter. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIEMPO, $11.90, $5.00, $3.70; SUN TEATIME, $3.90, $3.30; FLOWERY LADY, $3.90.

TIEMPO came through on inside entering stretch and, closing with a good burst of speed, got up in final 20 yards and was drawing away at end. SUN TEATIME, rushed into lead, came a bit wide on turn, but held on gamely. FLOWERY LADY was hard ridden all the way. UKRAINE tired badly in final furlong. DONT BLUSH quit.

117 Nominated For Stake at Belmont

Big Increase Is Reported Due to Eligibility of Two-Year-Olds.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP).—As further evidence of the upturn in horse racing prospects, the list of eligibles for the mile-and-a-half Belmont Stake, classic 3-year-old test to be run this June at Belmont Park, shows substantial increase this year.

Owners of 32 2-year-olds took advantage of the opportunity to enter for this year's race which has been thrown open to juveniles, boosting the list of nominations to 117. The list includes Sailor Beware, winner of the Junior Champion Stakes; Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Special Agent and Shining Jewel; the Catawba Stable's Polar Flight; Marshall Field's Sir Lamorak, the Middleburg Stable's Esposa, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Gum, Cold Shoulder and Wayward Son, and Mrs. John Hay Whitney's filly, Doceur.

Other standout colts and fillies which have been entered from the start include the Belair Stud's Omaha and Sir Beverly, Col. E. R. Bradley's Balladier and Boxthorn, Mrs. Sloane's Psychic Bid, the Greentree Stable's Plat Eye, J. E. Widener's Chance Sun, winner of the 1934 Belmont Futurity; Mrs. John D. Hertz's Our Reigh, the Foxcatcher Farm's Rosemont and Satrapal and C. V. Whitney's Today.

By John R. Vosburgh.

EASTERN HIGH'S serene jaunt toward its second straight inter-high championship reaches hurdle No. 5 today in the ominous form of a roungh-and-ready crew from Central.

Packing enough potential power to reach up from its lowly fourth-place berth and upset the defending champions, Central goes into the game a dangerous underdog with nothing to lose and a great deal to gain, particularly in the mental satisfaction of spoiling its old rival's march to the title.

While the Mount Pleasanters are taking their crack at the pace-setters at the Tech gymnasium, Tech, virtually out of the race with two defeats against it, faces the mild consolation of taking a game from Roosevelt at the Roosevelt gym. Both games start at 3:30 p. m.

Out to Stop Dean.

Central is banking on the accepted theory this afternoon that as Dean goes so goes Eastern, with the logical result that wherever Dean goes today a good part of the Central team is more or less sure to follow. It was Dean, Eastern captain, who beat Central in the opening game of the series practically single-handed, 31 to 24.

After stacking Eastern to a 13-4 lead in the first half, Central came back in the second half to outscore the Lincoln Parkers, but Dean settled the issue in the first and second quarters by ripping loose for the three baskets and two foul shots which spelled the difference between the two teams.

Although playing the "take 'em as they come" style of game, Coach Jack Ray likely will meet the Dean threat with a prepared defense centered around Capt. Charlie Nau. No team has held the high-scoring Eastern captain to less than 11 points any game.

Power Is Limited.

Outside of Dean, Eastern's scoring power is distinctly limited, while Central has Bill Munhall, fourth in the series individual scoring ranks, with 31 points, and Nau, sixth high scorer with 27. The two together, however, have scored one point less than Dean has alone.

Central has clearly shown itself a powerful team when able to shake off a tendency toward inconsistency—a team strong enough to fight Eastern even at any time or place. This afternoon may be the time and Tech the place.

The Roosevelt team which Tech faces today will be a considerably better combination than the series has seen thus far. The Ruff Riders are a greatly improved team on their own floor. All four games they lost were played at Tech. The Maroon, the big disappointment of the series, perhaps due more to Eastern's strength and Western's unexpected power than to its own weakness, reigns a heavy favorite to win, however.

fighters in Paris, almost exclusively. And there was his name right in front of me. On the wall was a photograph of a boxing match at the last Olympic games in Los Angeles. One of the fighters was Lou Salica. Salica was one of the New York Golden Gloves champions three or four years ago. Hello, Lou. It's touches like that that keep one from jumping the first boat home.

Of course on reads the Paris edition of the New York Herald and Chicago Tribune, violently, and from cover to cover. But one never really finds out what is going on at home. For instance, not a line about Gen. Phelan, the chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission. For over a month now I have not known what Gen. Phelan has been doing. I read an occasional squib about Max Baer repeating that there is no one for him to fight, but the news that Baer had knocked out King Levinsky I had to get by word of mouth. All this, of course, is dead stale to you now, but I lived on that delectable tidbit for 48 hours.

Then I read about the pro tennis in Madison Square Garden, about a month old now, and that Helen Wills Moody announced that she would begin to train for her comeback. There was really thrilling news. Can't some one back home beg Miss Jacobs not to turn professional until she has played that match of the century with Mrs. Moody at Forest Hills? They could hold that one in the Yankee Stadium at $50 a copy and fill the place. Wouldn't Miss Jacobs please gamble? If she beats Mrs. Moody she will draw twice as much as a professional. If you should happen to see her some time, just tell her that Paul Gallico is dying to see her play Mrs. Moody again, and won't she please oblige? Miss Jacobs won't know me from Adam, but tell her any way.

Greenkeepers' Parley Draws 2 D. C. Men

O. B. Fitz and R. P. Hines to Attend Convention at Toronto.

O. B. FITZ, greenkeeper at Columbia Country Club, and R. P. Hines, greenkeeper at Manor and Congressional, will represent the Middle Atlantic Association of Greenkeepers at the annual national convention in Toronto February 4, 5 and 6, it was announced yesterday.

More than 200 greenkeepers from all parts of America and Canada will attend the session and make reports to their respective associations.

Fitz and Hines, who are members of Middle Atlantic executive committee, have been prominent in local greenkeepers' circles for a number of years, being pioneer members of the association. Hines is secretary-treasurer.

They will deliver their reports on the national gathering at a meeting of the Middle Atlantic Association at the New Baltimore Hotel, Baltimore, February 11.

Dr. Arnold S. Dahl, of the United States Soil Erosion Service, will lecture on "Elementary Botany" at the Baltimore meeting. Among the things he will discuss of particular interest to the green custodians are the differences between animal and plant life, micro-organisms, algae, fungi, bacteria, differences between lower plants and higher plants; parts, construction, fibro-vascular system; plant functions, classifications and succession.

The Dahl lecture is the second of a series of four to be given by men well versed in greenkeeping work.

Catholic University, without Jan Jankowski, who was graduated last year, may not have a regular golf team this season, but at least three of its students will compete in the National Intercollegiate championship at Congressional in July. Frank Weller, of Columbia; George Mulligan, of Waterbury, Conn., star football end, who won the Connecticut junior title last year; Jimmy Ferguson, former Georgetown Prep player, and Stanley Pearson, formerly of St. John's, comprise the only real golf talent in school.

Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro who has been unable to play in the big winter tournaments now in California, will return home March 1, according to word received by his friends here. Roland now is in Sacramento, home town of Mrs. Mackenzie.

Baker Five Gains Lead By County League Win

Certified Bakers went into the lead in the Prince Georges County Basket Ball League last night by defeating Mount Rainier A. C., 28 to 21, on the National Guard Armory floor at Hyattsville. The Bakers have won 3 out of 4 starts.

In another league game, Maryland A. C. advanced to a third place tie by downing Mount Rainier Grays, 28 to 27, in a nip-and-tuck battle.

Navy Opens Practice For Two Stern Tilts

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Flush with its slashing victory over University of Pennsylvania, Eastern intercollegiate leaders, Saturday, the Navy basket ball team today began preparations for two stern assignments this week.

On Wednesday the Tars face Maryland, and on Saturday they will be hosts to Pitt. Navy's only reverse this season was at the hands of University of North Carolina, a team that bowed to Army Cadets a few days later.

Bowie High Victor.

Bowie High School continued its first successful basket ball season in five years last night by trouncing Laurel High at Laurel, 18 to 7. McCauley scored all but four points for the winners. Bowie led at halftime, 12 to 6.

Woods Named CCC Camp Director

Watt Assumes Coaching Job at Fort Hunt; Drills Cagemen.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Word was received here today that Al Woods, former Marine and Maryland University football star, would direct athletics at the new CCC camp now under construction on the site of the old shipyard grounds.

Jack Watt has been appointed athletic director of the Fort Hunt CCC camp. Watt assumed full control today and put his basket ball aspirants through a long drill at the Lyceum Hall here tonight. Games with teams that have gyms will be arranged in the next ten days.

Managers of the following teams are requested to communicate with John Travers, Post team manager, at Alex. 510: Forty Myer, North East Boys Club and Merrick Boys Club.

The St. Mary Celtic Juniors and District No. 63 meet in the third and final game of a three-game series at 2:30 p. m., Sunday at the Lyceum Hall.

Fort Meade and Fort Humphrey boxing teams will meet on February 6 at Fort Humphreys.

The two Army boxing teams were scheduled to battle last Wednesday night, but the snowstorm forced postponement.

The St. Mary Celtics travel to Washington tomorrow night for a game with the Hyattsville Company "F" team in the new Heurich gym.

Alexandria High School will attempt to win its eleventh straight victory over the next week-end. Friday the Twins journey to Waynesboro, Pa., to meet the high school of that city and Nokesville invades the Armory here Saturday night.

Lee-Jackson alumni young men and young women play hosts to the alumni teams of McLean tomorrow night in the Lee-Jackson gym, Duke street extended, at 8 o'clock.

Action Delayed On Blue Ridge Loop Plan

Poll Will Be Taken and Definite Step Made on February 6.

FREDERICK, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Following a conference of representatives of this city, Hagerstown, Waynesboro and Martinsburg, and others interested from Washington, Baltimore, Columbus, Ohio, and Cincinnati here yesterday, it was decided to postpone definite action on the return of the old Blue Ridge League to organized baseball until February 6. The club presidents in the meatime will determine the question in a poll which will be followed by a meeting at which definite action will be taken.

Decision to postpone final action for ten days came after addresses followed by discussion by Joe F. Carr, Columbus, promotional director of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues; J. Vincent Jamison, jr., Hagerstown, former president of the Blue Ridge League; Dr. Ira J. McCurdy, this city, director of the Frederick Club; Joe Cambria, Baltimore, owner of the Albany International Club and former general manager of the Hagerstown Club.

Carr suggested that the clubs play six days each week instead of three days, as has been contemplated, adding that a minimum of $7,500 is necessary to properly operate a Class D club through a season. He stated that the National Association prefers having teams operate as community projects with local sponsors and local capital, but is not opposed to having them obtain outside assistance. He said the association is ready and willing to cooperate in the return of the Blue Ridge League to organized baseball.

Expresses Confidence.

Jamison gave a history of the old Blue Ridge League and urged the representatives not to be too hasty in making a decision. He expressed confidence that the league would return to organized ranks with an improvement in economic conditions.

A poll of the clubs showed that Frederick and Martinsburg have some prospects of major league support. Dr. McCurdy, speaking in behalf of Billy Evans, manager of the Cleveland Indians, said the latter club has a warm spot in its heart for Frederick, despite a $52,000 loss some years ago sponsoring the local club of the Blue Ridge League and will entertain any proposition the Frederick Club has to offer. Carr said he had been authorized by the management of the Pittsburgh Pirates to present an offer of a working agreement with the Frederick Club. It was decided to consider both offers, with Cleveland being given preference in the event of equal propositions.

Rishi Wins by Nose After Stretch Spurt

New Orleans, Jan. 28 (AP).—By the scant margin of a nose, A. V. Moseley's Rishi, 4-year-old chestnut gelding, today won the featured sixth race at the Fair Grounds, scoring by that much over Mrs. H. O. Simmons' Full Tilt in the $500 Nasturtium Purse. B. Hernandez' Chief's Pride was third.

Rishi came from nowhere into the stretch of the 6-furlong dash to snatch the decision in the final stride. Full Tilt led at the half-way mark and going into the stretch.

Eddie Diehl Leading Interstate Scorers

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 28 (Spl.).—Eddie Diehl, who alternates between guard and forward for the Cloakers, is leading the Interstate League second-half scoring race with 36 points and also has the highest average of points per game with 18 tallies. He also figures in three other scoring departments.

Charles ("Snapper") Morris, Cloakers, is second with 24, while Lawrence Shaffer, Celanese, and William ("Huck") Miers, Keyser, are tied for third place with 20 points each.

Lott and Stoefen Get $10,000 Each for 12 Pro Appearances

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Any young boy who wants to capitalize on his athletic ability should discard his bat and glove, golf sticks, swimming suit and football uniform, and get himself a tennis racquet.

George Lott and Lester Stoefen have collected $10,203.72 each for 12 appearances in 18 days since their professional tennis tour started in New York on January 9. Before it ends in Brooklyn April 30, their earnings will be about $20,000 each for less than four months. Few major league baseball players get that kind of money, and there are no three professional football players who get such checks.

But that's just a beginning. Lott, Stoefen, Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill have contracted for appearances in Russia between August 5-22, for which they will divide $25,000 (U. S. money deposited in this country before they leave and all expenses paid. They make three four-day appearances in Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev, which will consist of two days of lecturing, one day of practice and one day of play.

"That's the softest money any athlete ever had dumped in his lap," commented Bill O'Brien, general manager of Tilden Tours, Inc., who signed up the Russian tour.

In September Lott and Vines will go to Japan, China and the Philippines for a series against players in those countries, which will bring another $25,000 to the professional tennis coffers. Meantime, Big Bill Tilden will be making European appearances on his own hook.

Next year a professional tennis league of eight cities will start functioning in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis and Cleveland. It will be modeled along lines of the major baseball leagues, with games starting about 5:30. The season will last about four months, with 100 matches. Winners of the Eastern and Western divisions will then meet in a "tennis world series."

8 Cities Form Pro Net Loop For 1936

100 Matches Planned by Tilden Troupe; Three on Each Team.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 28 (AP).—Organization of a professional tennis league with teams in eight cities was announced by William O'Brien here today. O'Brien was in Indianapolis with Bill Tilden and his tennis troupers.

The league will not begin functioning until June, 1936, O'Brien said. Cities in the league and holders of the franchises, he added, are Philadelphia, Bill Tilden; Boston, Ellsworth Vines; New York, Bill O'Brien; Buffalo, Charles Murray; Chicago, George Lott; Cleveland, Tom McKee; St. Louis, Karl Hodge; Detroit, Dave Cole.

The league will be divided into two groups, East and West, and the winners of each will meet in a tennis world series. Play will be in June, August and September, and the schedule will provide for approximately 100 matches.

Three players will comprise each team. Two singles and one doubles matches will be played each day.

Albrights Would Play.

G. U. Prep Five Rallies; Tops St. John's

Comes Back to Win, 28-25, After Trailing, 17-9, at End of Half.

GEORGETOWN PREP staked St. John's High to a 17-9 lead in the first half in a private high school league game yesterday at St. John's and then came back in the second half to win, 28 to 25. The victory gave the Garrett Parkers an even break for their league efforts. Gonzaga beat the Prep in the opening game of the series.

Led by Bill Counselman and Joe Sullivan, St. John's jumped to a big lead in the early going and at half-time apparently had the game in the bag. But the Little Hoyas returned to action after the intermission to display a much-improved floor game, with Lloyd Rice, former Frederick, (Md.) High School star, acting as the key to the attack and gradually overtook the Johnnies.

A basket and a foul by Rice, two baskets by Hughes Spalding and fouls by Billy Dettweiler and Elkin Franklin, pulled the Prep up to 19-18 going into the final period. Rice sent the visiting team into the lead with a fast basket on a pass from Bob O'Shaugnessy and Spalding increased it to 21-19 with a free shot.

Deadlocked Again.

Counselman deadlocked the count again and Donohue put the Johnnies in the lead again at 23-21 with four minutes to play, only to have O'Shaugnessy net a snowbird for 23-all. Rice and Spalding tallied from the floor and Spalding from the foul line to put the game on ice in the closing minutes.

St. John's lost the game on foul shots, making good only one free toss in 11 chances, while the Garrett Parkers were netting enough gift shots to insure a triumph, netting 10 out of 17.

Wheat Values Slump Under Money Fears

Cotton Prices Show Slight Declines; Closes Off 9 to 11 Points.

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Violent disturbance of foreign exchange, together with tension over gold clause dilemmas, did much to smash wheat and corn prices down about 2 cents today.

Many stop-loss selling orders were forced into execution, and confidence of grain holders received a further jolt from the fact that the Winnipeg wheat market tumbled to the lowest officially permissible minimum. Late rallies overcame part of the losses here, but not until after corn had fallen to a bottom unmatched since November 15, last.

Wheat closed nervous, 1 cent to 1⅞ under Saturday's finish; May, 95⅝@95¾; corn, 1⅞@2 cents down; May, 83@83⅛; oats, ⅞@1⅜ off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 22 cents.

Owing especially to drastic upsets of British exchange rates, a rush of selling came into the Chicago wheat pit the moment trading began. Warmer weather, prevalent throughout domestic grain territory, served as a contributing bearish factor. Various trade authorities contended that would-be purchasers of grain were being kept out of the market not only by gold clause uncertainties at Washington, and by attendant disorder of foreign exchange, but by disturbing effects of possible reversal of Canadian government wheat marketing plans.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Moderate decline in cotton today was attributed to liquidation and foreign selling prompted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and the early weakness of foreign exchange.

Offerings were absorbed by scale down buying from the trade. The market closed steady at net declines of 9 to 11 points.

During the forenoon the market worked off 15 to 16 points on the active positions, but these levels inspired enough trade buying to cause a small rally.

Opening of More Than 1,000 New or Reorganized Banks Regarded With Mixed Feelings; Some Fear Institutions May Become Factor of Weakness.

(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

New York, Jan. 28.—The opening of more than a thousand new or reorganized commercial banks in various parts of the country during the past year is regarded with mixed feelings among metropolitan bankers.

It is generally admitted that these bank reopenings have had a stimulating effect upon business in the localities affected, and that in most instances reopenings have occurred in communities with inadequate banking facilities. Furthermore, nearly all the new commercial banks were formed through the reorganization of institutions that were not licensed after the bank holiday in March, 1933. Also, since the bulk of the institutions that were not licensed after the moratorium have now been reorganized or merged with other banks, the rate of new bank openings is likely to be much slower from now on.

On the other hand, the steady increase in the number of active commercial banks since March, 1933, is regarded with misgivings by some bankers who have long regarded the multiplicity of individual small institutions as a serious factor of weakness in the American banking structure. While the banks opened during the past two years have been almost entirely reorganized institutions, further restoration of financial confidence will soon lead to numerous promotions of entirely new banks, it is believed, especially if Federal and State authorities are liberal in granting new charters. The desire to foster credit expansion, and the real need for more adequate banking service that exists in many localities where bank suspensions were especially numerous before 1933, are held likely to make the authorities liberal in granting new charters.

Promotion of Banks Needed TO Replace Closed Institutions.

If the promotion of new banks should develop on a large scale to replace institutions which disappeared during the failure epidemic, it is feared that the country may at some future date face a repetition of the banking conditions that developed after 1929. During some future period of depression and deflation, the existence of numerous small, independent banks could once again threaten the stability and soundness of the Nation's financial structure.

In 1931, when the number of individual commercial banks reached a peak level, the total approximated 30,000. The number fell to less than 17,000 on the eve of the bank holiday in March, 1933, chiefly as a result of suspensions, but also because of consolidations and liquidations. At the close of the bank holiday, only 12,470 National and State banks were licensed to reopen, the smallest number of commercial banks this country has had for decades.

Almost 2,000 additional commercial banks reopened during the balance of 1933, however, under reorganization plans which were aided by purchases of preferred stock and capital notes of banks by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. During 1934 about 350 new national banks and more than 600 State banks were opened. Thus, the total number of commercial banks now licensed is approximately 15,300, about 1,500 fewer institutions than at the time of the bank holiday in 1933.

Banking Facilities Inadequate Now in Number of Localities.

Bankers who have regarded the steady increase in the number of commercial banks with misgivings do not deny that banking facilities at the present time are inadequate in a number of localities. This applies not only to many smaller communities throughout the country, where banks were swept away by the epidemic of suspensions, they say, but also many neighborhoods in larger cities do not now have sufficient banking service. However, the solution is held to be not the organization of numerous new small banks, but rather the extension of branch banking. This would permit the extension of new facilities by the opening of inexpensive offices by larger banks in these communities. Especially at a time of very low interest rates like the present, it is pointed out, it is difficult indeed for small, new banks to earn a reasonable rate of return on their capital. However, legal obstacles to an extension of branch banking have been relaxed in only a few States during the past two years. This factor, as well as natural caution of conservative bankers at this time, has prevented any material increase in the number of branch banking offices. Suspensions of some branch banks reduced the total number of branch offices of all commercial banks to 2,752 at the end of 1933, as compared with 3,191 at the end of 1932 and 3,334 at the end of 1931.

The establishment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the subscription of large amounts of new capital to the commercial banks by the R. F. C., have materially strengthened the Nation's banking structure for the time being. Many metropolitan bankers evidence doubt that a permanent strengthening of American banking is feasible, however, unless there is a lasting reduction in the number of individual banks and an increase in their average size. The fact that Federal and State authorities have authorized during 1934 the opening of a thousand new institutions, chiefly small ones, to replace those unlicensed after the bank holiday indicates no vigorous effort to keep down the number of banks and to encourage resort to branch banking as a substitute for opening new institutions is contemplated.

Bond Market Follows Stocks In Price Sags

Some Investments Resist Lower Trend; Sales, $10,919,000.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The bond market followed the generally lower trend in stocks and commodities today, although there were numerous exceptions in the prime investment class which clung stubbornly around recent high levels.

Financial quarters were credited with adopting a somewhat more cautious attitude in making commitments in view of the Supreme Court's decision in the gold clause cases likely to be handed down one week from today, and while offerings were never large, there was a scarcity of bids in the lower-priced groups and concessions of 1 to 2 points were frequently made in disposing of railroad, industrial and utility bonds.

Federals Lose Slightly.

Government issues were extremely narrow, with minor fractional losses predominating in the longer-term Treasury loans, home owners loan group and Liberties. The turnover, however, was extremely small, aggregating slightly more than $1,500,000 in sharp contrast to the heavy transactions in these bonds within the last two weeks.

Among corporate issues dropping 2 points or more were Alleghany 5s at 72, Interlaken Iron 5s at 78, New Orleans Public Service 5s at 65, and Portland Gas & Electric 4½s at 57. Losses of 1 to nearly 2 occurred in obligations of Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, Illinois Central, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, New York Central, Otis Steel, Pere Marquette, and Studebaker.

Averages Are Lower.

The Associated Press averages for 20 rails, 10 industrials and 10 utilities were .14 to .45 of a point lower.

High grade bonds were resistant and when losses did occur, they were of the fractional variety. Union Pacific First 4s were five-eighths higher at 109⅝, Union Oil of California 6s, up one-half at 117½, and New England Telephone 5s, up 1⅛ at 118⅛. Several issues of the Interboro Rapid Transit Co. were 1 to 2 points higher on reports of unification progress being made with city officials.

The foreign section was generally quiet. Some of the Scandinavian issues were higher while German obligations were mostly lower.

Transfers aggregated $10,919,000, par value, compared with $12,184,000 last Friday.

Indian Cotton Crop Reported Below Needs

Current Yield Is Called Smallest Since 1921-22; Look to Imports.

New York, Jan. 28.—The Indian cotton crop has recently been greatly reduced by unfavorable weather, and it appears that supplies of Indian cotton will be insufficient to satisfy the demand, according to a report issued today by the New York Cotton Exchange Service.

Stocks of Indian cotton in India at the end of December were much smaller than in recent previous years, and were so small as to suggest that spinners in foreign countries may be forced to curtail their use of Indian cotton and turn to other sources, probably the United States.

Cotton Crop Estimate.

"The Indian cotton crop is now estimated at about 4,800,000 bales of 400 pounds each, as compared with early-season estimates of about 6,000,000 bales," says the exchange service. "Last season, the Indian crop totaled 5,635,000 bales, and two seasons ago of 5,136,000 bales.

"With the exception of the 1931-32 season, when the Indian crop was 4,168,000 bales, the current crop is the smallest in 13 seasons, or since 1921-22.

Insufficient for Demand.

"Analysis of supply and distribution of Indian cotton in India to the end of December, using the new crop estimate in place of the former larger figure, indicates that supplies in India are sufficient to satisfy requirements for the anticipated domestic consumption and usual exports during the balance of this season.

"Indian mills are running at a high rate of activity and it is probable, therefore, that exports will be greatly reduced rather than consumption in India, and that foreign spinners outside of India will be forced to curtail their use of Indian cotton and turn to other growths, probably American."

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading started fairly active on the stock exchange today, execution of week-end buying orders hardening prices. Business, however, slackened later, and values slipped, especially gilt-edged securities, gold mining shares and industrials. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The new rise in the dollar and speculation on Premier Flandin's conversations with the British official in London this week disturbed tradinig on the Bourse today. Selling lowered prices except on citroen shares, which improved with the announcement of financial aid being assured. The closing was firmer.

Berlin—After a cheerful opening, prices on the Boerse closed sustained but at a generally lower level.

Steel Orders Continue to Gain; Output Rate Up to 53 Per Cent

Cleveland, Jan. 28.—Steel orders last week continued to increase in number and tonnage, accompanied by renewed pressure from automobile manufacturers for deliveries, raising the steelworks operating rate 2 points to 53 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

For the past eight weeks ingot output has expanded at an average of 3 points a week. The industry now is making steel at a rate 43 per cent higher than in all 1934. A considerable share of this improvement has come as a reaction from the low stage of stocks of materials and manufactured goods. Therefore, producers would not be surprised if the rate of gain should moderate. Steelworks scrap prices have experienced their first definite reaction since September.

Due to preponderance of automobile requirements, full-finished sheet output is up to 75 per cent, and strip steel to 65, while demand from container manufacturers sustains tin plate mills at 65 per cent. Two other props to heavy steel production, structurals and railroads, are conspicuously lacking.

More Autos Made.

The automobile industry last week made 69,000 cars, 3,000 more than in the preceding week. Ford, 'way in the lead and turning out 5,000 cars daily, has increased February schedules from 110,000 to 130,000, which would be its largest monthly production in nearly five years. Chevrolet's master models are expected off the assembly line next month, raising its output 50 per cent.

A leading maker wanted to place 50,000 tons of full-finished sheets in the Pittsburgh district last week, but unable to obtain shipment from that source before three weeks, purchased 20,000 tons for February.

Pending decision on many public works projects and new Government appropriations, structural steel requirements continue light, awards in the week amounting to 7,800 tons, down from 14,222 tons in the preceding week. Including 5,830 tons for the Los Angeles metropolitan water district and 1,000 tons for the Atlanta, Ga., housing project, concrete bar awards totaled 7,940 tons. The General American Tank Storage & Terminal Co., Chicago, placed 2,125 tons of plates for tanks at Houston, Tex.

Chemical and Oil Outlook.

From the chemical and oil industries considerable steel tonnage is expected this year. The chemical industry has authorized $100,000,000 expenditures for alterations and new plants, not far below the steel industry's own $125,000,000 new equipment appropriation. Need for modernizing many industrial plants is slowly opening up a huge reservoir of steel requirements.

Demand for durable goods is increasing moderately. Miscellaneous steel commitments in the week included many from machine tool builders. The Tennessee Valley Authority has ordered $800,000 worth of electrical equipment.

As nearly as builders have been able to determine, freight car awards this year will range between 25,000 and 50,000, compared with 23,829 last year. Railroads will have until 1938 to remodel or replace approximately 600,000 cars having arch-back trucks, a ruling by the Association of American Railroads banning exchange of these cars having extended the deadline to that year, instead of 1935. Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas is inquiring for 300 automobile cars.

January pig iron shipments are 50 to 60 per cent above those of December. Japan is reported inquiring for 50,000 tons.

The industry as a whole is a little less apprehensive of labor trouble, since the radical element is in revolt against the conservative leaders, and is trying to bring the radical smelter and mine workers' association into the amalgamated group, thereby reducing the union morale and diluting its leadership.

Steelworkers' operations in the Pittsburgh district last week advanced 5 points to 38 per cent. The Detroit district was up 29 points to 100 per cent; Wheeling, 5 to 95; Youngstown, 4 to 64; Chicago, 3 to 59; Buffalo, 2 to 44; Birmingham, 2½ to 31½; eastern Pennsylvania, 1 to 28½. Cleveland was down 3 to 79, while New England held at 68.

Steel's iron and steel price composite is off 2 cents to $32.60, due to the reduction in scrap; the finished steel index remains $54, while the scrap composite is down 17 cents to $12.08.

Frisco Road Reports Deficit Of $10,900,000

St. Joseph Lead Company Votes 10-Cent Dividend on Capital Stock.

St. Louis, Jan. 28 (AP).—The Frisco Railroad, in its preliminary report today, disclosed a 1934 deficit of $10,900,000.

The railway's balance of earnings available for interest and other charges for the full year was $853,926 less than in 1933, despite an increase of $1,158,197 in total revenues, with the result that it fell more than $10,000,000 short of earning interest on its bonds and other minor charges. It was the largest deficit reported by the railway during the depression.

The St. Louis Southwestern Line (cotton belt route) reported it fell short of meeting interest and other charges in 1934 by $1,145,436, compared with a $1,536,894 deficit in 1933. Total revenues for the year showed a gain, approximating $14,125,660, as against $12,953,394 in 1933.

St. Joseph Lead Co. declared a dividend of 10 cents on the capital stock, payable March 20 to stock of record March 8. Similar payments were paid in three previous quarters.

Stocks—Securities lost fractionally in a day of desultory trading. Lowered rail earnings offset any favorable reaction due to increased steel operations to 52.5 per cent of capacity. Sales, 695,710 shares.

Bonds—Loans followed stocks and commodities to lower ground. Some prime investments resisted the downward movement. Sales dropped in volume to $10,919,000.

Curb—A moderate reaction carried virtually every group to lower levels. Sales were up to 123,000 shares.

Wheat—Foreign exchange gyrations, coupled with gold clause apprehensions, depressed both corn and wheat prices. Winnipeg wheat tumbled to lowest permissible price. May wheat closed at 95½ and July at 88. May corn closed at 83.

Cotton—Liquidation and foreign selling were blamed for an unnerved market. Close was steady as the trade bought offerings from 9 to 11 points lower.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 2.80. Refined sold at 4.30 for fine granulated, also unchanged.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Santos, No. 4, sold at 11 and Rio, No. 7, at 9¼ unchanged.

Silver—Bar silver was ⅛ higher in New York at 54⅜ cents per ounce. In London it was firm at ⅛ penny higher, closing at 24¾ pence. (U. S. equivalent 54.08 cents per ounce.)

Gold—Bar gold sold in London at 2 pence lower. It closed at 141 shillings 6 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was firm in foreign exchanges. It sold in New York with reference to foreign currencies, $4.86¼ to the English pound, 6.53 cents to the French franc, and 39.75 cents to the German mark.

Capital Bank Installs Check Record Device

Film Machine Adds to Safeguards for Depositors, Officials Say.

By Karl von Lewinski.

The latest thing in protection for bank depositors is announced today by the McLachlen Banking Corporation, in the form of a photographic record of every check that passes through the bank.

Designed mainly as a safeguarding feature to furnish evidence of payment should the canceled check be lost or mislaid, the new system is designed also to speed up and simplify the accounting departments of the bank.

Manufactured by the Recordak Co., the apparatus records as many as 275 checks per minute on a motion picture film. The image of the check is reduced 32 times in the photographic process and placed on a 16-millimeter film.

Should a depositor wish to see any particular check that has passed through his account the photograph is thrown on a screen for inspection. If desired it is possible to obtain a reproduction of the check.

Officials of the bank asserted that the present trend toward keeping canceled checks in the place of receipted bills prompted installation of the new service.

B. & O. Net Income.

Net railroad operating income of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad dropped more than $5,000,000 in 1934, according to the annual report made public yesterday by R. M. Van Sant.

Net railway operating income in the past year amounted to $23,677,939, as compared with $28,849,201 reported during the year preceding. At the same time railway operating revenues increased nearly $4,000,000 during 1934 to $135,539,395. A total of $131,792,253 was reported during the year preceding.

The decrease in net income which was recorded in 1934, despite the increased gross, was laid in the report to the greatly increased operating expenses during the year. Operating expenses jumped nearly $9,000,000 from the total of $90,369,700 recorded in 1933 to last year's aggregate of $99,337,784.

In connection with the report, it is stated that the increase in the cost of fuel boosted expenses by approximately $2,500,000.

Restoration of a 2½ per cent pay cut last July required $850,000, and it is also estimated that the price of materials went up $1,000,000 during the year. Increased charges representing depreciation of equipment in 1934 over 1933 were placed at $1,600,000.

Washington Gas Light Co.

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co., filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon, shows net operating revenue for the month of December of $167,048 compared with $184,728 for December, 1933, a decrease of $17,680.

Operating revenues for December, $593,188, compare favorably with $556,252 for December a year ago, an increase of $36,938. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, increased $54,616, the 1934 figure being $426,140 as against $371,524 in December, 1933.

Interest deductions of $73,270 for December were $2,954 more than in December, 1933, resulting in a net income of $98,474 compared with $118,404 for December, 1933, a decrease of $19,930.

$410,240 Increase in 1934.

For the twelve months ended December 31, 1934, operating revenues showed an increase of $410,240 in reaching a total of $6,170,918.

Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, increased $375,281 to a total of $4,391,301, leaving a net operating revenue for the year 1934 of $1,779,617, an increase of $34,959 over the year 1933.

Nonoperating revenues increased from $47,329 to $84,645, producing a gross corporate income of $1,864,262 as against $1,791,987, an increase of $72,275 over 1933. Interest deductions, decreasing from $908,635 in 1933 to $852,815 in 1934, resulted in a net income for the year 1934 of $1,011,447, as compared with $883,352 for 1933, an improvement of $128,095.

Georgetown Gas Light Co.

The monthly report of the Georgetown Gaslight Co., also filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon, shows a net income of $3,688 as compared with $1,106 for December, 1933, an increase of $2,582.

Operating revenues in December, 1934, were $141,407 as against $134,359 a year ago, an increase of $7,048. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, increased $4,817, the figure being $134,665 against $129,848 for December, 1933.

Nonoperating revenue decreased $278 over 1933, resulting in a gross corporate income of $8,123, compared with $6,170 for December, 1933, an increase of $1,953. Interest deductions decreased $629, the 1934 figure being $4,435 against $5,064 for December, 1933.

Figures for the year ending December 31 indicate an increase of $100,948 in operating revenues, reaching a total of $1,361,912. Operating expenses, however, totaling $1,321,616 in 1934 against $1,208,360 in 1933 offset the improved revenue showing with an increase of $113,256, resulting in a $12,308 decrease in net operating revenue.

Nonoperating revenue for the year decreased $11,821 to a total of $8,295, resulting in a gross corporate income of $48,591 for 1934 as against $72,720 in 1933. Interest deductions totaled $58,003, an increase of $184, resulting in a net loss in 1934 of $9,412, compared with a net income of $14,901 in 1933.

Curb's Prices Close Lower in Larger Sale

All Groups Yield Ground; Trading Increases to 123,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—A moderate reaction carried the curb market into lower territory today. Trading volume continued restricted, with transfers at 123,000 shares, compared with 111,000 last Friday.

Virtually all groups yielded ground. The list opened fairly steady, but offerings appeared at the turn of the first hour. The markeet drifted in the later dealings.

Creole Petroleum, Newmont, International Petroleum and Electric Bond & Share were fairly steady spots, but losses of around 1 to 2 points were recorded by American Gas & Electric, Atlantic Coast Fisheries, Gulf Oil, Standard Oil of Ohio, A. O. Smith, Pepperell, Lynch Corporation, Parker Rust Proof and Lake Shore.

Richmond Markets.

Richmond, Jan. 28 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—Note—The prices quoted are those received by farmers and commission merchants for small lots sold to retail merchants and others. The live stock quotations cover carlot and less than carlot sales.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES—Receipts, moderate; market steady, some produce slightly higher, but market on bulk of sales unchanged. Cold weather retarding unloading and delivering of produce. No. 1 stock, white potatoes, 1.25 a hundred. Sweet potatoes, 1.25 a basket. Old stock cabbage, 1.50 a hundred, new crop scarce and little offered. Carrots, beets, kale and spinach higher at 2.00@2.25 a std. basket. Oranges, 3.25@4.00 a std. box including California stock. Grapefruits, 2.25@2.50 a box. Grapes, 2.25@2.50 a lug. Tomatoes, 3.00@4.00 a std. lug. No. 1 grade apples, 1.75@2.00 a std. basket.

BUTTER—Receipts, moderate; market steady and slightly higher; Virginia creamery butter in lb. carton packs, jobbing lots, 30 lbs. to the case at 38. Packing stock of good quality, 15@16.

EGGS—Local practically at a standstill due to cold wave, while receipts are very light, a shortage is also likely. A few cases of local eggs this morning sold at 30 a doz., but dealers not after large lots at over 29 a doz. expecting heavy receipts as soon as the weather moderates.

POULTRY—Receipts very light and a very small carry-over on hand. Shortage due to weather conditions, and prices are mostly premium prices. Leghorn hens, 14@15; colored hens, 17@18; chickens, 16@18; broilers, 18@20. Turkeys, steady, sound hens, 25@28; toms, 22. Ducks and geese (heavyweights), 16.

HOGS—Receipts moderate; early indications steady and unchanged at 8.00 top steady; strictly choice vealers to 10.00; for choice 200-250-pound butcher stock. Other classes, as to weight and quality.

CATTLE—Receipts rather light; quotable cows, 1.50@4.50, as to quality; bulls, 2.25@4.50, as to quality. Heifers, 3.50@6.50; grass-fed steers with some grain finish tradeable common to good, 3.50@7.50; strictly choice beavies quotable above 8.00.

SHEEP—Receipts moderate to light; steady; quotable 5.00@6.00 for average run of lambs. Ewes, 2.00@3.25.

BUT, MOTHER, MR. CRAFTEE'S HERE AND IF HE FINDS DENNIE IN THE NURSERY—
I CAN'T DO ANYTHING ABOUT IT NOW, JEAN. I'LL HAVE TO LET MR. CRAFTEE IN.
TELL DENNIE TO BE VERY QUIET. I'LL COME FOR HIM AS SOON AS I CAN.
PLEASE HURRY, MOTHER!
GEE, I'M GLAD YOU'RE BACK, JEAN.
SH-H, DON'T MAKE A SOUND, DENNIE. MR. CRAFTEE MIGHT HEAR YOU.
SOON AS MOTHER GETS AWAY, SHE'LL COME FOR YOU, AND WE'LL HAVE TO GET YOUR GRAN'MA TO TAKE YOU HOME!
I WISH GRAN'MA WAS HERE RIGHT NOW!

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Why, Mr. Browning! By Harry J. Tuthill

MOTHER, MR. BROWNING IS HERE. WHERE DID YOU PUT THAT ENVELOPE YOU FOUND SO I CAN GIVE IT TO HIM AND EXPLAIN?
OH IF YOU DON'T MIND, DARLING, I'D LIKE TO GIVE HIM THAT FLASHY LOOKING TRASH AND AT THE SAME TIME ASK HIM A FEW QUESTIONS ABOUT HIMSELF.
YES, MR. BROWNING, I "FOUND" THIS ENVELOPE WITH YOUR INITIALS ON IT IN THE HALL WHERE YOU "THOUGHT" YOU SAW A BURGLAR AND PUSHED MR. EL DORADO INTO...
OH MOTHER, YOU DROPPED ALL THOSE PAPERS.
I'LL PICK THEM UP.
THERE! THAT'S ALL OF— WHY WHAT'S THIS—? AND THIS?
OH THIS IS IMPOSSIBLE! AND YET— YES—IT IS THEM!
OH MRS. BUNGLE! HOW DID YOU EVER GUESS THAT I WANTED ALL THESE PAPERS? OH YOU'RE JUST—OH WONDERFUL!
WHY MR. BROWNING! HOW DARE YOU GRAB ME THAT WAY!
WHY SUCH NERVE! THE VERY IDEA OF YOU—
OH I'M SORRY—I MEAN—OH THERE ISN'T A MOMENT TO SPARE. I'LL BE BACK LATER AND TELL YOU HOW MUCH I APPRECIATE GETTING THESE PAPERS.

Walt Mason, Himself

New Year Vows.

The weakling always hedges upon his New Year pledges before he's journeyed far; he vows, on New Year morning that henceforth he'll be scorning the cabbage-leaf cigar; yet in a month he's smoking the weeds that keep us choking when we inhale the fumes, alfalfa panatellas that kill off gasping fellahs, and send them to their tombs. He has, alas, forgotten that stogies rank and rotten will turn his tonsils green, diseases dire will pin him, and all the works within him are stained with nicotine. He vows that he'll quit eating rich grub that's overheating, and stick to simple fare; he'll choose a frugal diet that won't create a riot beneath his underwear. He minds, on New Year morning, the doctor's urgent warning to cut out cakes and pies; he knows the prudent eater to green old age will teeter, while young the glutton dies. And so we hear him swearing that henceforth he'll be faring along with sheep and cows; he'll shun the loaves and fishes and all high seasoned dishes, and on green herbage browse. And now today we find him, his pledges all behind him, consuming hot mince pie; he says, "I'm tired devouring cheap victuals that are souring, methinks I'd rather die." It is in vain to coach him, it's folly to reproach him, we let him go his way; for we have driven wedges through all our New Year pledges, and haven't much to say.

$630,244,320 In New Stocks Filed With SEC

Financial and Investment Firms Top '34 Listings, Agency Reports.

Gross proceeds of new security issues registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the 1933 securities act during the last year totaled $630,244,320, it was announced yesterday by the regulatory agency.

The SEC revealed that new securities with total gross proceeds of $37,735,899, representing 24 issues registered in 17 statements, became effective in December under the securities act. Applications for registration of 93 per cent of this amount of securities came from financial corporations.

Financial and investment companies led the field in the registration of security issues for the whole year, also. They filed 98 statements, registering $377,618,220 of securities, or 59.9 per cent of the aggregate. Public utilities as a group ranked second, with securities totaling $114,428,237, or 18.2 per cent of the aggregate. Manufacturing industries, issuing $88,164,037 of securities, were in third place.

These figures were regarded as indicating the lethargic condition of the capital issues market. The general uncertainty regarding future economic developments and the rigid requirements of the regulations under the 1933 securities act were held to be responsible for this condition.

Since the first of the year, the SEC has revised the requirements which seasoned, going enterprises must meet in registering securities. Already the changes have been hailed with satisfaction by the financial community and as soon as the gold-clause cases pending before the Supreme Court are definitely settled, a large volume of new issues is expected to come before the commission.

Strange as it seems, the most deadly snake poisons are quite harmless—and the most common of foods are quite deadly; it all depends on how they are administered. The poison of a snake will do no harm if it is taken through the mouth, it is poisonous only when it is injected into the blood stream.

Snake poison is a salivary secretion, it is harmless when taken orally, it is tasteless and colorless, and can scarcely be distinguished from water. You can drink it without suffering harm, unless there is a scratch on the inside of the mouth which might admit a little of the venom to the blood stream. Snake venom, taken into the stomach, is rendered harmless by gastric juices which break down its highly complicated chemical structure.

In that respect this poison is a little like ordinary milk. If milk is injected into the blood it may cause death.

Under the laws of William III of England you had to pay to be born, and you had to pay to die. Taxes on births ranged from $1 for a commoner to $150 for a duke; on deaths from $1 for a commoner to $250 for a duke.

Parley Is Seen To Settle Fate Of Motor Code

Auto Labor and Makers Expected to Meet; NRA Pact Dies Friday.

Representatives of automobile manufacturers and of automobile workers will be called into conference before final decision on renewal of the automobile code is reached, Donald R. Richberg, New Deal coordinator, indicated yesterday after a long conference with President Roosevelt.

Working against time—the code expires Friday — the President, Richberg, Secretary Perkins, S. Clay Williams, chairman of the National Industrial Relations Board, and Leon Henderson, a member of the board, went over the situation in detail. Later it was announced that no decision had been reached.

It is understood that the conference had before it a report, made under Henderson's direction at the request of the President, covering labor conditions in the industry. President Roosevelt indicated last week that the report would be made public this week. It was said that plans at NRA for making it public yesterday were suddenly halted.

While Richberg would make no statement, it was believed that the code may be renewed temporarily with a promise to labor that an immediate investigation of its demands will be made and the code revised if the demands are found to be justified. It was doubtful, however, if this arrangement will be satisfactory to labor representatives who are strongly protesting the working hour provisions of the code.

The other possibility is that the code may be allowed to lapse, pending possible revisions. Richberg expressed the opinion that if the code is allowed to lapse the automobile labor board set up by the President last spring will not be affected. Representatives of the American Federation of Labor, however, already have withdrawn from membership on the board. Manufacturers are contending that A. F. of L. members comprise only a small percentage of the workers in the industry.

Uruguay Army Fights Revolts

Insurrection Flares Over Land; Montevideo Claims Control.

Montevideo, Uruguay, Jan. 28 (AP). Insurrection against the dictatorial regime of President Gabriel Terra flared at a dozen interior points in Uruguay today as the government placed the country's volunteer army of 18,000 in strategic positions.

Numerous clashes between rebels and soldiers were reported at various places and the army was deployed carefully to suppress repeated outbursts.

The government claimed the situation was well in hand. Montevideo itself was quiet, but there were numerous political arrests.

Led by elements of the Batllista political party, named for its old Spanish founders, and the Independent Nationalist Party, the chief revolutionary activity was in northern and western portions of Uruguay, the smallest South American nation.

Groups of rebels each numbering from 50 to 2,000 clashed with troops in several places.

The Herrerista branch of the Independents which supported President Terra following the coup of March, 1933 (the Batllistas and other Independents opposed him) issued a proclamation of adherence to the dictatorial government.

Services Are Held For Admiral Coontz

Bremerton, Wash., Jan. 28 (AP).—Three volleys crashed in salute today at the military funeral of Admiral Robert E. Coontz as the Navy bade farewell to its former commander in chief.

Capt. T. B. Thompson, Chaplain Corps, officiated at services for the 70-year-old retired admiral, who died Saturday at the Puget Sound Navy Yard hospital after a series of heart attacks.

The body will be taken to Hannibal, Mo., the admiral's home town for burial Friday. Committal services there will be in charge of James E. Van Zandt, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

GOVERNMENT employes will lose from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 in the compromise on pay restoration as of April 1 instead of January 1. The compromise passed the Senate yesterday, attached to the deficiency bill for the Federal Communications and Federal Securities Exchange Commissions.

BAKER.

Originally containing an amendment by Senator McCarran providing restoration as of January 1, the date was changed under an amendment by Senator Byrnes to April 1. This was said to meet the approval of the White House.

Being an emergency measure, and with the pay rider reported acceptable to the President, it is expected to pass the House today.

Expressions of disappointment mingled with those of elation, were heard from employe leaders.

"I am very much disappointed that we did not get restoration as of January 1," declared E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes. "But, of course, I am very happy to get the restoration as of April 1 as this will mean considerable to Government employes."

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, said:

"It is a source of distinct gratification to the National Federal of Federal Employes that this decisive step has been taken to right an injustice and an economic fallacy. The National Federation extends thanks both to President Roosevelt and to the legislators who have made this adjustment possible.

"It is to be regretted, of course, that April 1 instead of January 1 was fixed as the date for full restoration of pay. However, the need for restoration was so great, and the hardships borne by Federal employes for the past three years have weighed so heavily, that the best interests of the hundreds of thousands of workers involved dictated reasonable compromise."

A high-speed signal receiving system for radio has been introduced by its inventor, James M. Kane (F), Navy.

Luther C. Steward, jr., son of the president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and Miss Margaret Mary Mattare, of Washington, were married yesterday. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Louise Mattare and niece of Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer of the NFFE. The couple left immediately after the ceremony for a honeymoon at Atlantic City.

The U. S. National Museum announces an exhibition of drypoints by Ralph L. Boyer, of Westport, Conn., from January 28 to February 24 in the Smithsonian Institution Building.

CHARTER has been issued to Local Union No. 517, Toledo, Iowa, it was announced last night by Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer, National Federation of Federal Employes. All members of the new local are employes of the Office of Indian Affairs, Interior, and are stationed at the Sac and Fox Sanatorium in Toledo.

In announcing the chartering of the 517th local of NFFE, Miss McNally declared that locals throughout the country are reporting the best membership gains of any period during the past five years and that the membership of the organization as a whole now is above the 60,000 mark.

FHA Joins Movement.

Federal Housing Administration will be well represented at the President's Birthday Ball at the Mayflower Hotel tonight, according to Frank J. P. Haske, chairman of the box and ticket committee at FHA. Many members of the Diplomatic and Capitol Hill Corps are expected to attend. Assisting Mr. Haske in distributing tickets at FHA are:

Mrs. Faith Owens, Joseph Ginberg, Richard Henschel, Mrs. Vera Bloise, Charles O'Neil, L. W. Burton, Miss Frankie Allison, Mrs. Virginia Nowell, Miss Lucille Lennox (P), Miss Tilloah Squire, Charles Batterden, Miss E. E. Holley, Miss Katherine Ford, Orville Talburtt, Miss Lucille Laude, Mrs. Lottie Warner, Miss Alice Foy, Mrs. Ruth Witherell, Mrs. B. A. Rees, Cornelius Bretsch, John Holden, Taylor McCauley (F), Capt. William Swarthout and Paul Best.

That Ticket No. 1.

A. E. Giegengack, Public Printer, has the honor of purchasing the coveted ticket No. 1 to the President's Birthday Ball at the Shoreham Hotel tomorrow night. The sale was made by Dr. George C. Havenner, member of the President's ball ticket committee and one of the leaders in the Warm Springs Foundation. Ticket No. 2 was purchased by Miss Jo Coffin, Assistant to the Public Printer.

It is not surprising that these honors should go to Government Printing Office as that agency is preparing to repeat its own President's Birthday party in Harding Hall that was inaugurated so successfully last year. While Mr. Giegengack formally indorsed the G. P. O. celebration at the same time he bought the Shoreham ticket from Dr. Havenner, the full importance of his purchase was overlooked. This supplementary explanation is expected to clear up the confusion caused by the lines under the photograph in this column Sunday.

Matthew W. Stirling, chief, Bureau of American Ethnology, and Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., archeologist of the same bureau, have been appointed second vice president and associate editor, respectively, of the American Anthropological Association.

WHILE Congress is pondering the restoration of the 5 per cent pay, we hope the members will read the following letter, typical of many received daily by The Post on the so-called economy act:

"• • • There are five persons in my family, my husband, three children under 12, and myself. My husband is a shell-shocked World War veteran who was cut entirely off the disability allowance roll October 31, 1933, not that he isn't mentally disabled, but because of presumptive service connection. He was getting less than $50 a month. Just enough to cover his own room and board.

"I am employed in the Government; was getting $1,620 temporary position, and set back to $1,440 in order to be kept on. Then the 5 per cent cut, 3½ per cent retirement. House rent takes nearly half. We can not have any dental work done or get any new clothing. We have only the bare necessities of life. I ask you do we need the 5 per cent?

"Clothing and food, the kind working people must have, in other words, the ordinary kind, are 'way up. Life insurance and doctors and medicine. We pay as much as the rich. If you have ever come in contact with a shell-shocked person, you will know that no amount of money could repay the hardships one has. Why not give the men who were on the firing line the benefit of the doubt?
